10 POLICEMEN DIE BY BOMB

MEAT PROFITS FIXED BY U. S. AT 9 PER CENT

Lower, More Stable Prices to Be the Result.

BIG RAIL POOL

United States war officials and railroads war board agreed at a conference in Washington yesterday to pool all railway systems east of Chicago in order to avert a serious traffic crisis. The full story of this remarkable war move and the official statement of the war chiefs concerning this revolutionary and law-defying move will be found on page 4.

The first step to regulate the packers has been taken. That the packing industries are to be forged into one of the big weapons of the United States government in winning the war was indicated in the statement issued yesterday by Joseph P. Cotton, chief of the meat division of the United States food administration, outlining the policy of the food administration to the packers.

Mr. Cotton will have complete control of packers, big and little. The profit of the meat business must in no case exceed 2.5 per cent of the sales—that is, of the money obtained through sales of meat not over 2½ cents out of each dollar can go to profit. Moreover, the annual earnings of the meat business of the five big packers is subject to an additional limit. It cannot exceed 9 per cent on the average capital necessarily used in the business.

Prices to Be Cheaper.

The system to be adopted, the statement says, is meant to abolish speculative gains and prevent unfair profits, so that the price of meat to the retailer and consumer will be both stable and cheaper. Detailed rules and regulations are to be issued to define the general principles outlined and to prevent diversions or concealment of profits, the packers' accounts being subject to constant scrutiny. Small packers are to be protected from the larger. Adjustment of pork prices at the expense of beef or mutton is not permitted, or vice versa.

Statement by Cotton.

Mr. Cotton's statement in part follows:

"The system to be adopted by the food administration for restricting the earnings of the packers is meant to abolish speculative profits and to prevent unfair profits, so that the prices of meat to the retailer and consumer may be stable and cheaper.

"There are in the country hundreds of packing concerns, many of them small, which slaughter live stock and sell meat, but which are not large enough or strong enough to carry great stocks, nor do they carry their manufacturing processes in connection with live stock products to great refinements.

"There are, however, five concerns relatively much larger, which have many establishments, storage plants, branch houses, cars and facilities for nation-wide distribution.

Protect Small Packer.

"It is essential that the smaller packer shall continue his operations to the fullest extent, and his earnings, in view of his risk, must be liberal. The system of regulation which restricts his earnings must be simple and easy to apply. After investigation and consideration it has been determined to permit the packers (except the five large packers whom we shall speak of in a moment) to earn an annual profit equal to 2.5 per cent on their total sales. This profit is to be net after expenses are paid; interest on money borrowed will be treated as an expense, but expenses do not include federal taxes, which the packer must pay himself out of his profits. Regulations will be so drawn.

"The five large packers stand in a different class. They have important and vital services to perform for the national government in this war. Upon them rests the burden of preparing the bulk of the meat food products which our allies and our armies require. They must become national agencies for war service. They are, with such help as we will require from the smaller packers, to be called on

GOOD FELLOWS: YOUR DAY NEAR; DO YOUR DUTY!

GOOD FELLOWS! Your hour has struck again. This is the time for your annual reunion. One month from today thousands of youngsters will wake up expectantly and look into ragged stockings. Will they be full of Christmas or will they be full of gloom?

All of you have been buying Liberty bonds and giving to the Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. and navy relief, and in every way helping Uncle Sam and his soldiers and sailors. But in this time of national distress, we should more than ever remember the little duffers of the dismal corners of the city. For it is to be even more dismal for some of them, with father away to war.

More gloom has been dispersed in the last eight Christmases than the first Good Fellow hoped for when he came to THE TRIBUNE with his big idea. Nearly 70,000 Good Fellows have responded during those years—many of them repeating year after year—and Santa Claus is no longer a disappointing fairy tale to the poor kids of Chicago.

This Good Fellow is not a charity. No man can be a real Good Fellow on Christmas eve and fail to be happier on Christmas day. He has brought cheer to the poor home and by the same act he has chased gloom from his own heart.

It's a purely personal affair with you. It doesn't matter how much you spend. It may be much or little. The principal thing is to call on those kids with a package—a toy or two, some candy and nuts, something to make their Christmas real.

This is the way the first Good Fellow put it to all Good Fellows:

Neither you nor I get anything out of this except the feeling that you have saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. If that is not enough for you, then you have wasted time in reading this—it is not intended for you, but for the Good Fellows of Chicago.

Perhaps a 25 cent doll or a 10 cent toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the child who would find them in the otherwise empty stocking they mean much—the difference between utter disappointment and the joy that Santa Claus did not forget them.

Here is where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and meat, the clothes, the necessaries; you and the rest of the good fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candy—the child's real Christmas.

There you have the whole scheme. Don't send in money. Send in your name and address. Let us know how many children you will be Santa Claus to and we shall send you their names, ages, and addresses. Or telephone Central 100 and ask for the Good Fellow bureau. Or call at room 1106 Tribune building.

Everything else you must do yourself. Pick out your gifts. Take them to the children. Be a Good Fellow of the new school. If you haven't been there before try out this new Christmas spirit and see what it does to the corners of the mouths of ragged youngsters.

Again—DON'T SEND MONEY. THE TRIBUNE feels free to ask your wholehearted coöperation in this Christmas duty—even you who have helped the Kits Fund for Soldiers and the Tobacco fund and the endless other funds. It's a time when the more you do the more there is to do.

FRENCH AIRMEN DESTROY 1,000 AEROS IN YEAR

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Nov. 24.—French airmen this year have destroyed more than a thousand German aeroplanes.

French areoplanes have brought down 120 enemy machines behind the French lines; 397 behind the enemy lines. Listed as "probably destroyed" were 513 others. Twenty-two observation balloons were likewise wrecked in this same period.

The Lafayette escadrille, composed of Americans, now about to be included in Gen. Pershing's forces, have done a large share of this fighting.

Climbs from Useless Plane and Volplanes to Safety

Belleville, Ill., Nov. 24.—J. L. Simpson, a cadet at the aviation field near here, lost control of an aeroplane when 1,500 feet above the ground today. As the aeroplane started to fall Simpson turned it clear over, and, climbing on top of the under side, he volplaned to the ground. The machine was wrecked and Simpson was injured but slightly.

BLAST WRECKS CITY STATION IN MILWAUKEE

Detectives Killed as They Toy with Explosive.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Ten detectives and a woman were instantly killed here tonight when a black hand bomb exploded in the central police station. Five detectives and a lieutenant of police were seriously hurt. The station was wrecked.

The explosion is believed to be the result of a church feud in the Third ward, which is the home of a large Italian population. Threats have been made against the Rev. Mr. Gulliani, pastor of the Italian Evangelical church, and threats also that the church building would be destroyed.

A report from the Third ward neighborhood that a bomb had been found in the basement of the church was received by the police this evening. Detectives McKinney and Maloney were dispatched to bring it to headquarters. They had just left the station when they met a man named Mazuinni carrying the bomb. He had thought to save the police a trip and bore the explosive carelessly in his hand.

Examine Bomb Curiously.

Once in the station the bomb was laid upon a table in the squadroom. Mazuinni was taken into the office of Lieut. Robert Flood for examination. In the room with the bomb was Henry Deckert, the desk sergeant, and Edward Spindler, the operator.

Upstairs a squad of detectives were preparing to go on duty. They started downstairs. When part way down, the word was passed to them that the much vaunted Italian bomb had been found. The men gathered about the table upon which the thing lay. It was made of an iron pipe about a foot in length and almost eight inches in diameter. What seemed to be a small vial of nitroglycerin protruded from one end.

One of the detectives made a movement with the bomb and it exploded.

THE DEAD POLICEMEN.

S. H. Stecher,	Fred W. Kayser,
Charles Seehawer,	Frank Caswin,
David O'Brien,	Herman Bergin,
Albert Templin,	Edward Spindler,
Paul Weiler,	Henry Deckert.

All are detectives except Spindler, who was an operator, and Deckert, a desk sergeant.

The woman who lost her life in the explosion was Miss Catherine Walker, employed in the Otto Pietsch Dye works. She had just entered the statio to make complaint of a robbery. She saw the detectives coming down the stairway, and, seeing the bomb, remained to see what it was all about.

THE INJURED.

Robert Flood,	Martin Fallen,
Jack Hannifin,	Bart Maloney,
Louis Hartman,	Charles Andrews.

Flood is a lieutenant, Andrews, the station keeper, and the other four are detectives.

Lieut. Flood and Mazuinni were in the lieutenant's private office when the explosion occurred. Flood was bruised and cut by broken glass. He was thrown to the floor and was picked up out of a mass of wreckage. Mazuinni was not badly injured. Every door and window in the building was blown out and the interior completely destroyed.

Blown Across Street.

Detective Hannifin was just leaving the building. He was blown almost across the street.

Chief John Janssen had left the station an hour before. He was summoned and immediately returned and took charge of the relief work. The bodies were taken from the wrecked station and removed to the sheriff's office across the street. The press of people about this building became so great that police lines became necessary.

Believe Bomb Timed.

Chief Janssen's investigation showed that the explosion occurred at exactly 7:37 o'clock. This led him to suspect that the bomb had been timed for an explosion at the opening of services in the Italian Evangelical church. What was at first thought by Lieut. Flood to be a small vial of nitroglycerin was considered by the chief to be a part of a time fuse, set to wreck a church filled with communicants.

The discovery of the bomb in the church was made early in the day, it was reported to the chief. It was first

'HALT OR BE SHOT,' ORDER IN GOTHAM BARRED ZONE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—Regulations under which the New York water front will go under military guard Sunday midnight to bar alien enemies, were announced tonight by the department of justice, acting under President Wilson's recent alien enemy proclamation. Similar regulations will be applied to other coast and lake ports as soon as soldiers are available.

The soldiers will be armed with loaded rifles and will have instructions to shoot all persons, aliens, or citizens, entering the barred zone 100 yards from piers, docks, and warehouses, unless identified by special private guards to be supplied by pier owners.

Blue uniforms will be worn by the soldiers to distinguish them from other military forces, and to lessen the danger of accidental shooting of persons claiming ignorance of the guard's identity.

Alien enemies, under the president's proclamation, may not enter the prohibited zones under any circumstances, and must move out if they already have business or residence places within the 100 yard limit. By this strict system of patrol the government hopes to eliminate the possibility of enemy plotters causing fires and explosions on piers and in water front warehouses.

Any alien enemy found within the zone for any reason whatever will be arrested and probably interned for the period of the war. Permits previously granted to Germans to enter water front zones are revoked. The restriction, however, does not apply to public ferries.

GERMANS STRIP U. S. CITIZENS AND BEAT THEM

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Nov. 24.—Refugees from Palestine report that the Turks, in coöperation with the Germans, are committing the most fearful atrocities upon the Jewish colonies in Palestine.

All the leading men of the Jewish colony at Jaffa were accused of espionage last month and on false evidence or on confessions extorted by torture were convicted by a German court martial and hanged with many members of their families, refugees declare.

In order to extort confessions, it is added, many men and women, including some American citizens, have been stripped and beaten in public, some so severely as to cause death.

DARING NAVAL GENIUS PUT ON SHIPPING BOARD

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Rear Admiral Frederic R. Harris, corps of civil engineers, U. S. N., has been appointed by the president to succeed Rear Admiral Washington L. Capps as general manager of the shipping board, emergency fleet corporation.

Admiral Harris has been engaged in many important engineering projects for the government. In 1910 an attempt to build a dry dock in the quicksand at the navy yard, New York, resulted in disaster by failure of two contractors. The abandonment of the work as impossible was seriously considered. Admiral Harris volunteered to undertake the completion of the dock, which he accomplished.

In January, 1916, he became chief of the bureau of yards and docks, in his forty-first year, the youngest bureau chief and officer holding the rank of rear admiral in the navy.

NEW YORK BOMB SQUAD ARRESTS ARCTIC EXPLORER

New York, Nov. 24.—Capt. Frank E. Kleinschmidt, widely known as an arctic explorer, was arrested here tonight by detectives attached to the "bomb squad" on the technical charge of having violated the law by having a revolver in his possession.

The detectives seized a trunk in which they said they found the revolver, a dirk and a quantity of papers. In the trunk also was a scrap book containing newspaper clippings, one of which showed a picture of Capt. Kleinschmidt with a group of uAstrian officers about to make an escent in a dirigible balloon over the war front.

Capt. Kleinschmidt was arraigned and released on $500 bail for a further examination tomorrow night.

U. S. SHIPS CAPTURE 40 OF CREW AS U-BOAT SINKS

TOWNS SEIZED ON OUTSKIRTS OF CAMBRAI

British Make Further Gains as Result of Big Fight.

[BY THE UNITED PRESS.]

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Nov. 24.—Gen. Byng's guns were battering down German defenses within two miles of Cambrai tonight.

His men were fighting their way onward despite a concentration of German reserves that fairly flooded the depot city. The fighting was the most desperate since the great surprise attack of Wednesday morning.

Early in the day the British hurled the enemy back upon Fontaine Notre Dame. The village was a hollow shell of ruins, smoking and burning. Fighting is going on in the streets.

Hard Battle in Woods.

Close by Byng's men swept over Bourlon wood. Its trees were splintered in the rain of shellfire, its artfully concealed German observation towers shattered and captured.

A number of fierce counter attacks were made by the Germans on Bourlon wood tonight. The British line was forced to withdraw slightly, but later in the day the line was reëstablished and the high ground held.

Late tonight Bourlon village, just beyond the wood, was still resisting. Desperate fighting was reported there.

Win Lines at Moeuvres.

At Moeuvres the two armies clinched and swayed in the battle. Then the British doggedly battered the enemy lines and won them.

As this is written the enemy is falling back on Pronville—a suburb of Cambrai—fighting desperately but steadily forced to give way.

British Tommies, using the enemy guns against the Germans, were reported at several points, illustrating the speed of the British onslaught. At one point two enemy 77s were seized from the Germans, their carriages twisted around and the fire from their two throats so speeded against the enemy by the British gunners that the muzzles glowed red-hot and jammed the shells.

Tanks Again Play Part.

The tanks continued their marvelous exploits today. At Bourlon wood they crawled into action and swept onward through the forest. Smaller trees and saplings were crushed under their giant sides as a field of rye straw is battered down by giant terrapins. Their flashing guns incincerated the forest.

Behind them came infantry, rapidly mopping up the snipers and taking prisoners.

Fontaine Notre Dame was swept over by the tanks. They plodded ponderously down the main street of the village, terrifying the Germans by their hail of fire. They crunched up to within a few feet of heavily fortified buildings to send their flaming breath into the German loopholes. Bullets rattled harmlessly off their sides.

BRITISH PUSH NORTHWARD.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Hard fighting continued in the battle of Cambrai on Saturday, with the British pushing determinedly northward on the Fontaine-Queant line, west of Cambrai.

Unofficial reports late in the day indicated the probability that Gen. Byng's troops had wrested possession of the hotly disputed Bourlon wood from the Germans and had recaptured the town of Moeuvres. The village of Fontaine, less than three miles from Cambrai, was reported in flames, suggesting the probability of an impending German retirement from that place.

The Germans are resisting desperately the British advance, which is being pressed most energetically on this east to west front. Gen. Byng's evident intention is to drive in behind the main Hindenburg line, breached in Tuesday's surprise attack, and the Queant-Drocourt switch line, while still pushing his encircling movement of Cambrai to the north and east. The British have pushed considerably to the northwest of Moeuvres, however, and are hammering at Inchy, which the Germans are battling determinedly to retain.

Germans, to Prevent Seizure of Vessel, Destroy It.

Dispatches received from Washington and London last night told what apparently was the story of the end of two German submarines. In some details the two stories coincide and appear to describe the same incident. In others they conflict. The Washington story says forty prisoners were taken, but that the Germans destroyed their own craft. The London report asserts the U-boat was destroyed by depth bombs, there being no survivors.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—A German submarine captured recently by two American destroyers was sent to the bottom by members of the crew opening cocks below while their shipmates stood on deck with hands raised in signal of surrender.

All of the crew were taken prisoners. One of the Germans was drowned and another died. The latter was buried with military honors.

Secretary Daniels announced the capture and sinking of the submarine today in a formal statement which made no mention of prisoners nor of the reason for the boat sinking. The details reached the public later, but the secretary would neither confirm nor deny them, saying he had issued the statement in agreement with the British admiralty and could not add to it.

Forty Prisoners Taken.

There was a report in naval circles that approximately forty men, including five officers, were taken off the submarine. If this were true, it was pointed out, the vessel undoubtedly was one of the largest of the cruiser type known authentically to be operated by the Germans.

The action occurred in the war zone several days ago and the submarine went down while one destroyer was attempting to tow it to port.

Although the British policy is to publish nothing in such cases, an agreement was reached between the navy department and the British admiralty to give out certain facts which Secretary Daniels announced today in a brief statement.

Officers of both the war and navy departments, however, were too elated over the news to keep it quiet. First the report spread that some prisoners had been taken, and before the day was over the story of just what happened was out.

Steering Gear Is Broken.

Mr. Daniels' statement said a destroyer on patrol duty, sighting a periscope at 400 yards, headed for it and dropped a depth bomb; that the submarine came to the surface soon afterward and was fired upon by two destroyers, a second having come up; that the submarine, apparently damaged, did not return the fire, and sank immediately after one destroyer had taken it in tow.

It is now known that the submarine rose because the steering gear was put out of commission by the explosion of the depth bomb. As it appeared above the water to meet the gunfire from the destroyers at close range most of the crew clambered on deck and raised their hands.

Seacocks Are Opened.

Boats put off from the destroyer to take the prisoners on board and while this was going on some members of the crew were busy opening the seacocks below. When the prisoners were removed and a tow line had been attached the captured craft, filling through the open cocks, went down.

The aggressive tactics pursued by the commanders of the American destroyers in this instance furnish a striking illustration of the spirit in which Admiral Sims' fighting forces are going after the U-boats.

They do not hesitate a second on sighting a periscope, a torpedo, the wake of a torpedo or any sign of the presence of a submarine. So long as there is the slightest chance that a U-boat is in the vicinity the hunt is continued.

Formal Statement Issued.

The formal statement which was issued by Secretary Daniels follows:

"Dispatches received from Admiral Sims state that a German U-boat has been accounted for by American destroyers operating in European waters. While on patrol duty a destroyer sighted a periscope 400 yards off. Immediately ringing up full speed ahead the commanding officer headed his craft to pass a few yards ahead of the submarine. As the destroyer passed over the U-boat's course, a depth charge was dropped. This evidently caused damage to the U-boat which shortly afterward came to the surface about 500 yards away.

"Fire was immediately opened on the submarine by two of our destroyers which circled about their target.

"The submarine did not return the fire and was evidently disabled. One of the destroyers got a line to it, intending to tow it, but the boat soon sank."

ANOTHER U-BOAT SUNK.

BASE OF THE AMERICAN FLOTILLA IN BRITISH WATERS, Nov. 24.—The American destroyers which were responsible for the latest sinking of a German submarine have returned to their base with flags flying. Their victory over the U-boat was one of the cleanest, neatest, and quickest pieces of anti-submarine work yet recorded by the American squadron.

The submarine was disabled by a depth charge, rose to the surface three minutes after the charge was fired hung hesitatingly at the surface for a moment, and then sank to the final place of lodgment at the bottom of the sea.

Bubbles Mark Grave.

The pressure of water at the 200 foot depth at which it sank soon completed the work of destruction on the strained plates of the submarine's hull. For a long time bubbles and oil continued to rise in great gulps from the grave where it lay, and then the Americans made assurance complete in a manner of which it is unnecessary to go into detail.

It was daylight, with good visibility, when the periscope was sighted by the lookout of a destroyer, which, with a sister craft, was engaged in its customary duties. The submarine commander was just preparing to fire a torpedo, either at one of the destroyers or at a merchantman nearby.

Action Follows Alarm.

"Periscope two points off starboard bow," sang out a lookout in a voice which could be heard from end to end of the craft. Instantly an alarm to general quarters was sounded and the helm thrown hard over.

Signal flags were swung out notifying the sister ship of the exact location of the enemy. At the same time the heliograph began its staccato flashing of orders for a combined attack.

A scant eighteen inches of periscope had shown above the surface of the sea 400 yards distant for a few instants and then vanished. In less time than it takes to tell, the destroyer, under the impetus of suddenly opened throttles, had fairly leaped into the track where the periscope had disappeared.

300 Pound Charge Sunk.

At the proper moment the commander on the bridge released a depth charge from its fixed place. The powerful explosive, 300 pounds in weight, in its steel case sank with a little splash into the destroyer's wake and at the regulated depth responded to the bidding of its valves and burst in a terrific explosion. A vast extent of water was upheaved and rose in a column to a great height. That the charge had found its mark was shown by a mass of oil and bubbles which marked the spot as the water found its level.

Meanwhile a second destroyer passed through the boiling, oily waters and dropped a second depth charge, and then followed the tactics of the first destroyer in circling the spot. The two destroyers did not have long to wait. In less than three minutes there was a rush of water and the U-boat, whalelike, came to the surface not more than 500 yards from the first destroyer.

Guns Trained on Wreckage.

The Americans were taking no chances on a German trick. The gun crews stood with their guns, machine guns, and torpedo tubes trained on the enemy, ready to let loose a shower of steel in case the submarine showed fight. But the U-boat was badly stricken; the explosion charge had done its work thoroughly. Although the upper part of the boat appeared to have been untouched, it was evident from its actions that the submarine was unmanageable. It was badly listed, owing to the damage to its ballast tanks, and it was apparent that the steering gear and probably also the engines had jammed.

The three minutes which elapsed between the time the depth charges were fired and the time the submarine emerged, as if catapulted, provide food for interesting speculation. It is probable it was driven to the bottom by the force of the explosion, but retained enough buoyancy to rise to the surface.

Final Sinking Rapid.

But by the time it reached the open air the strain had done its work and it hung on the surface of the water only for a moment and then began to settle again, at first hesitatingly, soon with evidence of complete collapse.

During that brief period, several American sailors jumped into the sea in an effort to get the prize buoyed up with hawsers so it could be towed to port. One line was fastened to the submarine successfully, but before it could be reinforced it gave a final lurch and sank like a plummet.

U. S. STEAMER SUNK

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—The American steamer Schuylkill has been torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean. The navy department was advised today that forty men of its crew had been landed at a Mediterranean port. There was no naval armed guard aboard. The steamer formerly was in service on the great lakes.

Whether there was loss of life was not known here, but it was assumed that the forty men rescued comprised the Schuylkill's complete complement. Secretary Daniels made this announcement:

"The navy department is in receipt of advices that forty of the crew of the American steamer Schuylkill, which had been torpedoed, have been landed at a Mediterranean port. No navy men were aboard."

Both German and Austrian submarines are operating in the Mediterranean, but so far as known the nationality of the submarine which sank the Schuylkill was not determined.

Carried Valuable Cargo.

New York, Nov. 24.—The American steamship Schuylkill left here Oct. 13 for Piraeus, Greece, with a cargo of miscellaneous merchandise valued at about $1,500,000. The vessel was a former lake steamer of 2,206 tons gross, built in Cleveland in 1892. She was reported passing Gibraltar about five days ago.

Only One Man Survived.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—News was received today confirming reports that the freight steamer Maine had been sunk on Wednesday, eight miles from Dieppe. All of the twenty-five officers and men on board were lost with the exception of one sailor. The entire crew comprised seamen from Dieppe.

ITALIANS BREAK HEAVY ATTACKS ON NORTH LINE

Seek to Hold Enemy and Stop Advance Down Brenta.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 24.—Heavy fighting continued throughout last night on both sides of the Brenta river with the result indecisive. Between the Brenta and Piave rivers the Italians are contesting every foot of ground.

The enemy is attempting to come down the Brenta valley on both banks of the river in an endeavor to reach Bassano and the open plain. On the east bank the Fourth army drove back two attacks in force. On the west bank the First army took the initiative in a dashing attack to regain the lost position at the upper end of the Brenta valley. The enemy's resistance was of a determined nature.

West of the Brenta the territory is now fairly held by the defenders and the main enemy pressure is concentrated between the Brenta and the Piave, where the Italians are making a splendid resistance.

Italians Retake Mountains.

The battle of the mountains is raging with unexampled violence. The Italians again hold the Monte Tomba and Monte Pertica positions, which they lost Thursday night. The losses have been very great, but the enemy's far exceed those of the Italians.

The recapture of Monte Tomba was accomplished by a succession of brilliant charges which dyed the snows red and left the ground piled with enemy dead.

Monte Pertica was lost and won four times, the enemy finally being thrown back.

The battle broke in full fury early yesterday and raged throughout the day, the night and today. The first blow was struck at Monte Pertica, where dense masses of enemy infantry were hurled against the Italians.

Try to Cross Floods.

Fighting hand to hand, half submerged in flooded marshes, Italian troops today were holding the enemy at bay on the lower Piave.

Gen. Borovich's Austrian troops strove desperately to fight the floods loosed by the Italians in defense of Venice, no less than they fought the troops themselves. The men on both sides battled from hummock to hummock. Massed attacks were impossible. The fighting resolved itself into man to man battles, scattered mile after mile along the river or beyond its banks.

Italian aviators reported the Austrians hurriedly constructing boats behind the lines. Some have already unsuccessfully attempted the passage of the watery no man's land. Teutonic construction engineers are working trying to drain the territory.

Dig In on Tagliamento.

That the German and Austrian staffs are by no means convinced of their ability to break the line and are even fearful of an enforced retreat when British and French reinforcements shall have arrived, was indicated in reports of aviators today showing that the enemy is already preparing a defense line along the Tagliamento river.

New types of German guns made their appearance in the pivotal battle between the Brenta and Piave. They are of large caliber and mounted on huge motors, giving them great mobility. The guns operate in groups.

ALLIES' AID BRACES ITALY

BY JOSEPH W. GRIGG.

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

ROME, Nov. 24.—When I left London for Italy a week ago a political storm raged around Premier Lloyd George on the "one front" issue. When I departed from Paris for Italy two nights later it was the beginning for me of optical evidence of what the "one front" idea means, for I was aboard a train with veterans on the Anglo-French staff as well as star airmen.

In the course of the next few days I was to witness long lines of hardy, singing French and British soldiers. Cheers greeted our train at many parts of the line in Italy, for the people there flock to the stations.

This has been a momentous week, not only in the great rally and stand of the Italian troops, but in what it heralds in the way of allied coöperation.

Guynemer's Friend Aids Italy.

During one part of my journey a companion was one of France's crack flyers, a personal friend of Guynemer, and already he has been in battle over the Austro-German lines. A souvenir he wore was a bullet which killed one of his observers recently on the west front.

With him were five other representative French airmen. The Austro-Germans will find that the linking up of fronts and the prosecution of the war as if it were one has brought to the Italian sector splendid Anglo-French forces. I have seen and talked with them.

Indicative of the quickened pulse of Italy, as a result of this fraternity in arms, is the presence in Rome of dramatic posters showing the Italian soldier flanked by British and French soldiers, making a bayonet attack.

Irish with Bombs and Steel at Point of Gen. Byng's Wedge

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 23.—[Delayed.]—The main attack on the opening of the offensive Tuesday was along the western bank of the Canal Du Nord, which runs almost due north and south from a point a little west of Havrincourt. The main Hindenburg line trenches were built along this waterway and the British had to fight their way up the big ditch.

There was intense hard work almost from the start, as the Ulsterites who undertook this task got in among the German defenses. Because of the secret nature of the attack no artillery could be used to cut the tremendously strong lines of barbed wire in front of the trenches, and the tanks were not operating in this section.

Irish Prove Courage.

It was a big undertaking, for the Irish came under concentrated rifle and machine gun fire as soon as they began to advance, but they maintained their reputation for valor and bombed their way with such grim determination that they drove an entering wedge into the trench system near Havrincourt.

Northwest of the town is a high bank, on the west of the canal. This elevation was strongly fortified with dugouts, and there was a great concentration of machine guns.

The Ulsterites hurled themselves on the Germans with such fury that the latter were compelled to desert their machine guns and abandon the hill.

During the afternoon the Irish were held up temporarily because of the shortage of ammunition near a sunken road, southwest of Graincourt, where the Germans were established in considerable force. This position was rendered double strong by a machine gun concentration north of Graincourt, which could sweep the British lines near the canal. The ammunition came up and the troops charged forward again. They overcame the resistance south of the Cambrai-Bapaume highway.

Steel Routs Germans.

The Germans then were firing with machine guns down across the Cambrai road. Hand to hand fighting occurred at positions below the road, but the Germans finally were forced to withdraw.

Dugouts lighted by electricity were found in the chain of defenses along the highway. By 6:10 o'clock in the evening the Irish troops had crossed the Cambrai-Bapaume highway on both sides of the canal and taken a stand south of Moeuvres. This was the situation here at the end of the first day's fighting.

Thursday morning the Irish were holding most of Moeuvres and the east bank of the canal. In the afternoon the Germans delivered a sudden counter attack from the north, and, after hand to hand fighting through the streets and among the houses, they forced the Irish to withdraw to the southern outskirts. This morning the Irish again surged forward against the town and at an early hour had worked their way around toward the north.

Cavalry Has Inning.

Two squadrons of horse accomplished the downfall of Anneux and captured it between 4 and 5 o'clock in the evening. This place was found to have a system of catacombs under the church, and these were held by the Germans, who had an electric power station for lighting. An elaborate battalion headquarters fell into British hands.

During Tuesday night the Germans counter attacked Anneux with troops which had just been brought from the Russian front. A strong battle took place and the British withdrew. On Wednesday morning the British again attacked Anneux and recaptured it.

Proceeding northward, the British drove the enemy from the trenches near the edge of Bourlon wood. This trench was so remarkably well camouflaged that no sign of it was visible until the British saw German faces apparently coming out of the ground. A hand to hand battle began. Later the British were forced to withdraw slightly because of heavy machine gun fighting from Bourlon village.

Again Attack Trench.

Yesterday morning the British again attacked the trench with the assistance of tanks and established their line around the southern face of the wood.

On Wednesday the advance was rapid. Strong resistance was encountered at the sunken road between Marcoing and Graincourt, and heavy machine gun fire from the direction of Cantaing and Bourlon wood. The British, however, battled their way forward with rifles and bayonets and by noon had forced an entrance unawares.

The greatest danger which the attackers faced was the possibility of the mines being blown up, and they knew this must be avoided. Accordingly they took along a body of expert tunnel men. By good fortune they mastered the secret of the mines and cut the lead wires. This enabled the British infantry which swarmed into the trench to prevent the enemy from setting off the explosives.

A hot fight took place in the tunnel. Many Germans battled with bayonets to the death and 400 enemy bodies were counted after the conflict. In addition more than 700 prisoners were taken.

CONFIDENCE

Marconi Says German Drive Will Be Stopped by Reorganized Italian Armies, After Tour of Front.

ROME, Nov. 23.—[Delayed.]—"The reorganization of the entire Italian army is proceeding apace," said Senator William Marconi, inventor of the wireless, in an interview today with the Associated Press. "It makes us confident that the onward march of the enemy will be definitely stopped."

Senator Marconi has just returned from a tour of the front from the mouth of the Piave to Monte Grappa, during which he inspected the wireless apparatus.

"All the commanders were filled with hope that the worst is over, that the revival of the morale of the soldiers, which is constantly more noticeable, may give unexpected results," he said.

"I found everywhere that the spirit of the troops was very high. The men are desirous of taking revenge for the reverses suffered.

"What we desire ardently is the closest possible union and coöperation with America."

SPOOKY ESTELLE OFFERS MATLACK TO WIFE; SPURNED

Husband Fails in Fifth and "Last" Effort at Reconciliation.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—The fifth and "last" attempt to take the angles out of the Matlack-Hamsley-Matlack triangle has failed.

Elwood V. Matlack, wealthy former resident of Webster Groves, entrained tonight for Chicago accompanied by his spiritual companion, Mrs. Estelle M. Hamsley of Chicago, who had come on with him to St. Louis from Chicago to carry out a "whole-souled, noble" purpose of giving him up to his wife, despite Mrs. Hamsley's need for him.

But he wouldn't be accepted by his wife. At least that was Matlack's statement just before his departure. He said he had sought a reconciliation for his son's sake and that Mrs. Hamsley, in her characteristically frank and ingenuous spirit, had readily agreed to do her part in bringing together husband and wife.

Matlack Issues Statement.

Before leaving, Matlack gave out this statement, which was the sequel to one of 1,800 words given out earlier in the afternoon:

"Mrs. Hamsley and I are leaving the city tonight. My fifth and last effort at reconciliation with Mrs. Matlack has failed, wrecked on the rock of finance. After persistently refusing all friendly overtures from me, refusing to admit me to her room, even when she received the reporters there; after absolutely refusing to deal with me anywhere else, I have about decided that any reconciliation I could establish with her would be about as futile and transitory as can well be imagined.

"Mrs. Matlack agreed to have a conference with me, provided I could arrange it, at my lawyer's office, with her lawyer present. Since her lawyer is and has been the biggest bone of contention between us, it is manifestly an absurd impossibility to come to an amicable agreement through his offices. My effort was not to open a lawsuit for the benefit of any financially hungry individual or collection of individuals.

Explains Purpose.

"My purpose was to establish such a relationship between my wife and myself as would result in a reopening of the Webster Groves home as the training and developing ground of my son.

"For the boy's sake Mrs. Hamsley and I regret the outcome."

In his statement issued earlier in the day Matlack reviewed some of the domestic discord in his home which had preceded his meeting with Mrs. Hamsley in Chicago and how, after that momentous acquaintance, he had said:

"Estelle and I have come to believe that Christ's statements, 'Love is the fulfilling of the law' and 'Greater love than this hath no man that he lay down his life for his friend,' are the only enduring basis upon which to establish a sincere and permanent relationship of any sort."

Tells of Mrs. Hamsley.

He said that immediately after his meeting with Mrs. Hamsley she had said that "until she knew absolutely that there were no broken vows, neglected duties, or despised obligations on my part she would hold me morally responsible and accountable for the welfare of my wife and son."

He related how Mrs. Hamsley had accompanied him in last May to his wife's home, hoping to effect a reconciliation, although at that time a bond of intense feeling had grown up between himself and Mrs. Hamsley.

THE SPIRITUAL MARRIAGE.

Elwood N. Matlack, whose "spiritual marriage" to Mrs. Estelle Hamsley of Chicago gained the couple nation-wide notoriety last summer, is a wealthy, retired business man of St. Louis. Mrs. Hamsley, who became known as "Spooky Estelle" in the course of publicity, received assurances from her husband, Charles R. Hamsley, 3812 Park avenue, Chicago, last June that he would give her up to Matlack because he loved her too much to stand in the way of her spiritual union.

Later on Mr. Matlack took his spirit bride to his wife's home, near St. Louis, and planned that the three should live together, with Mrs. Matlack taking the rôle of an elder sister. Mrs. Matlack, however, objected.

Some days later she sued for divorce. In the developments which followed she asked United States agents to investigate her husband's "friendship for Mrs. Hamsley." Still later she was reported to be winning back her husband's affections. Then the troubles broke out afresh and suit was renewed.

QUIZ WITNESSES IN GIRL'S DEATH AFTER OPERATION

Charges that witnesses were induced not to appear at an inquest into the death of Ellen Matson, 3930 North Sawyer avenue, who died Nov. 18 at the West End hospital of what is said to have been an illegal operation, are being investigated by Coroner Peter M. Hoffman and the state's attorney's office.

Mrs. Emma Matson, mother of the girl; Mrs. Guelle Matson, an aunt; Mabel Matson, 1325 North California avenue, a sister; Charles Moorehouse, 4608 Calumet avenue; Dr. Jacob K. Meyer, part owner of the hospital; Dr. D. E. Boissonneault, head interne, and several hospital nurses were summoned to the state's attorney's office last night.

The names of Dr. Lillian Heyworth-Hobbs-Seymour, convicted six months ago of murder by an illegal operation, but who is out on bonds, her husband, E. M. Seymour, an attorney with offices at 155 North Clark street, and a son by a former marriage were mentioned by witnesses, according to both Coroner Hoffman and the state prosecutor.

The operation, the state charges, was performed at the home of Dr. Heyworth-Hobbs-Seymour, 4035 Indiana avenue, on Nov. 3.

BACK TO HER DADDY

She Ran Away Months Ago with Composer, but Father Forgave Her.

Miss Laura Hansen

"DADDY" GREETS HANSON GIRL, HOME AT LAST

Child Who Ran Away with Composer Gets Warm Welcome.

Laura Hansen, the 17 year old girl who was lured away from her home in Elmhurst last July by Henry W. Petrie, composer of the ballad, "Asleep in the Deep" and other popular music, came back to father last night. Petrie, who is 57 years old, deserted his wife and grown children to take the girl traveling over the country with him. He lived in Downers Grove.

The girl arrived at the Northwestern station at 8:45 last evening. She came from Boulder, Colo., where Petrie had sent her a month ago.

Father at Station.

Walter Hansen of Elmhurst, father of the girl, who had for almost five months vainly tried to locate her, had been informed of the time of her arrival. He was at the station to meet her. As Laura walked through the trainshed he stepped from behind a pillar. Laura stopped, bewildered for a moment, then—

"Daddy! Daddy!" she said. In another moment her head was on her father's shoulder. The tears came freely as he caressed her.

Conflicting Emotions.

Laura had told the reporter on the train coming into Chicago last evening she did not wish to see her father or mother, but she did wish Mr. Petrie would be at the station to meet her. She said she loved Petrie, saying "I don't know why, but I do—I do, and I'll stand by him and marry him when he's divorced."

On the train she asserted resolutely she would "never go back home to papa and mamma."

"I'd rather starve—rather scrub floors than go back there," she put it. "I've got almost $4 left," she added defiantly. "I wired Mr. McDermott, Mr. Petrie's attorney, to meet me at the station. I hope he got the telegram, but if he didn't I'll go to a hotel."

Yet she gazed longingly out of the window into the night. She was watching for Elmhurst. "Do we pass through Elmhurst?" she asked anxiously. And when she arrived at the station and her father was there—the daddy who was always good to her, she melted in a moment into his arms.

Story of Their Wanderings.

"We left Elmhurst about 9:30 in the morning of July 20," she said. "I didn't want to go. He had sent me a note we would leave the next Wednesday. I was with my girl friend, Marguerite McCarthy, when we met him. He begged me to go with him. I was afraid. But we had a little quarrel and Marguerite said "go"; so I went—just as I was.

"We drove all that day and until 3 o'clock the next morning. Then we got to Valparaiso, Ind. We stopped there, for he had to buy some things. I was afraid to go to a hotel and slept in the car. We went from there to Bettsville, O. Mrs. Rene Browner lives there—she writes the words for some of Mr. Petrie's music—and we stayed at Browner's for three days.

"We went from there to Philadelphia. We stayed there only a day at Herman Meyercord's house, and then we went to New York. I didn't go into the city with him, I stayed in a smaller town near there. He got some money from a publisher and we went back to Philadelphia.

"On our first trip to Philadelphia—from Bettsville—we slept in the car. He wanted me to go to hotels in small towns, but I wouldn't — I looked dreadful.

How They Got Money.

"We stayed in Boulder only a few days and from there we went to Indianapolis. I guess we must have been there for two months. We'd have stayed longer, but Dr. Le Blanc (Floriman Le Blanc of Downers Grove) came and told Mr. Petrie we had better move, as they were tracing us.

"Mr. Petrie went with me to Peoria and then back to Decatur, and a few days later he sent me to Boulder again.

"I got to Boulder on Nov. 2. Mrs. Bleecker sent me to the hotel. I stayed there until Friday. About noon that day Mrs. Bleecker called me. She urged me to hurry, for she said they would be after me. She gave me money and an hour later I was on my way to Chicago."

LEADERS NAMED AS VOTE BUYERS IN CONFESSION

Negro Accuses East St. Louis Officials of Bribery.

Belleville, Ill., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Details of the manner in which Negro votes were bought at local elections and primaries by both Democratic and Republican politicians are contained in a 15,000 word confession which was signed tonight by Dr. L. N. Bundy, Negro dentist, under indictment on two charges of murder in connection with the recent East St. Louis race riots. Bundy had made the charges orally previously, but it was not until tonight that he signed his confession.

Bundy made his statement to Attorney General E. J. Brundage. He told of how he and other Negroes organized a club and how politicians paid him money to swing the Negro vote. Bundy declares that white men were placed about colored polls and that a given sign from a watchman within the poll, who had obtained a "flash" of the Negro's ballot established that he voted "right."

Votes Sold for Dollar.

These white men would pay the Negroes amounts varying from $1 to $10.

Bundy says that the Republican organization refused to give him the amount of money he asked for and that in the fall election of 1916 he and his own organization supported the Democratic nominee, Charles Webb, for state's attorney of St. Clair county and the Democratic candidates for east side levee district commissioners. Three hundred dollars was paid him by Locke Tarlton, Democratic leader and campaign manager for Mayor Fred Mollmann for handling the Negro vote in the same election, Bundy charged.

He added he had arranged for his men to give the voters marked sample ballots and instructions to mark the official ballots the same way and give the checkers on the inside of the poll a "flash" in order to get pay when they came out.

Bundy's club, he declared, got from $1,500 to $1,800 for expenses and that Tarlton told him later that the Negro votes he got for the Democratic levee ticket cost him $10 a piece.

Vice Was Systematized.

Bundy declares there was an organized system which looked after the interests of vice in the Negro districts and that when saloon licenses were revoked the customary charge for reissuing these was $50, which was paid to recognized agents and was turned over to Mayor Mollmann's campaign fund and used to further his reëlection as mayor of East St. Louis in the spring of 1916.

Bundy declares that on the evening before the mayoralty election of 1916 he met with Mayor Mollmann, Tarlton, and other supporters of the mayor.

Whites as "Pay Off" Men.

He charged that at this meeting white men were assigned to the Negro precincts to act as "pay off" men and that $60, $75, and as high as $100 was set aside for such precincts to buy votes with under the "flash system." He says these "pay off men" usually made their headquarters in some nearby saloon.

Runners would bring the colored men to these saloons for their money.

Bundy declares that preceding the mayoralty election of 1916 Chief of Police Ransom Hayne, since discharged, called in the saloonkeepers and told them they must support Mollmann and if they did not their licenses were revoked on one pretext or another.

Bundy declares that in two instances he handled the cases of Negro saloonkeepers and got their licenses restored on payment of money to him which he turned over to Tarlton and to Edward Dowling, since deceased. In one case, he said, a Negro named Wilkerson paid $35 and promised to pay $15 more and failed to do so and again lost his license. Bundy declares there was a large element of Negroes who had been educated not to vote unless they were paid.

BIG FACTORY FIRE IN SWEDEN.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Nov. 24.—A huge fire has been burning since yesterday at a cellulose factory at Karskaer, near Gaelfe. Paper pulp to the value of $1,750,000 is estimated to have been destroyed.

SALOON SHOPPING

How Liquor Played Part in Domestic Infelicity.

Minnie Nelson asked a divorce from John yesterday because he had instituted a course of "systematic cruelty" against her.

Other suits filed:

Selma S. Edlund asks to be legally separated from Bernhart because he "divides his time half and half between his work and saloon shopping."

Ruby Pruett announces that Roy's cruelty was "intensified by his drunkenness."

Edna McCarty charges Arthur with desertion. They lived together two months.

Louis E. Randall, in a demurrer filed to his wife Hannah's bill to set aside a divorce decree, denies all of her charges of irregularities in testimony.

HOSPITAL CLOSES DOORS TO AGED VICTIM OF AUTO

Superintendent Denies His Motive Was Mercenary.

At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon James Richards, 74 years old, residing at 3713 North Spaulding avenue, while alighting from a car at Belmont avenue and Halsted street, was struck by an auto truck driven by H. Bernheim, 635 Belmont avenue. He was picked up unconscious by Bernheim and taken in a passing automobile and hurried to the Sheridan Park hospital, 628 Belmont avenue.

At the same time the Sheffield avenue police station was notified of the accident, and, having no ambulance at command, it notified the Town Hall station, whence an ambulance in charge of Dr. W. H. Taylor and Policeman Robert Schwayne was hurried to the scene of the accident.

On Hospital Doorstep.

Arriving and finding the injured man taken away, inquiries were made, and the ambulance then proceeded to the Sheridan Park hospital, where Richards was found lying on the doorstep, it is alleged, without having received any attention whatever.

When Policeman Schwayne summoned the superintendent of the hospital, Dr. R. C. Menzies, and inquired about the case, Dr. Menzies, according to Dr. Taylor, said:

"We couldn't get any money out of this fellow, and we've always lost money on such cases, so I won't take him in."

Schwayne remonstrated, but, according to him, Dr. Menzies was obdurate, and, as a superficial examination had convinced Dr. Taylor that Richards was suffering from a fractured skull and was in a serious condition, he was put into the ambulance and rapidly driven to the Alexian Brothers' hospital, Fullerton and Racine avenues, about three miles away.

Has Fractured Skull.

There last night it was said Richards was suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Questioned over the telephone last night, Dr. Menzies admitted that Richards had been brought to the hospital and left on the steps, but denied making the remark attributed to him by Dr. Taylor.

"I would not accept Richards because we did not have accommodations for him," said Dr. Menzies.

Armenians Hold Tag Day and Reaffirm Loyalty

Funds to be applied for the relief of victims of the atrocities which have occurred in Armenia during the war were raised yesterday by "tagging" in the loop district. The amount realized will be announced later.

T. P. O'Connor, Irish member of parliament, and Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus addressed a gathering of the relief workers during the day.

"Germany shares Turkey's guilt for the murder of 800,000 helpless Armenians," said Mr. O'Connor. "If any one has entertained a doubt as to the justice of the war against Germany that doubt ought to be dispelled by the knowledge that Germany is a friend of Turkey and Turkey is a friend of Germany."

BABY FAILS AS CAMOUFLAGE TO STOP 9 ARRESTS

Police Assert Raid Has Solved "Kidnaping" Bandits' Case.

Trailing a band of automobile highwaymen who had terrorized the south shore district for two months, Detective Sergt. Michael Grady and five men of the Hyde Park police station lowered their revolvers as they burst in the door of a flat at 651 East Fiftieth street yesterday.

A baby cradle stood in their path. Half reclining in a chair by the cradle was a woman, wan and delicate. She had been knitting on a tiny garment, which fell to the floor as the police entered. Sergt. Grady removed his cap and picked it up.

"We—we thought——"

Before he could finish one of his men touched him on the arm and motioned into an adjoining bedroom. On a dresser lay a loaded revolver and a man's cap. The police drew their revolvers and started a swift search of the flat at 651 and an adjoining one at 653.

Nine Arrested.

The search yielded four men, said by the police to be the "kidnaping automobile bandits," and five women and also is believed to have solved the mystery of the shooting of Claude McGillicuddy, 19 years old, 2101 West Fifty-fourth street, Wednesday night.

Those arrested in the flat at 651 were: Hazel Kerr, 18, Farmington, Iowa; Harold Hawke, 26, London, England, expert automobile repair man; Mrs. Gertrude Whitmark, 6145 Justine street, whose husband is at Camp Logan, Houston, Texas, preparatory to going to France.

In the flat at 653 were Lucille Jordan, who at first gave the name of Mrs. John Fredericks; Mrs. William Helenthal, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Libby Feldman, who at first gave the name of Mrs. Paddy Feldman; Paddy Feldman, 6314 Justine street. John Fredericks, alias "Dago" Fredericks, and Avery Johnson, alias "Peco," 6234 Justine street, were arrested as they entered the building during the raid.

Double Life Revealed.

John Fredericks, said by the police to have a wife and two children at 4715 Federal street, was the admirer of Miss Lucille Jordan, the young woman whom the police found seated beside the cradle. When they told her he was married she fainted. He was to marry her, she said.

Hazel Kerr ran away from Farmington, the police say, after she had collected $900 left her as a legacy by her father. When taken yesterday she had $200.

Avery Johnson, one of the prisoners, is on parole from Pontiac.

People's Council to Talk Peace Terms Here Today

Despite all the American propaganda to the contrary, a pacifist meeting under the auspices of the Chicago People's council, this being the local branch of the National Council for Democracy and Terms of Peace, is to be held in the Chicago theater (formerly the American Music hall) this afternoon. William Bross Lloyd is scheduled as the chief speaker. Others to speak are Louis Engdahl, Otto Christenson, and Samuel Holland. All are said to be well known Socialistic propagandists.

Quality
at Shayne's

Quality is not associated with price at SHAYNE'S.

It is, on the contrary, a thing without price, a part of the standard which has made SHAYNE Furs so widely known for their beauty, style and fine value.

This fact simplifies Fur buying for the woman who doesn't know what good Furs should cost.

At SHAYNE'S she knows that the price she pays—whether it is $40 for a Scarf or $1,000 for a rich Coat—is an honest price and that it is based upon quality first and last.

Yours might as well be SHAYNE Furs. They cost no more.

FORM DRASTIC RAIL POOL TO HELP WIN WAR

Pick Superior Council to Cut Knot in Traffic Snarl.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—The first big crisis of the war—the staggering congestion of railroad traffic—came to a head today.

The effort to meet it caused the creation—temporarily, at least—of what is actually a superior war council.

The council met and acted this morning. There were present the full membership of the railroads war board, Fairfax Harrison, president of the Southern, chairman; Samuel Rea, president of the Pennsylvania; Hale Holden, president of the Burlington; Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the Southen Pacific; and Howard Elliott, president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Commissioner Clark represented the interstate commerce commission. Herbert Hoover, the food administration; E. F. Carry, the shipping board; Harry Garfield, the fuel administration; R. S. Lovett, the freight priority board, and in the absence of Chairman Daniel Willard, A. W. Thompson, the war industries board, and the advisory commission of the National Council of Defense.

Will Pool All Property.

Every war activity of the government was represented. Reports were presented showing that freight congestion on east and west trunk lines has become so great as to threaten real disaster.

It was finally decided that all the railroads east of Chicago shall—in direct defiance of the law—not only be permitted, but instructed to pool all their property, including locomotives, rolling stock, terminal facilities and tracks. They will hereafter be operated as a single system in every particular. Every mile of track, every freight and passenger terminal and every car and locomotive will be put into one common pot.

The vice presidents of the eastern roads in charge of operation were appointed a committee by the conference to have direct and complete charge of the whole single system of all railroads east of Chicago.

Move Maximum Traffic.

The instructions to this committee by the conference were in substance:

"Take charge of all the property of all the railroads east of Chicago. Issue the necessary orders to get the maximum use out of everything in the common pool, and to move the maximum amount of traffic possible."

The conference also called the attention of the government to the fact that, as at present managed, the priority board has really tended to increase congestion and to prevent the speedy movement of traffic.

Cause of Congestion.

At present the congestion of freight centers is the worst on the lines of the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroads. Lines of other eastern roads are comparatively clear. Under the new rule traffic will be diverted from the tracks of the two roads named to others and a quick improvement in the movement of freight is hoped for.

The causes responsible for the present alarming congestion of freight traffic are simple.

Begin at Bath, Me., and draw the arc of a circle which shall pass through Syracuse, N. Y., and come out again to the Atlantic coast at Norfolk, Va., at the mouth of Chesapeake bay. Within the line are the great manufacturing districts of New England, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware, to say nothing of Maryland and part of Virginia. The territory involved is a mere bite out of the eastern coast line of the United States. In area it is a tiny fraction of the United States.

Yet—and here is the fundamental cause of the present alarming freight congestion—it is estimated that it least 75 per cent of all the vast war contracts of the United States government have been let to manufacturers whose plants are located in this small territory.

Need Food and Fuel.

This part of the eastern seaboard has always been the great manufacturing center of the country. In population it has been the most congested. It depends largely on the rest of the country for food supplies. Its railroads are normally congested. A large part of it is a considerable distance from fuel and supplies of raw material for manufacturing purposes.

And that does not begin to tell the story. In this territory are located the great ocean ports from which are shipped all the supplies and munitions for our armies in France. Before they can be loaded on shipboard the railroads must carry them to the ports.

From these ports, also, go almost all the food supplies, the fuels, and other material shipped to our allies, Belgium, France, Italy, and the rest. From the same ports, also, goes too large a share of exports to the neutral countries of Europe.

No Time to Criticise, but—

This is no time for provincial criticism. It is no time to complain or even to suggest that the middle west has not been given its fair share of the vast war orders. That is not the question.

It will not, I am sure, be considered captious to say that from now on, at least, war orders should be placed with the fact clearly in mind that railroad congestion should be avoided, if possible. It will probably take a superior war council to take a broad enough view of the whole situation to give that factor due weight.

HERE'S FORMAL REPORT ON VAST "WAR MERGER" OF U. S. RAILWAYS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 24.—(Special.)—An official statement issued tonight by the railroads war board said:

"The railroads' war board adopted revolutionary measures today in order to relieve the congestion of traffic on the eastern railways. It decided that 'all available facilities on all railroads east of Chicago be pooled to the extent necessary to furnish maximum freight movement.' The effect will be that to the full extent that conditions render it desirable these railways will be operated as a unit, entirely regardless of their ownership, and individual interests.

"The operating vice presidents of the eastern lines have been appointed a committee to operate as a unit, all the lines involved, and have been given instructions and authority to adopt all measures which in their judgment may be necessary to relieve the present situation and assure the maximum amount of transportation.

Shorten Coal Hauls.

"The railroads' war board has been studying with concern the congestion on the eastern lines. It has recognized the fact that the roads in that territory have been becoming overburdened in consequence of the growing industrial activity, of the condition of the labor market, and of other conditions. As a part of the program for relieving these conditions it has addressed a letter to the government fuel administration in which it has made the following recommendations:

"'That a survey be made by the fuel administration of present contracts and methods of purchase and shipment of coal so as to shorten the rail haul from mine to consumer and to eliminate as far as possible all cross hauls of coal.

"'Pooling of coal within reasonable limits,' the war board said, 'will without doubt produce additional large savings, and the railroads are prepared to coöperate in any measures pursued by the fuel administration to that end'

Divert Foods to Gulf.

"That immediate measures be adopted to transfer movement of foodstuffs and other export material to southern and gulf ports to as large a degree as compatible with public interest in order to relieve the eastern congested territory of an equivalent amount of train service.

"That immediate survey be made of all government requirements now involving the movement of raw materials in and manufactured products out of centers of industry, so that accumulations of cars on lines and in terminals will not occur as now, while product is awaiting use here or ocean transportation for foreign use.

"The concentration in certain parts of eastern territory of vast government and industrial activities has overtaxed the capacity of rail lines in that territory, considering the heavy movement of coal and other heavy commodities which formerly moved on coastwise vessels, but has now been thrown upon the railroads, the heavy military and civilian passenger travel, etc.

Bar New Plants in East.

"Further enterprise involving large operations in the use of coal and other heavy commodities should not be established in that territory except after full consideration of these conditions.

"An important part of the plan adopted for the operation of the eastern lines is that of placing at their disposal the facilities of railways in other territories to such extent as may be necessary.

"It is a generally recognized fact that the situation on the eastern lines is more critical than in any other part of the country, because upon them is being concentrated the bulk of the fuel and raw material being used for the manufacture of munitions, and also the vast quantities of supplies and foodstuffs which are being transported to Europe. Therefore, locomotives, employés, and machine tools will be transferred from other railways to the eastern lines and the repair shops of other lines, such as those of the western roads in Chicago, will be utilized for making repairs on the equipment of the eastern lines.

War Board Issues Orders.

"The measures adopted today are the result of a series of conferences with government authorities and officers of the eastern lines which the railroads' war board initiated on Monday. The vice presidents of the eastern railways were called to Washington on Thursday and received from the war board their instructions for immediate action. This morning a meeting was held which was attended by Dr. H. A. Garfield, the government fuel administrator; E. N. Hurley, chairman of the United States shipping board; Robert S. Lovett, the government priority director; and Commissioner Edgar E. Clark of the interstate commerce commission, and the railroads' war board. At this conference the situation was fully discussed with the representatives of the government, who concurred in the importance of adopting the drastic measures decided upon.

Pool All Facilities.

"The measures the railroads' war board and the committee of operating vice presidents will put into effect at once are as follows:

"All available facilities on all railroads east of Chicago will be pooled to the extent necessary to furnish maximum freight movement.

"All open top cars of all eastern roads and similar cars of private ownership which are at home on eastern lines will be pooled on an equitable plan, distribution under the pool to be made pro rata on the basis of the tonnage carrying capacity of the equipment in the pool. The car pool should be administered under the direction of the car service commission.

Break Up Congestion.

"The commission on car service will divert from those lines where the congestion is most acute all freight that can be handled by any open route until the congestion is relieved.

"The pooling of coal will be further extended wherever practicable.

"The national fuel administration is asked to arrange for supplying the various coal markets from the nearest coal mines in order to avoid waste of car efficiency.

Reduce Preference Orders.

"Any order that preference be given to any class of cars or freight results in a slowing down of the operation of the transportation machine. A constant flow of all traffice concurrently produces the best transportation results. The war board therefore emphasizes the desirability of reducing the great volume of preference orders which by placing a substantial majority of the freight moved on the same plane, defeats its own object.

"The eastern railways are in serious need of more men, and special measures may be necessary to provide them. Some specific illustration of the way in which the trackage of the various lines is to be pooled are to be given in the report of the vice presidents. For example, the Western Maryland will allow its line to be used as an east bound track in connection with the Baltimore and Ohio from Connellsville, Pa., to Jerome, Md., 125 miles, thus making three tracks between those two points.

Use Erie to Full Capacity.

"The Erie railroad is to be used to its full capacity in transporting lake ore and coal between Cleveland and Youngstown, and power and equipment will be provided from other lines for its use as required. It is anticipated that under the new arrangement large amounts of freight traffic will be diverted from the railroads which are now most congested to those which still have some unused capacity.

"The committee of operating officers which will be in charge of the operation of the railway pool will meet in Washington on Monday to formulate further rules and to make such further recommendations as it may consider necessary. The measures adopted are calculated to enable the eastern railways to transport the maximum amount of freight traffic which it would be physically possible, under any organization or by any methods, for them to move with their present facilities."

Chicago Industries to Aid Food Economy Show

Every industry in Chicago which has any part in the business of feeding the public will take part in the Food Economy show of the State Council of Defense, which is to take place in the Coliseum during the first week of January. The committee is fully organized and has settled down to make preparations for the show. Louis W. Stumer is chairman of the committee, and will have general supervision of the work. The show will be the largest of its kind ever undertaken. One of its purposes will be to teach conservative buying and economics. A number of entertainment features are to be provided.

Farmington, Mo., Nov. 24.—F. O. Byers, one of the alleged rioters on Federal hill during the Flat river anti-foreign riots, today was convicted of flourishing a dangerous weapon. The jury assessed a fine of $200.

1,500,000 TROOPS MOVED BY RAIL SINCE AUGUST 1

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Troop movement figures to date indicate the railroads of this country have safely transported approximately 1,500,000 soldiers to training camps and embarkation points since Aug. 1, according to Fairfax Harrison, chairman of the railroads war board. Five hundred thousand of these men have made journeys necessitating overnight travel and have been moved in tourist or standard sleepers.

On one of the long hauls 8,000 men were moved from a training camp on the western coast to a point on the eastern coast—a distance of 3,700 miles—in a little less than a week. The men traveled in sixteen sections, each section comprising twelve tourist cars and two baggage cars.

U. S. FIXES GAIN OF PACKERS AT NINE PER CENT

Lower and More Stable Meat Prices Are Promised.

month by month for whatever meat products may be required at prices and in quantities approved by this division. For the reasons thus stated and no others, it has been determined to treat these five concerns as a separate class.

Allowed Nine Per Cent.

"It has been determined that the meat business of the large packer will be subjected—first, to the same restriction as the smaller packer (i. e., 2.5 per cent on sales), and second, to a further and additional restriction, that the total annual earnings of the large packer from his 'meat business' shall be limited to 9 per cent on his average capital necessarily used by him in that business, including borrowed capital.

If the packer is compelled by the government to make capital expenditures or undertake business for war service which is unremunerative, his earnings may be increased to such extent as is reasonable and fair under the circumstances.

"The 'meat business" [on the investment in which this 9 per cent is computed] will include slaughtering and all meats and meat products, fresh or prepared, and all foods which are mainly of animal origin. It will also include the operation of cars and marketing branches, and the business in by-products of live stock, such as hides, wool, fat, bones, offal and tankage, but it will not include the 'specialty business' of which we shall speak later.

Outside Business Exempt.

"So much of the business done by any packer as does not deal with the slaughtering of live stock or the products of slaughtered live stock or with food, or does not use the distribution facilities of the packing business, is not subject to these rules

"I am not willing to take the chance of leaving these specialties, which are so often closely connected with the meat business, unrestricted while the necessary investigations go on and the problems of regulation are solved. Therefore, I shall make a ruling which is only temporary: That on his specialty branches, taken as a whole, the large packer may not make a total profit at an annual rate exceeding 15 per cent on his investment. The investment in the specialties will be determined and the rate ascertained in the same way as in the meat business.

"The five large packers will not be permitted to use the profits of their specialty business to injure the smaller packers, nor will they be permitted to adjust pork prices at the expense of beef or mutton, or vice versa. This regulation of profits is not to be used as an instrument to permit them to encroach on the share of business done by the smaller packers.

Accounts Open Nov. 1.

"The rates of profit, as stated, will go into effect as of Nov. 1. In the case of small and large packers, detailed rules and regulations will be issued to define the principles here stated and to prevent diversion or concealment of profits. The packers' accounts will be subject to constant scrutiny.

"The necessities of the war and public welfare may require frequent changes in these rules. This is not an unchanging constitution for the packers—it is the first step in regulation and a step taken because of the war and for war purposes.

"The five large packers which compose the second class are Armour Co., Cudahy & Co., Morris & Co., Swift & Co., and Wilson & Co."

SHRAPNEL

Prof. David Himmelblau, who has been connected for the last four years with the School of Commerce of Northwestern university as instructor, and later as associate professor in accounting, has become civilian assistant to the paymaster of the navy in Washington.

T. P. O'Connor, Irish lecturer, member of parliament, and editor, spoke at the Patten gymnasium on Northwestern university campus last night at a patriotic demonstration under the auspices of the Evanston war council. The capacity of the gymnasium was taxed by the throng of Northwestern and Michigan alumni. "War Issues and World Democracy" was his topic. Music was furnished by the Northwestern University Military band.

The United States government is seeking an unlimited number of house and dock carpenters at Philadelphia, Dr. P. L. Prentis, in charge of the government employment agency at Chicago, announced yesterday.

"The salary will be 60 cents an hour for an eight hour day and time and a half for overtime work," Dr. Prentis said.

Applicants will be required to assume their own transportation to Philadelphia, and are requested to call at the government's agency, 845 South Wabash avenue.

CO-EDS MUST BE VACCINATED.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 24.—Discovery of eight cases of smallpox among girl students at the University of Nebraska today resulted in the issuance of an order by Chancellor Avery that all students and faculty members who have not been vaccinated recently must now take that precaution.

U. S. AGENTS PUT ON GUARD TO END WASTE OF FOOD

Representatives of the United States secret service were stationed yesterday at every team track, where potatoes and other vegetables are received, by order of Capt. Thomas I. Porter. These men will enforce the food administration's orders to prevent waste in unloading cars and in keeping shipments moving.

During the last week 550 bushels of potatoes were salvaged at the dumps, according to Samuel Livingston of the food administration office. About one hundred and fifty bushels of green beans were also reclaimed. The value of the beans was about $90. They were distributed among the poor at a cost of $4.50.

Reports made to Mr. Livingston by railroad men show that there are 1,500 carloads of perishable vegetables in Chicago yards. Many of these are to be sent elsewhere, but some are being held for better prices.

An extraordinary run of ciscoes in Lake Erie has been reported, according to Horace C. Gardner. The catch during the last ten days is said to be equal to that taken ordinarily in a year.

The price of fresh turkeys was raised one cent yesterday. It is expected that the cold storage turkeys will be sold at lower prices before long.

Sugar Cards Threatened Along the North Shore

Waukegan, Ill., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Waukegan and North Chicago food prices were fixed last night by Local Food Administrator John S. Clark. Combination sales are forbidden. The minimum price at which all merchandise must be sold is cost. Price of hams, bacon, and lard is from 5 to 8 cents under the Chicago price. Sugar and flour are the only two articles on the grocery list which are higher. Unless the sugar consumption is decreased 20 per cent, the people will get sugar cards, the local administrator warned.

RUSSIA BARES SECRET PLANS ON WAR SPOILS

Constantinople Was to Go to Czar; British Were Conceded Persia.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 24.—The Caucasus has declared its separation from Russia and formed a parliament of forty deputies, members of the Socialist parties, including one Bolsheviki, according to reports brought by M. Tseretelli, former minister in the Kerensky cabinet, on his return to Petrograd.

The body of troops recently reported at Luga, southwest of Petrograd, proved to be a detachment on its way to the front which had no intention of proceeding to Petrograd.

Bares Secret Treaties.

The text of certain confidential communications between the Russian foreign office and foreign governments were published today by Bolsheviki and social revolutionist newspapers at the instigation of Leon Trotzky, the Bolsheviki foreign minister.

Trotzky says that documents are those of the "czaristic, bourgeois, and coalition governments," and from them "the Russian nation and all nations in the world must learn the truth of the plans secretly made by financiers and traders through their parliamentary and diplomatic agents."

German and Austrian politicians, Trotzky declares, may try to make capital out of these documents, but he warns them that when the German proletariat, by means of a revolution, secures access to their chancelleries, they will find there documents which will show them up in no better light than those now published.

Russia Asked Turk Capital.

The first state document published deals with the desire of Russia to acquire the Dardanelles, Constantinople, the west shore of the Bosporus, and certain defined areas in Asia Minor. It sets forth the demand of France and England that Russia agree to the freedom of Constantinople for cargoes not from or to Russian ports, the retention of the old of the Mussulman on places in Arabia under a separate Mussulman government, and the inclusion of certain portions of Persia in the sphere of British influence.

This document indicates that Russia agreed on the whole, but proposed an amendment demanding a clearer definition in regard to the government of Mussulman territory and the freedom of pilgrimage. It defines the Russian sphere of influence and indicates her concern about the northern boundary of Afghanistan and also sets forth Italy's agreement, provided her claims in the east are recognized.

Consider German Boundaries.

The second document is a telegram from M. Izvolsky, Russian ambassador to France, dated March 11, 1917, and stating that France recognizes Russia's freedom to define her western boundaries. This was followed by a telegram from Sergius Sazonoff, former minister of foreign affairs, assuring M. Izvolsky that the agreement with France and England in regard to the Constantinople straits need not be reëxamined. It states the willingness of Russia to give France and England the freedom of defining the western boundaries of Germany in exchange for the freedom of allowing Russia to define the eastern boundary of Germany, but insisting on the exclusion of the Polish question as a matter of international discussion and instructing M. Izvolsky to counteract any attempt to place the future of Poland under control of the powers.

M. Sazonoff's telegram, continuing, says Russia must prevent Sweden from becoming unfriendly and by all means must earn the friendship of Norway and said that all political efforts to influence Roumania already had been made. The telegram touches on the exclusion of Germany from the Chinese markets, but says this must be subject to an economical conference at which Japan should be represented.

One of the documents published is a letter dated Sept. 26 last from M. Terestchenko, then Russian foreign minister, to the Russian ambassador at Washington. The letter instructed the ambassador to express to Secretary Lansing high appreciation of the fact that the American ambassador at Petrograd, David R. Francis, refrained from joining the representations by the British, French and Italian ambassadors that some measures must be taken to increase the fighting capacity of the Russian armies. The letter added that this action had a depressing effect, in as much as the allies knew the energy which the Russian government was exerting toward carrying on the war.

Another of the letters revealed was from the Russian ambassador at Stockholm. In it Hjalmar Branting, the Socialist leader, was represented as having said in a confidential conversation regarding the proposed international Socialist conference that if M. Kerensky, then premier, did not reject the idea of a conference but entered objections on the grounds that it was inopportune the Dutch-Scandi navial committee would have to conform.

BALKS TRUCE

Kaiser Refuses to Talk with Any Except a Regular Russian Government.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 24.—Germany will not negotiate an armistice except with a Russian constituent assembly, according to an anouncement made by the mayor of Petrograd tonight.

He said the Germans had refused to receive the Maximalist parliamentarians in their offer of a truce.

As a preliminary measure, before consideration even of an offer from a constituent assembly in Russia, the Germans demand a withdrawal of Russian troops for a distance of sixty-two miles, while the Germans hold their present positions.

150 FLYERS END TRAINING.

U. S. INDICATES PLAN TO IGNORE RUSSIA REBELS

Kerensky Envoy Says He Will Not Aid Bolsheviki.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Relations between the state department and Boris Bakhmetieff, Russian ambassador to the United States, remain unchanged and are unaffected by the announcement made in a communication from the ambassador to Secretary of State Lansing that the Russian embassy in this city does not recognize the Bolsheviki administration in Petrograd as the legal government of Russia.

There was no authoritative statement on the situation forthcoming from the state department after the receipt of Ambassador Bakhmetieff's note, which was delivered personally by the ambassador, but from previous intimations, dropped by officials since the overthrow of Kerensky, it was gathered today that the American government also will ignore the pretensions of the Maximalists.

Expect U. S. to Scorn Rebels.

It was considered a certainty here tonight that not only the United States, but all the allied powers would refuse to recognize the Bolshevik government and the belief is also entertained that the Russian diplomatic representatives in allied countries will follow the example set by the Russian ambassador here.

Mr. Bakhmetieff's action in appearing immediately at the state department, where he was cordially received by Secretary Lansing, and presenting his views and stating his purposes, and the tacit approval by Mr. Lansing of the course he will follow places America foremost among the nations which may refuse to have any intercourse with the Bolsheviki government in Petrograd.

Several members of the embassy staff, it was stated at the embassy, have resigned, and the first secretary, John Sookine, first secretary of the embassy and a lieutenant of the Russian army, and Ferdinand de Mohrenschidt, the second secretary, who married Secretary McAdoo's daughter last May, have offered their services to the American government for the war against Germany.

The communication addressed to Secretary Lansing by Ambassador Bakhmetieff follows:

"My dear Mr. Secretary: In connection with the events which are taking place at present in Russia I have considered it imperative to define clearly the attitude which the embassy has adopted with regard to further activities.

"From the very outset of the revolt in Petrograd the embassy has considered a Bolsheviki government as antinational and not representative of the true will of the Russian people. The embassy has, therefore, refused to accept the authority and has not entered into any contract with the group at present in power in Petrograd. In the future I will continue in not recognizing a Bolsheviki or any similar government which would break loyalty to Russia's allies and lead the country to a nonparticipation in the war.

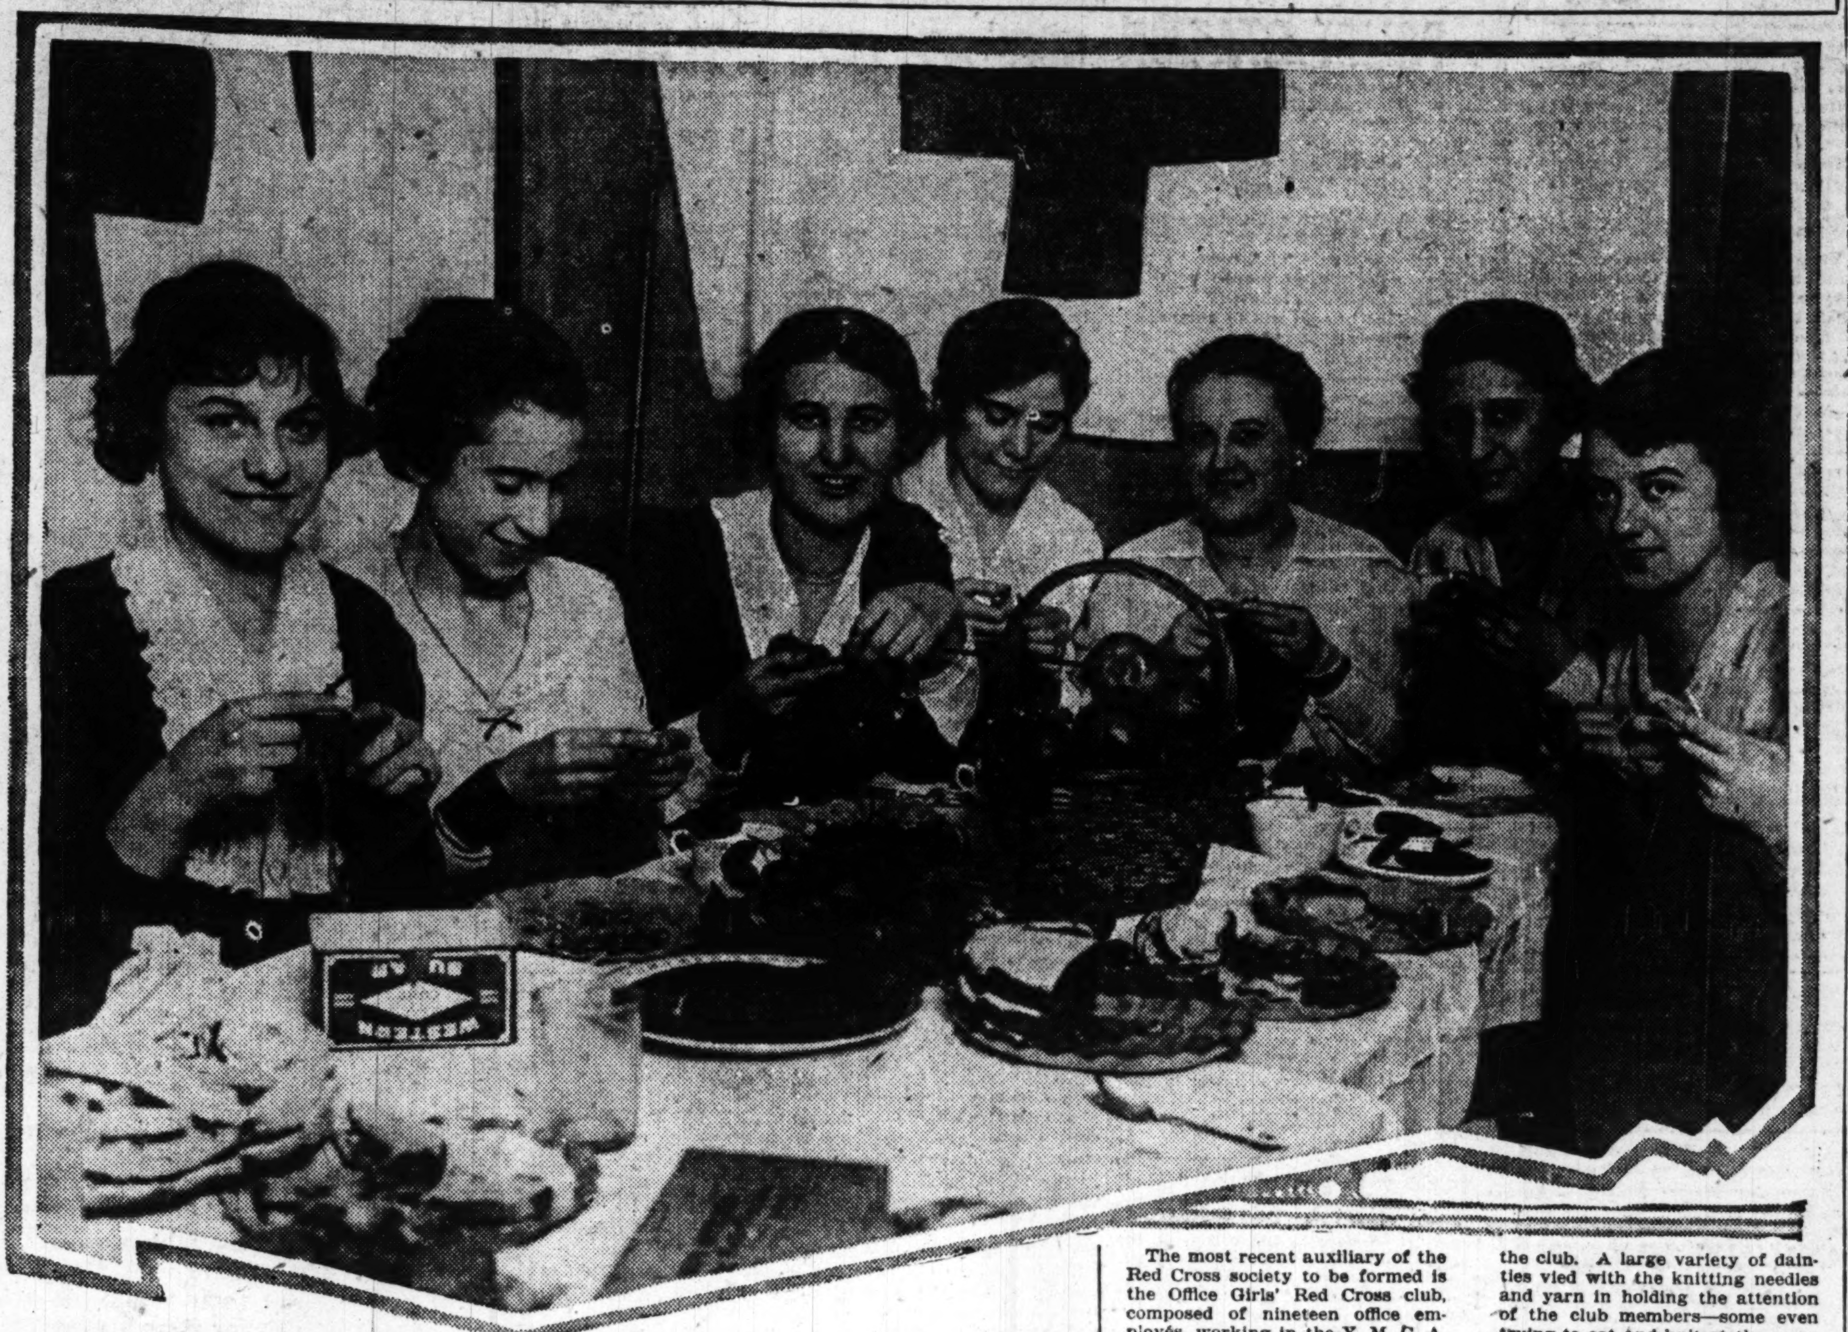
Expects Deep Reaction.

"A deep and active opposition of all sound and constructive elements of Russia is bound to arise, revealing in positive action the true spirit of the loyal and national Russia.

"As to myself, I consider it my duty to remain at my post, having to hold firmly the dignity of national and loyal Russia and to maintain the responsibility of all engagements and commitments of the legal government of Russia which have been entrusted to me. I will continue to carry on such duties unless another legal representative, recognized as such by the United States government, would take charge of the representation of Russia after a formal acceptance of the whole of its functions, duties, and liabilities.

FOOD VICTOR OVER KNITTING

Girls Try to Eat and Make Garments for Soldiers at the Same Time, but Fail in the Attempt.



The most recent auxiliary of the Red Cross society to be formed is the Office Girls' Red Cross club, composed of nineteen office employés, working in the Y. M. C. A. bufiding, 19 South La Salle street. The girls knit during their spare time in office and home instead of reading "dime novels" and sentimental literature. Miss Vivian D. Brown is president of the auxiliary. Last evening the girls gave a spread in honor of the birth of the club. A large variety of dainties vied with the knitting needles and yarn in holding the attention of the club members—some even trying to eat and knit at the same time. However, food prevailed and knitnitg was relegated to the position of an after-dinner diversion. Mollie Breed, Bertha Bulka, Agnes Ebbeson, Myrtle Junker, Ethel MacDonald, Janet Schwartz, and Vermandian Narkus are among the members of the auxiliary.

TRANSFERRED TO CAMP PIKE.

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 24.—About 500 men from Camp Dodge, Des Moines, Ia., arrived at Camp Pike yesterday. Practically all are Iowans. Two hundred men from Iowa and 300 from Illinois arrived Thursday.

DETECTIVES OF CITY, STATE AND NATION CONFER

A secret conclave of detectives from the city, state, and nation met at the department of justice offices yesterday afternoon. When the conference was over they wisely shook their heads and refused all information to the public.

In the gathering were Chief of Police Schuettler, Hinton G. Clabaugh, head of the local department of justice; Walter L. Furbershaw, first assistant to Mr. Clabaugh; James E. Stuart, chief postoffice inspector; Capt. Thomas I. Porter, head of the local secret service, and many other detectives and government operatives.

A meeting of the People's council at the Chicago theater this afternoon at which democracy and peace terms are to be discussed was sugested as cause for the grave concern of the sleuths.

MRS. DE SAULLES WILL BARE ALL HER LIFE STORY

Murder Trial Rests 2 Days; Mother Plays with Little Son.

New York, Nov. 24.—[Special.]—With her little boy, Jack, playing about her quarters in the Mineola jail, Blanca de Saulles enjoyed today the first of the two days of rest she will have before she goes through the ordeal of taking the witness stand to tell the story of her life with "Big Jack," the father, whom she killed, and then having that story, on cross-examination, gone into in detail.

Monday, led by her own counsel, Henry A. Uterhart, Mrs. De Saulles will narrate the whole history of her meeting with the former Yale gridiron star, her life with him, his neglect of her, his infidelities, and his obtaining money from her by one pretext and another.

Will Not Spare Her.

The next day she will have to face the searching inquiry of the district attorney of Nassau county, Charles R. Weeks, who says:

"I will not spare her. I must do my duty and try to obtain her conviction in the first degree of murder. I am as chivalrous as the next man, but I must fulfill my oath of office, and so I shall."

It was learned today just how Mr. Uterhart and Lewis J. Smith, her attorneys, will conduct her defense. She will be her own first witness. Then will come her mother, Mrs. Vergara Errazuriz. Mrs. John O'Neill of Philadelphia, a trained nurse who attended Mrs. De Saulles after little Jack was born at South Bethlehem, Pa., will describe her mental state while she was in that town. Her maid, Miss Susanne Monteau, will tell of the ride across Nassau county on Aug. 3 last, just before the shooting.

Important Testimony.

D. Stewart Iglehart, an old family friend, will swear that Mrs. De Saulles called him on the telephone and asked him to go with her, which, it will be contended, she certainly would not have done had she intended to go to the Box to murder her husband.

The entire testimony in the divorce action brought by his wife against De Saulles, which named Joan Sawyer, the Broadway dancer, as co-respondent, will be read to the jury.

Then will come the physicians, for her defense is not that she was mistreated by Jack De Saulles and was justified in the killing, but that she was not mentally or physically well at the moment of the shooting.

"Hypothyreosis," atrophy of the thyroid gland, resulting from natural physical weakness and several sun shocks, affected her brain, it will be contended.

MRS. HARRIMAN STUDIES TOILERS.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Mrs. J. Borden Harriman of New York started a special tour of British munitions factories today, particularly to see how British women workers were "doing their bit."

COMPLAINT PUTS MRS. MELLEN IN ROLE OF WOOER

Wife of Hotel Man Asks $100,000, Charging Alienation.

New York, Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Mrs. Margaret B. Brown filed in the Supreme court today the complaint in her suit to recover $100,000 from Mrs. Katharine Lloyd Livingston Mellen for the alleged alienation of the affections of Harry Douglas Brown, assistant manager of the Hotel Vanderbilt. Mrs. Mellen is the wife of Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad.

Letters of affection are alleged to have been written by the defendant to Mr. Brown. She is accused of having made numerous expensive gifts to him and to have sought to destroy his love for Mrs. Brown.

Mrs. Mellen has been stopping at the Vanderbilt for the last two months. Her husband is at Stockbridge, Mass., with their five children.

Mellen's Short Comment.

Mr. Mellen's only comment on their present status was:

"Mrs. Mellen is in New York. I am living in Stockbridge. You may draw your own inference."

She is his second wife. They were married in 1893, within two years of the death of the first Mrs. Mellen.

Mrs. Brown's complaint states she was married Jan. 6, 1914. She asserts their married life was happy for a time and that she and her husband "manifested great affection for each other and continued to live peaceably, happily, and harmoniously until, by reason of the acts of the defendant, the affections of the plaintiff's husband were alienated, the plaintiff's home life was destroyed, and a separation between plaintiff and her husband was brought about."

Browns Separate.

Two months ago Mr. Brown and his wife signed a separation agreement, under which Mr. Brown was to contribute to his wife's support.

Mrs. Mellen is accused, finally, of having succeeded in alienating Mr. Brown's affections to the plaintiff's "great humiliation, causing him to forsake her and withdraw from her society and aid, and brought about a separation between them and the destruction of their home life."

Mr. Brown left New York today. At the hotel it was said he would not be back until tomorrow. Clerks at the Vanderbilt said Mrs. Mellen was no longer stopping there and had given Stockbridge as her forwarding address.

FRENCH FRONT

BRITISH.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Fierce fighting has taken place during the day in the neighborhood of Bourlon wood, where the enemy made several determined attempts with fresh troops to regain possession of the high ground.

This morning a strong hostile attack compelled our troops to give ground slightly in this area. Later in the day our troops counter-attacked and re-established our former line.

On the extreme right of the southern battle front we have improved our position.

On the Ypres battlefront the hostile artillery has again been active in the Passchendaele sector.

DAY STATEMENT.

Operations were successfully carried out by us yesterday west of Cambrai. After severe fighting, in which the Germans offered stubborn resistance, our troops stormed the important and dominating high ground about Bourlon wood. To the east of Bourlon wood some progress was made in the neighborhood of Fontaine Notre Dame.

West of the wood our troops made further progress along the Hindenburg line astride the Canal du Nord, in the vicinity of Moeuvres. Further west, between Moeuvres and Queant, the London Scottish regiment captured an important spur giving observation over the Hindenburg line to the west and north.

In the vicinity of Bulecourt our troops gained further ground during the night, capturing a hostile strong point with a number of prisoners.

The number of prisoners captured in yesterday's attack has not yet been ascertained. Since the beginning of the operations on Nov. 20 it is known that more than 100 guns have been taken by us, including several heavy guns of calibers up to 8 inches.

AVIATION.

Naval aircraft patrols yesterday probably destroyed two enemy aircraft and drove down another. They destroyed an enemy machine on Nov. 20. All our machines returned.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—Front of Crown Prince Rupprecht—There has been increased artillery activity in Flanders. Waves of fire of great violence alternated with less vigorous destructive fire between the railways leading from Boesinghe to Staden and from Ypres to Roulers.

Southwest of Cambrai the English again sought a decision. A sharp firing duel heralded a battle on the front from Queant to Banteux. A strong attack on Inchy collapsed in front of that village. Moeuvres was stubbornly defended by desperate fighting against many assaults.

The thrusts directed against Bourlon, Fontaine, and La Folie were of especial force. A wave of tanks in close formation was followed by deeply echeloned infantry. Their force broke down against the heroism of our troops and as the result of the destructive effect of our artillery.

The enemy, who was slowly gaining ground on Bourlon at the price of heavy sacrifices, was met by an attacking counter thrust of our tried troops. They again ejected him from the village and from Bourlon wood. The same troops who, on the previous day, proved their magnificent attacking spirit in storming the village, fought in defense of it with equal firmness and bravery.

Before Fontaine alone thirty tanks are lying shot to pieces, which gives a picture of the forces employed by the enemy.

Strong firing also continued in the course of the night in some fighting sectors. The effect of our artillery prevented night attacks against Rumilly and southwest of Masnieres.

Army Group of the German Crown Prince: At many points on this front there was increased French activity.

AVIATION.

Since Tuesday the enemy has lost twenty-seven airplanes in aerial battles and by anti-aircraft fire.

FRENCH.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—During the night the enemy undertook several raids, especially in the region of Courcy and in the Argonne. He gained no success and suffered losses.

In the Champagne we took prisoners in a raid east of Auberive. Everywhere else the night was calm.

Dunkirk was bombarded by airplanes last night. There were no victims and the damage was insignificant.

NIGHT STATEMENT.

On the right bank of the Meuse the artillery action became intense during the afternoon in the region of Beaumont and Bezonvaux.

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN.

ROME, Nov. 29.—On the mountain front from Asiago plateau to the Brenta powerful thrusts which the enemy stubbornly carried out after heavy artillery preparation all failed.

On the plains enemy groups attempting to cross the Piave river in boats were thrown into the water by cannon shots.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—West of the Brenta and between the Brenta and Piave Italian attacks failed.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—Firing was revived between Presba lake and Monastir and in the River Cerna bend.

FRENCH.

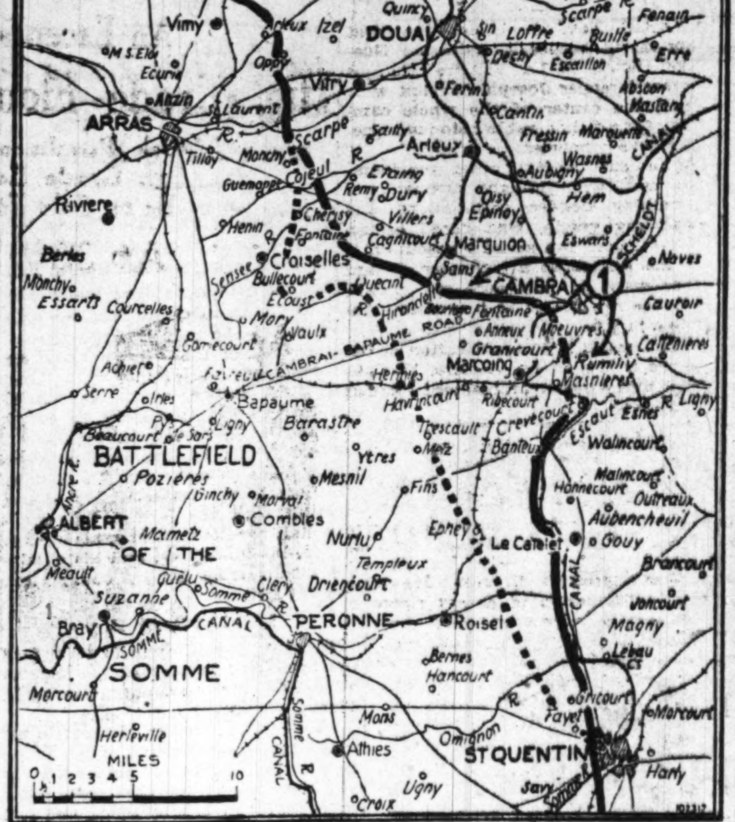
PARIS, Nov. 24.—The enemy attempted on the British front several raids, which were all dispersed before they reached our positions. The situation is quiet on the right bank of the Vardar and the Serbian front. North of Monastir the artillery action was quite intense. Our aviators have bombed enemy establishments at Vashareitsa, on the road to Prilep.

SUPPLEMENTARY

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—British attacks against the villages of Inchy, Moeuvres and Banteux failed.

THE FIGHT FOR CAMBRAI



The British are still pounding away in their effort to capture Cambrai. London reports progress is being made and that the fighting line is within two miles of this important railroad center.

Berlin reports that the British attacks against Inchy, Moeuvres and Banteux have failed and that the Germans have forced the British out of Bourlon woods west of Cambrai.

COURT SENDS SUFFRAGISTS TO DISTRICT JAIL

Washington, D.C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Twenty-four suffrage pickets who have been serving terms at the workhouse at Occoquan, Va., today were ordered by United States Judge Edmund Waddill, sitting at Alexandria, Va., to be released from that institution and remanded back to the District of Columbia jail. Judge Waddill held that the district commissioners had no authority under the law to order the removal of the suffragists from the jail to the workhouse.

When court convened today, the suffragists who had been brought to Alexandria under a writ of habeas corpus appeared to be in cheerful mood after the proceedings of yesterday. In addition to those imprisoned at Occoquan, Miss Lucy Burns and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis were present. Both have been on a hunger strike at the district jail and each showed the strain under which she has been laboring.

They were pale and appeared to be too weak to take much notice of the proceedings in court.

11 DIE BY BOMB IN MILWAUKEE POLICE STATION

Ten of Dead Policemen, One a Woman; Due to Church Plot.

seen by one of the scrub women, who thought nothing of her discovery, but later on thought the better of it and made a report to Miss Alice Richter, a district welfare worker.

Miss Richter made a cursory examination of the piece of iron pipe and became alarmed. It was she who called up the police station and asked that some one come to remove the thing.

Jauntily Carries Bomb.

It had been in the basement of the church for some time when Miss Richter, becoming alarmed, decided not to wait for the police. She then called Mazuinni and asked him to take the bomb to the police. Mazuinni seemed not to be alarmed by the possession of the explosive and carried it jauntily away.

Arm Is Blown Off.

Of the injured detectives Louis Hartmant received the greatest injury. His right arm was blown off and for a time it was thought he could not recover. Every ambulance in the downtown portion was called into use. A number of those whose names could not be obtained were taken to hospitals.

Wives and relatives of the slain policemen in the crowd about the wrecked police station wept and called upon the police for aid. Several incidents showed the temper of the crowd. A policeman came past with a prisoner. The man in the clutch of the policeman had nothing to do with the affair, but some one shouted:

"That's him!"

Police Check Mob.

"Kill him," came the instant response from hundreds of throats and a rush of police reserves was necessary to check the fury of the mob. John O'Brien, the son of Detective O'Brien, who was killed, was in a frenzy of anxiety. He saw Detective Maloney, a friend of his father's and himself, injured, and leaped upon him, crying: "Tell me, Bart, is he dead? Is dad dead?"

The grief of the boy sent other relatives into hysterics and the scene became more heart rending as the night advanced.

SCHUETTLER SENDS MEN.

When Chief of Police Herman F. Schuettler received information of the bomb explosion in Milwaukee last night he was at his home and immediately went to his office in the city hall.

Detective Sergeant Make Mills, who has been anarchist investigator and explosive expert for the police department, and Julien Bernacchi, head of the "blackhand squad," were sent to Milwaukee at midnight to assist the Milwaukee police.

MORE SAILORS

Daniels to Ask Authority to Increase Enlisted Strength by 50,000 Men.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—One of the important recommendations which will be included in a communication to be submitted to congress by Secretary of the Navy Daniels as soon as that body reconvenes, will be to increase the authorized enlisted strength of the navy by 50,000 men.

It is intended that these additional men will be used in manning the destroyers and other numerous naval auxiliaries now under construction, and to replace the civilian crews on merchantmen under charter to the navy department and being used as transports.

'ALL UNITED, NOW WE WIN': NORTHCLIFFE

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Viscount Northcliffe, who was head of the British mission to the United States for the coördination of war work, tonight gave the Associated Press the following statement on the war situation:

"This has been distinctly the best week of the war. I refer not only to Gen. Byng's success but to that of Col. House and Premier Lloyd George, who have been 'buttoning things up,' to use an expression of the colonel's.

"The days of the waste of life and treasure caused by the allies' mutual ignorance of one another's plans are nearly over. American soldiers, sailors, and business men and their British colleagues have been working overtime.

"It would not be wise to talk of details, but as I never have been backward in criticizing inefficiency, I should be lacking in justice if I did not speak of the high efficiency of this week's conference. There was no 'glorious British constitution and Fourth of July' hot air about the proceedings. It was realized that time is the most valuable asset of war. There was little banqueting and there were no parades, yet I venture to say that the greatest move toward victory yet made in any theater of the war was executed in London this week.

"The prospects of the Paris conference are fine. The war is at last becoming what it always should have been—a close business partnership of the allies."

THREAT TO BOMB WILSON IS TOLD AT HEARING HERE

Mrs. Emilie Kempinska hadn't nurtured her husband these years to make of him a soldier. Fact is, Stanley Grunewicz testified before Mark A. Foote, United States commissioner, she remarked that before she'd let the Germans gas him she'd gas him herself from the kitchen supply and take a dose of it herself.

The Kempinskas, the Dilenskis, and the Grunewiczes used to be good friends. Mrs. Kempinska used to teach Grunewicz's daughter piano. All of them used to sit around the gardens. Their mugs were Dutch treats, but finally the Kempinskas got in Dutch for their anti-American sentiments, it is said.

"If we had a revolution I would put a bomb under President Wilson and then leave the country,'" Mrs. Kempinska once remarked, said Grunewicz.

"The Germans killed three brothers of mine," said Marion Dilenski. "I'm going to enlist."

And the things that the Kempinskas—Emilie and Stanley—said at that time lined up Mr. Dile[illegible]i against them in court. Commissioner Foote continued the case until Tuesday. The Kempinskas live at 1048 North Ashland avenue; the Dilenskis at 2614 Haddon avenue. Mr. Kempinska is, or was, connected with a Polish newspaper.

Grunewicz also testified that Frank Cinger of 1645 North Park avenue, had declared that Germany could lick the world and any one was a fool to stick to the United States. Also, he said, Cinger has said "big money" could be made by getting jobs for Poles in ammunition plants. Cinger denied all this and charged "spite work."

Cave Man's Bride Fails to Get Marriage Annulled

Miss Nancy Rizzo, who was kidnaped and forced into marriage last June by Sam Sasso, failed to obtain the annullment of her marriage yesterday. Judge Joseph H. Fitch refused to annul the marriage because the bill was not filed properly. The case was continued for a week.

J. W. Donaldson Married to Daughter of Gen. Du Pont

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Miss Renee de Pelleport Du Pont, youngest daughter of Gen. and Mrs. Du Pont, and John Wilcox Donaldson, son of Mrs. Nannie Biere Donaldson of New York, were married at 7:30 o'clock tonight in Trinity Episcopal church.

MUSIC IN WAR TIME

The emotions of the human soul find an outlet at times like the present in this most sublime of arts.

It is music that has the faculty of lifting us out of despondency and lightening the burdens which these momentous times are laying on all.

Music should ring from one end of the country to the other to help make heavy hearts lighter and more courageous.

An opportunity that will be eagerly seized by ambitious music lovers, both young and old, is being extended by the largest school of its kind in America, the U. S. School of Music of New York.

By an entirely new and amazingly simple and easy method for teaching music—a system originated by this institution—more than 240,000 pupils have been successfully trained in their own homes—no matter where situated—to play the Piano, Violin, Mandolin, Banjo, Organ, Cornet, Harp, Sight Singing, Guitar, Cello, Clarinet, Trombone, Piccolo, Flute, Saxophone, Ukulele.

The management has decided to accept a limited number to whom full courses of instruction will be given without charge in order to further stimulate interest in this new system of HOME STUDY in MUSIC, for either the absolute beginner or those already advanced.

All those who apply at once will be enrolled for free scholarships—only a very small charge being made to cover the expense for postage and the sheet music required for lessons. The school is located at 225 Fifth Ave., New York City, and any one interested can obtain full particulars simply by addressing a postal to the President, Mr. D. F. Kemp, Dept. 5211.

X-RAY EYE OF COL. HOUSE TO STUDY FRANCE'S HEART

U. S. Envoy Will Not Let Official Camouflage Deceive Him.

BY LINCOLN EYRE.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

PARIS, Nov. 24.—It is the intention of Col. House to obtain during his stay here "as complete a picture of wartime France as it is possible for any one to get in so short a time."

I have this on the authority of a member of the misson closely associated with the colonel. To put this picture on canvas the president's missionary will use many different kinds of paint—that is, he will see many different kinds of Frenchmen and not confine himself to government officials alone. At the conclusion of his visit the chief of one of the foreign missions to the United States asked Col. House, I was told, whether in the latter's opinion he had really learned what American was like.

"No," the colonel replied, "you haven't."

Official Camouflage.

"Do I even know anything about New York City," the distinguished visitor inquired.

"No, you don't even know anything about New York," was the reply, and Col. House went on to explain that nobody could gain any real understanding of America from talking with the men who are running things at Washington or New York—and the foreign envoy had talked with nobody else.

Col. House is resolved to acquire a larger knowledge of France than that visitor obtained of the United States. To the inter-allied conference the colonel will, of course, devote his first few days here, conferring with the members of the ministry and other governmental personages. He had a long conversation with the premier this morning and was delighted with Clemenceau's fluent command of the English language, which enabled the statesmen to talk together without a third person being present.

To Test "Man in Street."

Once necessary official consultations are concluded the colonel expects to meet and converse with a number of individuals not connected with the government. From these talks he means to gain a comprehensive idea of the true state of mind of the French people, the fashion in which they are bearing the increasing burden of war, and the diverse currents of opinion running through the country.

He wants to know what "the man in the street" thinks of the situation and how he feels about the United States. The light in which the French nation views American efforts in the war is a matter of keen interest to him.

Meanwhile his associates have started a series of conferences on the technical problems which they will discuss with the authorities here. Gen. Bliss has been in almost continuous conference with Gen. Pershing, and will meet Gen. Petain tomorrow. He also is expected to call on Gen. Joffre. Admiral Benson spent several hours today closeted with the naval experts in the ministry of marine. Mr. Crosby went to the ministry of finance and Mr. McCormick to the blockade department, and Mr. Colby to the shipping bureau.

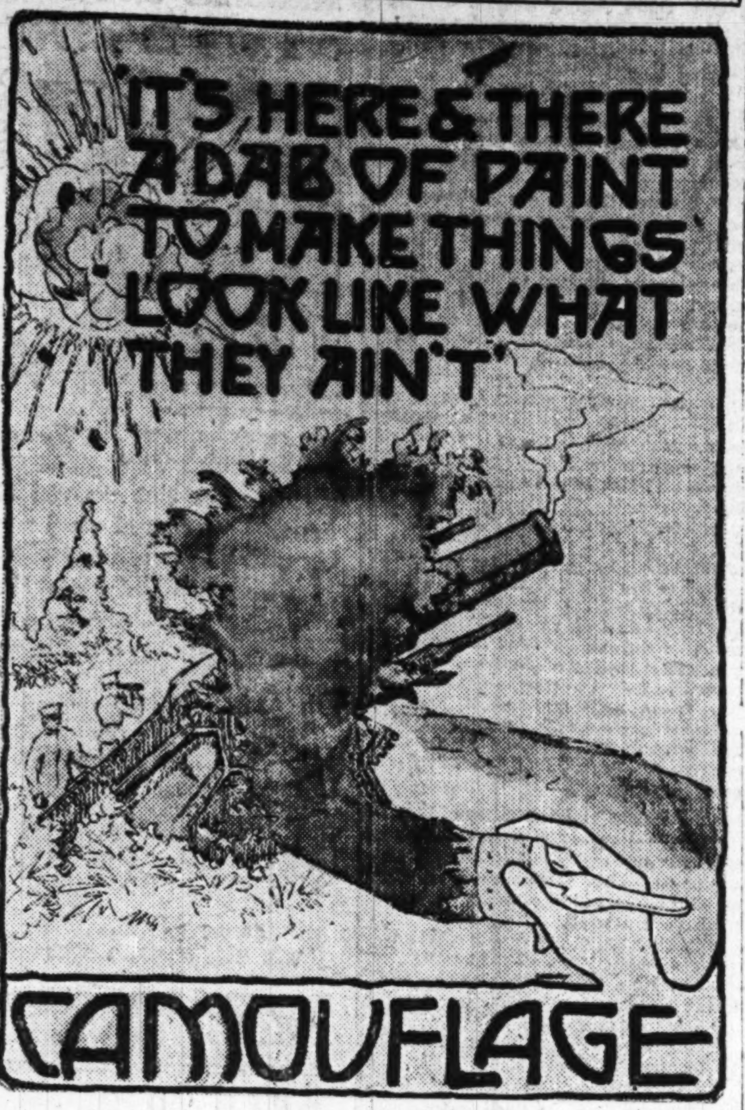
Marshal Joffre, Gen. Petain, and former Premier Viviani were among President Poincaré's guests at his luncheon in honor of the American mission today. Only informal conversations occurred.

DIPHTHERIA SPREADS.

Thirty-six new cases of diphtheria and three deaths were reported to Health Commissioner Robertson's office yesterday. One new case of infantile paralysis was also reported.

THE ART OF CAMOUFLAGE

Art Institute Students and Others to Take Up Study Here for Service Abroad.



IT'S HERE & THERE A DAB OF PAINT TO MAKE THINGS LOOK LIKE WHAT THEY AIN'T CAMOUFLAGE

Camouflage has come to Chicago. In a few weeks some 200 artists and students in the Art institute may be camouflaging all over Grant park. Very quietly, a few weeks ago, a number of young men of the institute began the organization of a "camouflage unit."

Last week army circles began to take a real interest in the movement and it was announced that 300 men are wanted for the unit and it is understood that, after tutelage here under experts, they will be sworn in in a body and sent to France.

The plan is to use Grant park for the primary education, but the postgraduate course will be overseas. In the meantime the boys are drilling and drawing posters boosting the movement, which is to make things look like what they are not.

It is likely that some trenches and quaker guns will be used in camouflage practice in the park. Outsiders who would camouflage can get information by applying at the office of the Art institute school.

WAR ADDS 20,000 TO U. S. PAY ROLL AT WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—Twenty thousand employés have been added to the government departments in Washington since the declaration of war, said an announcement today by the civil service commission. On these figures the commission estimated that the population of the capital had increased 40,000.

The war department has added 5,200 employés to its Washington offices, and the navy department about 2,500, including 800 women who enlisted as yeomen and who are doing clerical work.

In order to provide living accommodations for the added employés, the government has rented many new buildings, including apartment houses.

Including the new employés in Washington, the civil service has certified for appointment since April nearly 125,000 persons in the field and departmental service.

FIRE TRUCK AS AMBULANCE.

No ambulance or other conveyance being available the motor truck of fire squad No. 1 was pressed into service yesterday when John Kuros of 853 Milwaukee was slightly hurt by a Division street car at West Lake and North Dearborn streets.

U-BOATS LEAD OAK PARKER TO BECOME AVIATOR

David H. Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mills of 623 North East avenue, Oak Park, a survivor of two U-boat attacks, has given up the attempt to return to the United States and join the army. A cable received yesterday by his parents announced that he had enlisted in France in the United States aviation section.

Mills had been driving an ambulance in France and his term expired shortly before the Antilles sailed. He started home on that boat and was rescued when it was torpedoed and returned to Paris.

He tried again on the Finland, and again had to return to France when a U-boat sent that ship to the bottom. His purpose in trying to come home, his parents say, was to enter some branch of the government military service.

MIZPAH TAKEN BY THE BRITISH; TURKS ROUTED

Site of Ancient City Close to Jerusalem Is Captured.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The site of ancient Mizpah, 5,000 yards west of the Jerusalem-Nabulus road, has been stormed by the British, the war office announces. British mounted troops which had advanced northward were forced back by the Turks.

The mounted troops had approached Beit Una, and after being driven back took up a position at Beit Ur el-Foka (12 miles northwest of Jerusalem).

The statement also says the enemy has bombarded the traditional tomb of the prophet Samuel.

British Official Report.

"On Wednesday," the official report says, "we stormed the Nebi Samwil ridge, the site of the ancient Mizpah, which is 5,000 yards west of the Jerusalem-Nabulus road. Repeated counter attacks by the Turks have been beaten off. The enemy has bombarded the mosque containing the tomb of the prophet Samuel, which we carefully avoided.

"Our mounted troops, which had approached Beit Una on Wednesday, were forced back by a strong counter attack and are now holding Beit Ur el-Foka, on the upper Beth Horon.

Weather Bright and Cold.

"After a heavy rain the weather is now bright and cold.

"Gen. Allenby reports that the successful action of Monday, when the enemy was driven from the defile west of Kuryet el-Enab, was due to the gallantry of the Somersets, the Wiltshires, and the Gurkhas."

ZAPATA LOSES ALL DAY BATTLE

Mexico City, Nov. 24.—The campaign recently started by Gen. Pablo Gonzales to restore order in the state of Morelos has resulted in successes, according to reports reaching Mexico City today.

In a recent engagement at Cuautla, which lasted all day and was accompanied by a heavy bombardment, many adherents of Zapata, the outlaw leader, were killed. Heavy casualties among the inhabitants of the town resulted.

After the battle the government forces entered Cuautla.

First Ship in Emergency Fleet for U. S. Is Launched

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 24.—Seattle sent its first direct blow at kaiserism this afternoon when the 8,800 ton steel freighter Seattle slipped down the ways here. The Seattle is the first vessel to be launched under the building program of the United States shipping board emergency fleet corporation. It was finished on record time.

Strike Bernstorff's Name Off College Roll

Lancaster, Pa., Nov. 24.—At a meeting of the board of trustees of Franklin and Marshall college, Count Bernstorff's name was stricken from the rolls. The degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon him in 1912.

WAR COLLEGE SLAPS PAPER CREEL ISSUES

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—The "Official Bulletin," publication medium of the committee on public information, heads the list of twenty newspapers listed by the army war college as having violated the voluntary war censorship. The war college reports that there have been several violations recently which are regarded as serious.

George Creel's paper, as the Bulletin has been called, offended, according to the list now in the hands of the war department censor, in publishing complete lists of officers assigned to divisions.

It is held by army officers who have relations with the censorship that information of this character is the most valuable that could come to the enemy.

Army Journal Critic.

New York, Nov. 24.—[Special.]—The Army and Navy Journal, in an editorial, "News from the Front," sharply criticizes the army and navy departments and the committee on public information for the way in which the war is being reported in the public press of this country. It decries the restrictions placed on news by the government and the way in which it is served up by the committee on public information.

"The public over here does not know just where our troops are stationed in France," the editorial asserts, "nor where they are fighting; and in this respect we are unlike any other belligerent nation in the world today. What news the correspondents are permitted to send from abroad is fragmentary and in most cases incredibly silly."

IOWA GIRL WEDS LIEUTENANT.

Waterloo, Ia., Nov. 24.—Miss Marian Ham, daughter of Clifford D. Ham, collector general of customs of Nicaragua, and granddaughter of M. M. Ham, founder of the Dubuque Telegraph Herald, was married today to Lieut. Eugene B. Noyes of the Three Hundred and Twenty-second field artillery, Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, O. This was the first military wedding to take place in Waterloo.

BRANDS FORMER FRENCH PREMIER TREASON CHIEF

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Under the bold caption, "I Accuse M. Caillaux," Gustave Herve, in La Victoire, charges former Premier Joseph Caillaux with being the center of the whole campaign for a dishonorable, ruinous peace. M. Herve concludes:

"You said, sir, that when you found the man who brought against you something besides insinuations and twaddling gossip, who dared accuse you outright, you would prosecute him at the assizes as a slanderer. I am your man, sir; prosecute me. I will produce my proofs and witnesses before a jury."

As a result of the publication of the Herve article in La Victoire, M. Caillaux today began proceedings against M. Herve.

SERVICE FLAG DESIGN CAUSE OF A DISPUTE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Discussion of patent rights to the service flags now being flown by firms, clubs, and individuals with representatives in the fighting ranks brought a statement from Secretary of War Baker that no official flag had been adopted by the war department.

A Cleveland man has obtained patent rights on a flag design now much in use and is said to have claimed 10 per cent royalty from manufacturers of the flag.

A New York manufacturer of a service flag is understood to have been advised by the Cleveland man that the flag he is manufacturing conflicts with his patent rights. He has made a claim of royalty on this firm.

There is no means, however, of collecting royalty payments from those who have purchased and are now displaying service flags.

U. S. MUST PLAN FOR TWO MORE YEARS OF WAR

Editor Says That Peace by Victory Is Still Far Off.

BY C. M. LINCOLN.

[Editorial Staff New York World.]

Mr. Lincoln has been in England for the last month and has just returned to this country. The result of his observations are embodied in the following notes:

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

A military decision over Germany of peace compelling magnitude will not come in 1918. If the force of the United States is to be the ultimate determining factor, it is now realized, and fully, that the United States cannot have its full strength in the field before 1919. Britain, recalling her own first year of the war and with only the English channel between her and the conflict, appreciates the tremendous task that the United States faces, the overcoming of the Atlantic ocean; and there are few of her military men who believe that their new ally can reach anything like her full momentum in France in time for the smashing fighting that will characterize next spring and summer. Britain sees no peace in 1918 as things stand.

Two Years More at Least.

Germany's rush into Italy illustrates most strongly the tremendous advantage she possesses in being able to fight across a diameter while her adversaries are compelled to fight around the circumference of that diameter. Far greater results are possible to the allies in 1919 than in 1918, and men in high places are gradually mentioning 1920 as the possible year of the peace conference. The United States must look ahead to two years of hard fighting at the very least, and the nation faces the hardest task and the severest test in its history.

England's prime minister, Lloyd George, may cross for a short visit to Canada and the United States next year if events permit his absence. It is a possibility. If he comes America will understand him at once and it will like him immensely. In some ways he is much like Roosevelt, especially in the matter of energy. He has not, however, the colonel's physical heaviness. He is as alert and quick as a boy. A few Sunday afternoons ago came the bad news from Italy. A hurried conference followed at the famous little house at Walton Heath, and Robertson, Britain's chief of staff, was rushed off for Italy. An hour or so later the prime minister was singing Welsh hymns for his guest.

Sings Welsh Hymns.

With a little old hymn book propped up on the small upright piano and lighted by a candle on either side, Lloyd George put his cares completely aside and for an hour gave himself over to the sonorous music of the old Welsh hymns he dearly loves. Later that night he wrote the speech which he read in commons the next afternoon in praise of the navy and the army of the empire—a speech which carried comfort and inspiration into every home in England. He is a man of uncommon courage and determination and he is absolutely convinced of the triumph of the allies. Events in England have made the prime minister almost a man without a party, but his position is strong. He is acknowledged by his foes to be the man for the place.

England has not even begun to approach her full efficiency. She is doing a tremendous work in many parts of the world and without half of the "back to the wall" stimulant that pervades Germany.

Cost of the War.

It is reckoned that the war to date has cost Great Britain about $16,000,000,000. Just at present she is spending about $33,000,000 a day, her high water mark. It was stated in commons a day or two since that if the war lasts another twelve months Great Britain's national debt will be equal to the pre-war national debts of France, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Russia, and the United States added together. But Bonar Law points out that Germany is in far worse state, having spent thus far $23,000,000,000, not including the amounts she has advanced to her allies. Bonar Law draws this picture of the relative financial positions of the two countries: If the war ceased today Great Britain could meet her interest on the national debt and her current expenditure out of present revenue, whereas Germany would have to raise many hundreds of millions or declare herself bankrupt.

When Will It End? The Answer!

Ask any one in London when the war is going to end and you may get this:

Positive evidence have I none,
But my aunt's charwoman's sister's son
Heard a policeman on his beat
Say to a housemaid in Downing street
That he had a brother who had a friend
Who knew when the war was going to end.

It is becoming an easy and increasingly popular way of answering the question.

Varieties of Uniform.

In the streets of London there are probably more different varieties of uniforms visible than were ever seen in any city in the world before. Even the wearers themselves are often puzzled by the variety of insignia. And every breast bears a riband, or ribands; some simple, but most of them elaborate. Every conceivable combination of colors and hues is shown in the little strips. From their number it might almost be assumed that they represent everything from the Victoria Cross to singing in the choir.

U. S. Destroyers Effective.

There is, of course, no prospect at present that Americans will know until after the war the part that their destroyers are playing in the hunt for the submarines. But it may be said that they are fully up to their assignments in the British plan, and both ships and men are being heartily commended by their British associates.

More than one German submarine has undoubtedly been sunk by Yankee gunners, and not long ago two of the destroyers were especially commended by the British naval authority supervising their sphere of activity. Two German mine layers have recently been accounted for by American destroyers. One was captured and taken into a British port and the other was sunk—sunk in the Irish sea by one of its own mines through a clever piece of strategy.

The Americans are using the depth bomb, of course, and it is a very effective agent of destruction, carrying 360 pounds of "TNT." It explodes at a certain depth and is practically certain to sink any submarine within 125 yards in any direction. Not a very good radius to be sure, but a rather effective weapon when submarines are at close quarters or can be located and approached.

Women Worthy of Men.

Of only the American forces is it true that their families, relatives, and friends will know practically nothing of where they are and what they are doing. The English and French have a system of "leaves," whereby officers and men may leave the camps and battle lines occasionally and return to civilization for brief periods. The streets of London and Paris are constantly peopled with men on leave.

Germany also has a well ordered system whereby her soldiers may occasionally see their families. London is fairly crowded with women who come here from all parts of the kingdom. And these women are worthy of their men. When the 11 o'clock Continental Express leaves Charing Cross, they are there for a few cheering words—no tears, only smiling faces and waving hands. But unless conditions of publicity are amended the Americans must do their work with the hundreds of thousands vitally interested in them left almost entirely in the dark as to where they are or what they are doing—unless the coming casualty lists be excepted.

Some men who perhaps know whereof they speak assert that Germany has recently perfected a gun that will shoot a projectile twenty-seven miles.

U-Boat Menace Decreasing.

Surface indications regarding the possible sinkings of German submarines are not accepted by the British. Oil and bubbles on the surface after an engagement are not admitted as real evidence of destruction. The "carcass" must be definitely found before the U-boat is reported as destroyed.

The British are confident that the undersea menace is steadily decreasing and they have good reasons for their confidence. In thirty-seven weeks since the Germans began their drive 650 ships of over 1,600 tons have been sunk; 235 under 1,600 tons have been sunk; 160 fishing vessels have been sunk, and there have been more than 190,000 arrivals and sailings from British ports. British waters furnish an impressive spectacle. Ships of all sorts and sizes come and go about their business in absolute disregard of the "frightfulness" of Berlin. And many an unsung trawler has put up a fight with a German submarine that were worthy of Kipling's best.

For a Commercial War.

Commercial England plans already for an unending war on commercial Germany. Gone is the complacency and self-satisfaction of old. There is a demand for the immediate destruction of the "remaining German businesses" and for the enactment of measures to prevent their resuscitation after the war. Sir Edward Carson expressed fully the national feeling when he recently said: "We must destroy in every country every German business and get their businesses for ourselves. We can, and ought, to do that now!"

And England is looking westward, too, in this matter. She realizes that the United States must perforce become again a great shipbuilding nation. She realizes that vast yards for the construction of ships are coming into being in America and that these yards will not revert to grass when the war is over. The British postmaster general, Illingworth, represents a strong body of the English government in his advocacy of stopping all textiles to Germany after the war. Germany's commercial success has depended in large measure upon her products from Autralian wool, American, Egyptian and Indian cotton, French silk, and flax in large quantities from many allied countries.

Complete coöperation of the allies in this important matter would do almost incalculable damage to Germany.

Will Bar the Hun.

France, too, in the midst of her trial, is finding time for consideration of what can be done to punish Germany with the weapons of peace. A very striking poster is going across France like a flame. It is on walls, on posts, fences, buildings, inside the little wayside cafés, even in the smallest village. It is a picture of two men.

On the left is a "Hun." With bared arms he carries in his right hand a knife dripping with blood and in his left hand a blazing torch. On the right is a presentation of a commercial traveler, approaching with what sauvity he can muster, with hat in one hand and his case of "samples" in the other. Beneath the two pictures are these words: "This Hun, who bombed, burned, and pillaged, and this commercial traveler who calls for your orders, wants to sell his wares and wants to settle once more in our midst, are one and the same man! Never forget it! When the war is over we shall make it our business to let you know what is 'made in Germany.'" The poster is issued by the significantly named "Remember League of France."

Raids Strain Nerves.

The air raids made by the Germans over and near London may not have much military value but they have certainly got on the nerves of the British capital. Every clear evening there is a wave of apprehension that is exactly like the apprehension that pervades a passenger ship as it is about to enter the U-boat zone. "Of course, nothing is going to happen, but still ——" And London has good reason for apprehension, although the bombs dropped have altogether done very little actual damage. The British have made strong efforts to protect their capital from night raiders.

When the Germans come the noise of their propellers is almost invariably caught by the listeners on the coast and the warning is telegraphed far and wide. Up go the defending planes—England's "cavalry of the clouds," as Lloyd George poetically calls them—and up goes a tremendous barrage fire of shrapnel. High indeed must the invaders go to get safely by and within striking distance of their mark.

Punish the Indiscreet.

The panes of all the street lights have been so painted that "lights" is hardly merited. Faring forth at night in London is interesting. Perhaps you will get back to your hotel intact and perhaps you won't. Which is in distinct contrast to Paris, where the lights still shine through untouched glass, although the volume of the lighting has been diminished.

With the coming of cold weather, however, London expects that the menace from the air will be less to be dreaded. One German invader was recently forced up four miles into a temperature of 30 degrees below zero. Several German planes and Zeppelins have recently been put out of commission through the extreme cold to which they have been driven.

Planes Are Heated.

As showing the German anticipation of such conditions it may be mentioned that a German plane brought down a few days since was found to contain a large supply of provisions, stimulants, and an ingenious warming apparatus electrically heated by a motor driven from the propeller. The men who are watching Germany's developments in the air believe that their enemy will not altogether cease his air raids during the winter months but that he will come over whenever conditions are favorable. Germany is working feverishly night and day on her air program to meet the American effort in this direction, whatever it may be, and also to be in position to strike at London in the spring harder than ever. All of Germany's air service is under one head. Not thus in London, where the different branches, navy, army, etc., each marks out its own program. Hence the agitation in London for a centralized direction of all aviation production and affairs, which will probably soon culminate in the creation of a new official, the minister of aviation.

Fix Price of Cloth.

Standard cloth for men's suits is on the way. The cloth will be produced at about $1.50 a yard and the suits will cost about $12 or $13. The cloth manufacturers will produce at a fixed price; the clothiers will make the suits, supplying linings and trimmings, and sell them at a fixed price to the retailers, who will sell them at a fixed price to customers. Steps probably will be taken soon to supply standard flannel early next year.

This war is proving a fascinating study for the men of the medical world. In many other wars there have been from six to nine deaths from disease to one in battle. It has been carefully computed that in this war there has been one death from disease to sixteen in battle. Of the wounded men who have survived six hours, nine out of ten have recovered. Of those of the wounded who have reached field hospitals alive, 95 out of 100 have recovered. Of the wounded who have reached base hospitals, 98 out of every 100 have been saved. Barely 5 per cent of the wounded will be permanently crippled or disabled. There have been almost innumerable cases of men being wounded four or five times and getting back into the thick of it again after each recovery.

American Nurse Superior.

The American trained nurse is meeting with enthusiastic commendation of both British and French authorities. They believe she will be fully equal to what is ahead, and acknowledge that she is far superior to the average nurse of Europe.

The anonymity of the British aviator is one of the striking things of the war. They have done and are doing magnificent work, and they are doing it without any desire for the acclaim that would follow the telling of their deeds. The British aviators know that their comrades who lead their men in going over the top remain anonymous, and because this is practically necessarily so, the aviators wish to remain anonymous themselves. One of them had forty-six enemy planes to his credit up to a few days ago. British reserve has never been more finely expressed than in this war.

A young naval officer has recently received the Victoria Cross. Through a new form of camouflage he recently sank three German submarines in one day, in a way a parallel of Weddigen's feat of sinking three British cruisers in one engagement early in the war, the Aboukir, Cressy, and Hogue. But whereas Weddigen at once became—and will ever remain—one of Germany's widely known sea heroes, the young British officer remains unknown save to the navy and the few with whom the men of the navy come in contact. Neither the name of the man nor a description of what he did will be printed.

Cold Winter Ahead.

London faces a cold winter. In the first nine months of this year the quantity of coal raised in the mines of the United Kingdom was 5,000,000 tons less than during the first nine months of last year. There must be great fuel economy. Already the medical profession is taking the keenest interest in the effects upon health. With an indoor temperature far below the normal certain, scientists are confident that valuable lessons will be learned. Will the lower temperature cause an increase or decrease in the illnesses that accompany winter?

Paris is in better state as regards coal. The French capital suffered severely last winter, and this year tremendous efforts have been made to provide an adequate supply of coal, and the efforts have been fairly successful.

Great Britain may yet come to the rations principle. A vigorous campaign for voluntary food economy is on to make this drastic step unnecessary. Unless the campaign accomplishes marked results, "rations" will come within a few months. There has been a steady rise in the price of food since the war began. It amounted to little in 1915, but in 1916 the rise was much more noticeable, and for the first six months of 1917 the rise of prices over those of the same period of 1916 was most marked. Taking the bulk of the articles of general consumption together, there was a rise on July 1, 1917, of 104 per cent on pre-war prices. On Sept. 1, 1917, they had risen by 105.6 per cent.

Profiteers Are Curbed.

Then came government action. By Oct. 1 the percentage of increase had gone down to 97.3. The efforts of the food controller are getting results. And the profiteers, big and little, are being watched. This year's potato crop will be well over 2,000,000 tons in excess of last year's, but it will not do, however, to try to make more money out of the sale of potatoes than the law allows. One persistent offender was recently taken into court and fined £100 for each one of thirty-seven established offenses, £3,700, a lesson that will probably not be lost upon others. Bacon is 65 cents a pound, sugar is becoming almost a curiosity, and there is only a quarter of the amount of last year's stock of tea in bond.

But vegetables are cheap and plentiful, and meats, while "up," are at about New York prices, with far more served to the order. England will pull through all right on the food question, and such sacrifices as she is compelled to make will do her good in the long run. The League of National Safety, organized only a few days ago, already has 13,000 members and is rapidly growing. Its object is the propaganda of individual food economy, and it will conduct a campaign of education all over the country.

Series of Suggestions.

Some of the practical suggestions its head has made are:

Simpler meals of two courses only at midday or evening dinner at least three days a week.

Extended use of communal kitchens.

Better preparation of food.

Much fuller use of vegetables and fruit.

No butter at dinner.

Extra vegetables in place of bread at luncheon and dinner.

No cream except for invalids and children.

No tea except for the tea meal.

No open sugar bowl.

No ham or bacon for breakfast.

Women are to be seen in practically all of the occupations. A new illustration of their willingness and adaptability is given at Ascot, where large numbers are engaged in cutting down trees to be used for military purposes.

War Leveling Castes.

During the last three years Cecil and Tommy have been pulling each other through the mud of Flanders and they have become pretty good pals. They really know each other now and each has a proper respect for the other.

What will happen when the war is over and they come back by the million to England once more? Things are bound to be different. Far from the least important of the results of the war will be what follows the leveling of this vast army of Englishmen. It seems to be certain that one good result will be that the men of the leisure class, having learned the meaning of work, will stick to it after the war is over.

France Swept by Patriotism; Cabinet Is Strong for Entente

BY EX-ATTACHE.

Patriotism may be said to constitute the keynote of the new administration in France. It was patriotism that caused President Poincaré to lay aside all his resentment against Senator Georges Clemenceau, who had been his most relentless and savage political adversary, and intrust him with the task of forming a cabinet. It was patriotism, too, that caused Clemenceau, now in his seventy-fifth year, to sacrifice his ease, to sink all those personal animosities which he may be said to have nursed, and even to have cherished, to agree to loyally coöperate for the welfare of France.

Senator Jules Pams, the new minister of the interior, was the principal rival of President Poincaré in the latter's election to the chief magistracy of the republic, running a close second, while another candidate in the race was Stephen Pichon, the new minister of foreign affairs.

Makes Patriotic Appeal.

Patriotism, too, was the dominant note in every line of the remarkable speech delivered by Clemenceau last Tuesday by way of ministerial manifesto of the program of his government, which so greatly moved all present that it resulted in a vote of confidence, by 418 to 65, the latter consisting exclusively of Socialists. The speech was not a long one, but it emphasized the fact that the one duty of the government, of the national legislature, and of the people was to stand by the soldier at the front. He also laid stress upon France's debt to her dead, to those who have given their lives for her sake during the last three years. Then only his strong, clear voice grew husky and trembled. Finally he pledged his government to bring to justice, regardless of personal or political considerations, those who have been engaged in pacifist campaigns and in German intrigues in France.

People Feel Confident.

It is because the entire nation appreciates the sincere and self-sacrificing patriotism of the president and of the leaders of the new cabinet, and believes in their single mindedness of purpose, that the people at large are manifesting a degree of confidence in the Clemenceau government that none of its predecessors enjoyed. His fellow countrymen know that Clemenceau, with all his faults of temperament and his fits of passionate rage, now somewhat softened, it is true, by age, is absolutely fearless. The other cabinets, which have gone before, have always hesitated on the ground of political expediency and of personal influences to deal in a drastic fashion with those whom Clemenceau in his inaugural speech described as guilty of "treason and of semi-treason."

Split Among Socialists.

As long as Clemenceau adheres to his program of Tuesday last, he will retain the support of the chamber of deputies. The latter is divided into a number of parties, of which the Radical-Socialist union is the most numerous and the most powerful. Recently, however, there have been dissensions in the Radical-Socialist union, owing to the Radicals declining to countenance pacifist propaganda, either in France or abroad, and the result of the Radical secession from the Socialist party was apparent in Tuesday's vote at the Palais Bourbon. Of course the Socialists are bitterly opposed to the new government, knowing that they will receive but little mercy at its hands. But alone they can do nothing.

Important to Americans.

To the American people it is of immense advantage that Clemenceau should be prime minister of France at this particular juncture when the United States is called upon to play a more important rôle in the policies of the powers of the entente and to bring about a greater unity of action with them and among them than heretofore. Clemenceau possesses in a very full measure a profound knowledge of the life, ideals, and conditions of the American people, acquired during a residence of several years in the United States. Moreover, his perfect mastery of the English language will enable him to communicate without the assistance of an interpreter with his fellow Celt, Premier David Lloyd George, who cannot speak or understand French.

Other Cabinet Members.

Next to Clemenceau, the most important member of his cabinet, from an American point of view, is Stephen Pinchon, the new minister of foreign affairs. He was brought into intimate contact with Americans during the siege of the legations, and the subsequent international occupation of Peking, as well as some years earlier while envoy in Hayti and San Domingo, where he managed to settle a number of troublesome difficulties resulting from German intrigues and ambitions in the island.

Next in importance is Senator Jules Pams, the new minister of the interior. He has a certain hold and means of pressure on the Socialist adversaries of the government to which he belongs. At the presidential election he was a close second to Poincaré.

Through the advent to power of Clemenceau, and of his cabinet, an extraordinary intrigue has been nipped in the bud.

OPERA BOMBER SPENDS BUSY DAY AT REPUDIATING

Dreams Make Him Deny, Then Affirm, and Then Deny Confession.

It was "repudiation day" for Reinhold A. Faust, confessed Auditorium bomb thrower, yesterday. He first declared his confession to Chief Schuettler was a hoax, then signed his original confession, and then still later repudiated it again.

A "dream" of the night before was declared by him to be the impelling motive of the repudiation. He said he could furnish a complete alibi, but when his alibi witness appeared this plan was shattered. State's Attorney Hoyne now is proceeding on the theory that Faust, the opera bomb thrower of the operatic name, is attempting, by his evasions, to shield others.

Were You Nearby?

A "personal" in the want ad section of THE TRIBUNE this morning reads:

WANTED — PERSONS WHO ATTENDED opera Nov. 16, and were seated in the vicinity of where the bomb was exploded, who could identify the occupant of seat K 28, to communicate with H. F. Schuettler Monday to see if they can identify the man held for the crime.

Chief Schuettler explained last night that the police desire to build up as perfect a case as possible. Mrs. George C. Hixon of 999 Lake Shore drive is said to have identified a picture of Faust as that of a man who sat near her.

Questioned Again.

Faust spent the night in the Town Hall police station. He was taken to the state's attorney's office by Detective Sergeant Barden. He was immediately taken before Assistant State's Attorney Sullivan and Chief Schuettler and questioned anew.

It was then he made his first repudiation. He declared he had admitted his guilt to Chief Schuettler to "get peace and quiet." He denied, however, that he had been coerced into making a confession. He said his dream told him to deny his guilt. He said he could prove an alibi and said that instead of being in the opera audience a week ago Friday he was in the shop of Theodore P. Baron of 3019 Christiana avenue, at Logan boulevard and Milwaukee avenue.

Another Statement.

At this point Mr. Sullivan and Chief Schuettler started to leave the Criminal Court building. Seeing that he was about to be left alone in the custody of detectives, Faust made a hurried plea for an opportunity to make another statement. The chief and Sullivan returned. Faust announced that he had reconsidered his position and had decided to verify his original confession.

He was then given the typewritten sheets of the confession to read. He read each page and attached his signature to each. Then he signed the whole. Chief Schuettler and Sullivan then left the building and the reporters were permitted to talk with Faust. He instantly took occasion to repudiate his statement again.

His Dream.

"I sat in my cell last night," he said, "and had a dream. I leaned my head one way and it touched the bars. Then I leaned the other way and it touched the bars. That was when I had the dream."

He declined to explain what the dream was, but while he was making a rambling dissertation on the subject of his patriotism and his objection to German influence, a detective returned with Baron. Faust looked up.

"I know you," he said. "I was in your store on the night of the bomb."

The "alibi" fell with a crash. "No, you were not," said Baron. "That was the Tuesday before. I couldn't have seen you at 8:30 in the evening because I go home every night at 7:30."

Where He Got Explosives.

That seemed to let Faust out, and he fell back on the former device of repudiation. He declined to say where he obtained the explosives he possessed, and so was locked up again for the afternoon.

That Faust will probably be the first man in the United States to be tried under the recent "explosives act," passed on Oct. 6, was intimated yesterday by federal officials.

It is also probable that Faust will face charges of arson and sending threatening letters through the mails.

SCHOOL BOARD TO STAND BACK OF MISS SCHOCH?

Principal Declares She Rose When Anthem Was Played.

Miss Caroline Schoch's loyalty to the United States continued to provoke violent discussion in Wilmette, Glencoe, and Hubbard Woods yesterday, but the trustees of the New Trier high school, wherein Miss Schoch teaches German, preferred to remain calm.

Charges by the pupils of the school that Miss Schoch indicated anti-Americanism by failing to stand when "The Star Spangled Banner" was being played, are to be investigated, but they are based on neighborhood gossip, not facts, it was said. It was admitted by school officials that agents of the department of justice are investigating Miss Schoch's actions and also that a petition probably will be circulated asking for the removal of the German teacher. But the opinion was expressed that the school board would stand by the teacher with the conviction that a mountain is being made of a mole hill.

Stood With Others.

"I was in the room when the events alleged are supposed to have happened," said H. E. Brown, principal of the school. "Miss Schoch did stand when the anthem was being played and she did nothing to which exception could be taken. There is a rule in the school that when the pupils in the main body of the room are passing out, those under the balconies shall remain seated. Miss Schoch was seated under the balcony, watching the progress of the pupils out of the room.

"The pianist then played the national air a second time. I am convinced that Miss Schoch was paying more attention to the pupils and her duties than to the piano. She remained seated, as is the rule. Several of the pupils arose and she, still thinking of the rule, I believe, made a gesture for them to be seated with the idea that they were unthinkingly violating the rule of the balcony. When she realized what was being played she immediately arose. This is the whole incident and I think too much has been made of it."

"Unfortuntae Situation."

H. P. Williams of Glencoe, a trustee, said there "probably would be an investigation." He said he had never heard anything against Miss Schoch's reputation for loyalty. John A. Bellows of Wilmette, another trustee, said it was "an unfortunate situation." He declined to discuss it further.

Most of the agitation against the teacher is said to be confined to the body of pupils who have formed a sort of secret service to watch for violations of the loyalty code. It was said by a member of the faculty that the German class has fallen from 100 to between seventy and eighty members. This faculty member said that the morale of the teaching staff is being affected by the charges against Miss Schoch and that if her resignation is offered it would be accepted in the aid of the morale of the school.

In Miss Schoch's behalf it is pointed out that she is a member of the Red Cross, is a purchaser of Liberty bonds, and has been busy knitting for the soldiers.

CONSUL REPORTS VON DILLMONT'S HIGH FINANCE

Frutos Plaza Explains Methods Used by Alleged Spy.

Frutos Plaza, consul for Ecuador, knows about Arpad Egon von Dillmont, held by the government for alleged spy activities. According to Mr. Plaza, Von Dillmont had a habit of sending a secretary in advance to make appointments for him and demanding pay for the time spent filling such appointments.

Dillmont also told alluring tales of forming a $2,500,000 steamship corporation, whose ships were to ply between New York and Buenos Aires, and wound up by trying to sell Montgomery Ward & Co., which employs Mr. Plaza as manager of the Latin-American department, a list of names in Argentina for $130.

Plaza's Account.

According to Mr. Plaza, Von Dillmont, using the name if Dillmont, sent his secretary to Montgomery Ward's a year and a half ago. The secretary did not seem conversant with Latin-America, and Mr. Plaza suggested that the principal come.

"Mr. Dillmont's time is valuable," said the secretary, "and he will have to be paid for it." The suggestion of pay was declined with thanks, but two days later Dillmont put in a gratuitous appearance. He showed a glittering prospectus of the shipping concern, and after general talk on South American conditions, with which he seemed quite familiar, finally offered the list of names. This was declined.

Widely Known.

Mr. Plaza later saw his visitor at meetings of the Importers and Exporters' association of Chicago, where Dillmont spoke several times. He also met him on the elevated road and at one time Dillmont said he found South American sentiment, particularly in Argentina and Chile, distinctly pro-German. This was just before America's entry into the war.

The last Mr. Plaza heard of Von Dillmont was quite recently, when the latter appeared to be operating an association for the dissemination of trade information about South America. Mr. Plaza said he was called up by several concerns to which the association owed money and told that Dillmont had referred to Montgomery Ward & Co. as a concern with which he had "done business."

Gompers, 35 Years Head of A. F. of L., Is Re-elected

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor for thirty-five years, was reëlected today virtually without opposition, and with him were returned to office every officer of the federation except John B. Lennon, treasurer, who was defeated by Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Teamsters and Chauffeurs' union.

An effort to read into the defeat of Mr. Lennon a weakening of the position of President Gompers as a leader and a part victory for the small group of pacifists which has opposed him was scouted by prominent federation men. It was declared that when it was decided by Tobin's friends to run him for the office, Gompers announced an unequivocal policy of hands off.

U. S. THREATENS TO SEIZE MINES IN MICHIGAN

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Fuel Administrator Garfield issued another drastic manifesto today, threatening to seize Michigan coal mines unless the operators of the state live up to the government coal regulations and decrees.

The administrator declared that the government would operate the mines if the operators refuse to ship coal in accordance with government prices, which some of them are said to be preparing to defy.

FIND LOST BABY FROZEN TO DEATH

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 24.—After a twenty four hour search for Harold Coulter, 3 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Brice Coulter, residing four miles north of Brimfield, the little fellow was found dead in a neighbor's cornfield at 10:30 today.

Hundreds of farmers in the vicinity volunteered their services and aided in the search throughout the day and night only to find the little body partly frozen.

The little fellow wandered away from his home at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. He was lightly clad and wore neither a cap nor coat.

MUST SACRIFICE TO WIN VICTORY, VANDERLIP SAYS

Financier Asserts War Is Battle Between Luxury and Loyalty.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—"Business as usual" and "pleasure as usual" will not win the war, in the opinion of Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City bank of New York, who is in Washington directing the flotation of the $2,000,000,000 issue of war saving certificates.

Until luxuries and nonessential articles are eschewed by the American people, until the factories producing them are transformed into war industries, until the whole nation is mobilized in the production of war materials, the United States will not be in a position to win the war, at least without a prolonged and costly struggle, asserts the financier.

Luxuries Must Go.

"Either we stand by our luxuries or we stand by the government," he remarked epigrammatically.

He called attention to the fact that the United States has engaged to expend $19,000,000,000 this year, which is only $7,300,000,000 less than the government has expended in the entire previous 126 years of its existence and pronounced it impossible for the country to produce $19,000,000,000 worth of war supplies and at the same time turn out all the other articles consumed in peace times.

"Now it may be," said Mr. Vanderlip, "that the near future will show that democracy can stand the acid test that it is now being put to. It may be that the fact that the world must be saved from the Teutonic Hun and all that he stands for will get into the souls of the American people deep enough for them to forget for the time being their individual interests and bring them together as an efficient nation working toward a single end.

It's Not Tiddle-de-Winks.

"This war isn't tiddle-de-winks and we're going to find it out. But we are not yet awake to the fact that if we are going to play our part in winning this war—a part that is going to grow bigger and bigger—we have got to muster our full fighting strength as a nation.

"Nothing is surer than that America must be completely organized for war. This has been said thousands and thousands of times. But we have not done it yet.

"The government has a magnificently patriotic program: It is going to spend $19,000,000,000 during the present year. But are we going to make it possible for the government to spend this money, for it to go into the market and buy what it needs?

"Pleasure As Usual."

"At the present time the answer of the American people is 'no.' They insist upon 'business as usual' and 'pleasure as usual'; they insist upon entering the labor market in competition with the government, and by making heavy demands upon the man power of the country seriously crippling the war effort that the nation ought to be able to make.

"I believe that this answer is being given without a full realization of what it means, but that in no wise minimizes its effect. This 'no' stands as a great obstacle in the way of the government getting what it needs. And unless the government gets what it needs it is going to make a failure of this war. That is the hard, cold truth, and there is no use trying to dodge it.

Depleted Man Power.

"There is only so much man power in the country—a man power that, contrasted with normal times, has been greatly depleted by the drafting into the army of much of its most virile force.

"The people who insist upon 'business as usual' and 'pleasure as usual' are demanding from this depleted man power the same production of goods that an undepleted man power was kept busy producing in normal times.

"Now comes the government with a demand upon this overworked, depleted man power for the production in one year of $19,000,000,000 of additional goods!

"The conclusion is obvious. The man power of the nation is totally unable to meet the double demand that is being made upon it; some one must be left unsatisfied. The question that we Americans must answer is this: Is the unsatisfied bidder in the labor mraket to be the government or the individual? Is the government to get what it needs for war, or is the individual to continue to get what he got in normal times?

Labor Also a Problem.

"And then you have the trouble with the labor situation: We are asking labor to do more than it can do—there is not enough to go around."

"Shall we conscript labor?" he was asked.

"That is a hard thing to do," replied Mr. Vanderlip. "Before we resort to any such drastic methods in this country we should first make a big effort to get people to release labor. If the government's dollar is outbid just so much man power has been taken from the war effort that the nation can make.

"The rule holds good all along the line, from millionaire to laborer.

"Congress can appropriate money, but that does not fight the war. The treasury department can float bonds; neither does that fight the war. Appropriations and bonds are worthless unless they can buy and deliver munitions to the fighting forces. It is simply a matter of what can be delivered on the battlefield."

U. S. Spends Over $500,000 a Month for Telegrams

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—The cost of telegraph and cable communication to the war department has passed the monthly average of $500,000 and is constantly increasing, it was learned today. Telegraphic business has multiplied a hundred times since the beginning of the war as a result of the establishment of the scores of camps, cantonments, and training stations.

FAR AWAY

Sergeant Roche Tells "Rookies'" Feelings in His Latest Verse.

BY SERGEANT JOHN PIERRE ROCHE.

[Thirty-third Division, Camp Logan.]

"It's Awful Far from My Folks."

A national army rookie—
A city stoop in his back
And eyes of helpless wonder—
Against the company shack;
Come with a train of others,
Passed through the draft machine,
Shipped from the camp at ockford
To face a new unseen.
We put the bromide query,
"How do you like it here
In the land of sun and 'smokes'?"
"I think it's fine," he said,
"But it's awful far from my folks."

So we lit a "hump" and passed 'em
And asked about the "chow";
Inquired if he hadn't noticed
He was feeding better now;
Prognosticated weather
Like a tourist folder tells,
And opined that digging trenches
And dodging dummy shells
Was hell, compared to being
In the Q. M. soling shoes.
He speaks in sort of chokes:
"You're right about the place,
But it's awful far from my folks."

He reached in his khaki breeches
And tightened up his mouth,
"A letter my brother sent me
Before we started south."
So I read the scrawly writing—
They all were worried sick
And hoped he'd get a furlough
And see them mighty quick.
"We'll soon be going over.
Of course a guy may live,
And even if he croaks,
I'm not afraid to go—
But it's awful far from my folks."

Men and women shoppers and a number of children were shaken up and bruised yesterday afternoon when an elevator in the Fair store dropped from the third floor to the basement.

Alvin Shaw, the operator, said that he had started the car down when it suddenly dropped. Among those bruised and shaken up were:

Rose Kluzewski, 6 years old, her daughter.
Tillie Cella, 2059 Warren avenue.
Mae Koop, 4023 Leamington avenue.
Miss A. Smith, 7496 West Fifty-sixth street.
Dora Davis, 1434 South Lawndale avenue.

WAR EXPEDIENCY LIKELY TO RULE PUBLIC WORKS

Home Defense Board of Council May Pass on Activities.

All contemplated public improvements and those under way now will be passed on by the city council committee on home defense, if the council approves this suggestion.

The suggestion was made yesterday at a meeting of the committee. Several of the members had an informal discussion of the scheme proposed by the Chicago plan commission for rebuilding South Water street and making it a link in the downtown boulevard system.

M. J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, recommended that certain improvements now under way be completed. He declared the war should not stop these.

May Stop Nonessentials.

The committee is considering stopping all public improvements not entirely needed now during the war.

Mr. Faherty submitted figures showing that $10,000,000 worth of street paving, new sewers, new sidewalks, and water pipe extensions had to be constructed next year. These include:

160 miles of street paving....	$7,000,000
60 miles of sewers	1,500,000
225 miles of sidewalks	1,000,000
Water pipe extensions	500,000

He said he has held up $20,000,000 worth out of $30,000,000 worth of imprevements planned for next year.

In a communication to the committee Charles H. Wacker, chairman of the plan commission, said he believed it would be unwise to stop all work on the Ogden avenue extension plan during the war.

Bennett Asks Exceptions.

Frank J. Bennett, commissioner of public works, asked the committee not to interfere with the following work, which is under way now:

Roseland tunnel system....	$4,100,000
Wells, Franklin-Orleans, Monroe, Kimball, and Addison bridges	1,043,000

It is the intention of the committee to take up the question of stopping all but necessary improvements with Samuel Insull, chairman of the State Council of Defense. It will confer with Mr. Insull on Wednesday.

"If Chicago stops all improvement work for the period of the war," said Mr. Julius Gabelman, paving expert, "it will throw out of work in Chicago alone 30,000 or 40,000 men. If other municipalities in the state follow Chicago it is safe to say nearly 200,000 men will be thrown out of work."

KITS

Dance to Be Given to Raise Funds for 3,000 "Cheer Packages."

Red Cross nurses, Liberty girls, a squad of soldiers and a squad of jackies have promised to attend the soldiers and sailors' entertainment to be given Tuesday evening at Huntinghouse academy, 4616 North Clark street, for the purpose of raising a fund to purchase 3,000 cheer packages for men in the national camps in the vicinity of Chicago. Miss Alma Rogstad of 621 Buckingham place will lead the opening grand march with a Great Lakes jackie, and Miss Marie Murray will lead the singing of "America."

Evanston Women to Learn to Be Wireless Operators

A meeting was held yesterday afternoon at the rooms of the Girls' league of Evanston to discuss plans which have been proposed to form wireless classes for the women of Evanston.

Twenty women attended the meeting and all expressed their desire and willingness to undertake the work. Another meeting will be held next Monday, at which time the definite plans will be announced.

Miss Maud McFadden of 529 Kedzie street, Evanston, will have charge of the classes. It is expected a number of Evanston telephone operators will take the course.

GIRL OF THIRTEEN SUGGESTS A CURE FOR BOY BANDITS

How to cure the boy bandit of his banditism was the topic at a meeting of the League of Cook County Clubs and the Anti-Cigaret league in the Stevens building yesterday. Edith Lough, 13 years old, who was one of the speakers at the meeting, blamed parents for their children's naughtiness.

"I think parents should stay at home and take care of their children," she stated. "They should make companions of them, not just scold them."

Judge Uhlir of the Morals court answered the child's argument by declaring that poverty made it necessary for many parents to be away. "Many of the children who come into my court are feeble-minded," he said, "and the state has provided no place for me to send them. They must be turned out on the street, and then they commit what we call crimes. They are not to blame."

Joseph W. Moses, president of the Chicago Bar association, urged that a certain time each week be given in the public schools to the teaching of clean living.

Children from the Ravenswood and Graham schools took part in the discussion.

STARTS SCHOOL OF CARTOONING.

The Chicago Hebrew institute has planned a course of cartooning in connection with its regular night school. Classes will start in December and be held every Monday and Wednesday evenings. Manuel Rosenberg, cartoonist of the Abendpost, has been appointed instructor.

LAWYERS CLASH IN HEALEY CASE ON VICE CHARGE

Claim Graft Is Still Being Collected Brings On a Storm.

Judge Sabath's courtroom became a vocal maelstrom yesterday when nearly all the attorneys in the Healey graft trial broke into a violent denunciation of each other after Attorney Charles E. Erbstein had charged that grafting now is in progress in the dives of Chicago.

Erbstein said he could prove that money was being passed for the protection of illegal resorts. Judge Elect Frank Johnston Jr., in charge of the prosecution, demanded Erbstein's proof and then the harangue ended under the displeased gavel of Judge Sabath.

Defendants Are Unmoved.

The defendants, Charles C. Healey, former chief of police; William Skidmore, accused as a collector of vice money, and Detective Sergeant Stephen Barry, were undisturbed spectators of the scene.

The pow-wow interrupted the questioning of William A. Metzger of 815 South Marshfield avenue, an assistant morals inspector.

Metzger said he was appointed by Capt. Philip Crippen in 1914 and used the number "71." He identified a number of Funkhouser's vice reports.

Tells of Violation.

Metzger testified that he found vice violations at the Bu Vu café, under the Exchange hotel, at 22 East Van Buren street; at Marshall's, Twenty-fourth and State streets; at John Collins', at 620 West Madison street; Moran's saloon, at 1801 West Lake street; Butch Carroll's place, and at Mabel Miller's, 18 Sheldon street.

Attorney Erbstein then subjected the witness to a grilling cross examination.

Q.—Do you know Mike de Pike Heitler? A.—By sight.

Q.—Did he ever loan you money?—A.—No.

Q.—Are you sure you didn't leave a diamond lavalliere in Heitler's place at 1807 West Madison street, and get some money on it? A.—I am sure I did not.

The witness said, to his knowledge, that most of the hotels and cabarets are still in operation.

Johnston Starts Trouble.

The first real tilt of the day between the attorneys took place when Prosecutor Johnston objected to a certain line of cross-examination of the witness.

"The purpose of this prosecution is not to suppress vice and crime," said Prosecutor Johnston.

"This is a prosecution caused by the graft, bribery, and corruption connected with vice. This line of examination is wholly immaterial and irrelevant."

"We wish to show your honor that these places are still in operation and are allowed to run in consideration of their testimony," shouted Attorney Erbstein.

"We also will trace the money. We will show that these investigators were pulled off certain places after the indictment of these defendants."

Promises Another Inquiry.

"This is a matter for another investigation," retorted Prosecutor Johnston.

"We have evidence that forty-two crap games were in operation last night," returned Erbstein.

"Who will investigate?"

"State's Attorney Maclay Hoyne will investigate," shouted back the prosecutor.

The attorneys were all on their feet and Judge Sabath had to call them to order.

The witness was then allowed to testify that vice existed in Chicago after Chief Healey left office.

He was then excused and Israel Buckowsky, another morals inspector, was called as a witness.

He testified he received his appointment five years ago from Maj. M. C. L. Funkhouser. He worked steadily during that time, except from June, 1916, to January, 1917. His number is "X-98." He also identified numerous vice reports he made while Healey was chief of police and told of conditions and dives already named in the trial.

Court was adjourned until Monday morning before Buckowsky's examination was completed.

La Follette Asks Vote on Hustings' Successor

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Senator La Follette, in an editorial in his weekly magazine this month, demands that the vacancy created by the death of Senator Husting of Wisconsin shall be filled by a special election "in accordance with the federal constitution and the statutes of Wisconsin."

The senator says the movement to appoint a successor to Mr. Husting, instead of electing one, "is in keeping with previous attempts to prevent free speech."

LEADERS TO PLAN 1918 AND 1920 CAMPAIGNS HERE

State and National Issues Will Be Discussed This Week.

Chicago this week becomes the nerve center of national and Illinois state politics. Determinations are to be reached, both by Republicans and Democrats, that are likely to have an important influence in the shaping of the 1918 campaign for control of the next congress, and possibly be the foundation course of the presidential canvass of 1920.

Democratic national committeemen and Democratic state chairmen from all of the states in the upper Mississippi valley and the states around the great lakes will go into conference tomorrow. All of the Illinois congressmen, the two United States senators, the state officers, and the members of the legislature, who have been invited into the State Council of Defense massmeeting at Medinah temple Wednesday night, are to be in town all day Wednesday. State and congressional politics of the most vital importance, it is understood, will be discussed as a by-product of the roundup of the Republican and Democratic leaders.

Deneen May Enter Race.

One possibility of the week, according to suggestions heard last night, may be a definite statement from former Gov. Charles S. Deneen indicating his willingness to enter the Republican primary contest for United States senator. It is possible also that a definite announcement of his candidacy for the senatorship may come from Congressman Medill McCormick although it is well understood by active Republicans all over the state that Mr. McCormick's campaign will be well under way shortly after Jan. 1. Mayor Thompson, of course, has made definite announcement of his own candidacy and his canvass is now in its preliminary stages.

Democrats Try Zone System.

The Democratic roundup tomorrow is the first to be held by the Democratic national committee, in accordance with its policy, adopted after the last election, of dividing the nation into "zones," which will be the units for conduct of the 1918 congressional fight and in preparation for the 1920 presidential campaign. National Committeeman Charles Boeschenstein and State Chairman Arthur W. Charles are making the necessary arrangements for the conference. Among the matters to be considered are the situation in Wisconsin, where a United States senator is to be chosen in succession to the late Senator Husting.

BALK AT REDS SPEAKING AT OWNERSHIP MEET

Members Object to Pettigrew, Bigelow, and Berger.

On the eve of the public ownership conference, under the auspices of the Public Ownership League of America, which begins a three day session at the Hotel La Salle this morning, a good deal of dissatisfaction has cropped out within the organization because of the fact that several Socialists and others whose anti-war activities have been quite conspicuous, were listed on the program to speak.

These consisted mainly of three men, former Senator R. F. Pettigrew of South Dakota, now under indictment by the government; Victor Berger, former congressman and editor of the Socialist Milwaukee Leader, which has been barred from the mails; Herbert S. Bigelow, Cincinnati, recently horsewhipped because of his anti-war views, and one woman, Anna Maley, Minneapolis, whose public utterances also have been quite notorious.

Majority Are Loyal.

At the headquarters of the league yesterday its secretary, Carl D. Thompson, explained that the great majority of members of the league are not only absolutely loyal, but enthusiastically for the nation in the war.

"The program," said Mr. Thompson in a signed statement, "was prepared a year in advance of the conference, before the nation was at war. We have invited our speakers without any reference to their views on the war question, giving adequate representation to all believers in public ownership."

Taking the Curse Off.

In the way of "taking the curse" off those complained of on the program, officials of the league pointed out yesterday that such stanch supporters of the government as Louis F. Post, assistant secretary of labor; Carl S. Vrooman, assistant secretary of agriculture; Morton S. Johnson, Chicago; Harry Laidler, New York, and E. E. Carr, Chicago, who left the Socialist party on the war issue; former Gov. Edward F. Dunne; Gifford Pinchot, and Delos F. Wilcox, public utility expert of New York, are also on the program.

Young Jews Vote to Aid U. S. in All Ways Possible

In a recent meeting of the Young Men's Jewish Charities it was unanimously resolved "that during the period of the war special efforts of the said organization be devoted to the furtherance of our country's cause by promoting in all ways that may be devised the fullest participation by Jewish young men in the martial operations of the United States and the amplest support of the war and its purposes on the part of the Jewish community."

"WIN THE WAR" MEETINGS LEAD TO GREAT RALLY

A series of "Win the War" meetings launched in Chicago today will culminate Dec. 9 with a rally at the Auditorium theater at which nineteen allied nations will be represented. Through an error, the meeting had been announced for today. The meetings are under the auspices of the state council of defense.

Two neighborhood patriotic meetings will be held tonight, one at the home of Miss Pearl O. Amos at 1416 Dearborn parkway, at which the speakers will be William Forkell and William Gemmill, and the other at Galva, in the public hall, the speaker being Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court.

There will be one meeting tomorrow night—at Trinity Congregational church, Sixty-second street and Eberhart avenue; speakers, Justice Orrin N. Carter, Guy Guernsey, Edward R. Litzinger, and Lance Corporal A. A. Westman.

FIRE INTERRUPTS CHILD'S LETTER TO SANTA CLAUS

Seven year old Elizabeth Leavitt was alone in her home over the millinery store at 3571 Armitage avenue yesterday writing a letter to Santa Claus. She did not know the building was burning until the stairway was in flames. Lieut. John Cook of engine company No. 76 saw her at the window, ran up the stairs and carried her back to safety.

Mrs. Julius London, who is the wife of the owner of the building, and conducts the millinery store, helped to carry her aged, crippled father to the street. Albert T. Harding, his wife and a four year old child were also driven from their flat.

The fire started from an overheated furnace. A 2-11 alarm was sounded. Firemen had difficulty in preventing the burning of a building adjoining.

REAL ESTATE BOARD TO DINE.

"Loans" will be discussed by Arthur G. Bathje, assistant cashier of the Chicago City Bank and Trust company, Tuesday at a luncheon of the Cook county real estate board in the Morrison hotel.

FOUR HURT WHEN AUTOMOBILE AND TAXICAB CRASH

Four persons were hurt yesterday, one seriously, when an Atlas taxicab in which were H. B. Morrow of 5517 West Monroe street, his wife and daughter, Della, 18 years old, collided with an automobile at West Monroe street and South Keeler avenue. David Devine, 4945 West Washington boulevard, vice president of the Fitzsimmons Steel and Iron company, 3946 South Racine avenue, and his wife were riding in the other automobile.

The taxicab was whirled around and overturned. The Devine automobile was tossed up on the sidewalk against a small tree, uprooting it. Both cars were wrecked.

Morrow, his wife and daughter, were thrown out on the street and were hurt. Frank Owen of 424 Laflin street, the taxi driver, was hurled several feet. His left ear was almost torn off. Devine and his wife, though seriously shaken, escaped injury.

On Monday, November 26th, there is a 5% reduction from the catalog price on each work.

On Tuesday, November 27th, there is a 10% reduction.

On Wednesday, November 28th, there is a 15% reduction; and there is a 5% daily reduction on each work until the price of each work is reduced to the amount someone has bid, when the picture is then sold to the bidder holding the highest bid.

I HAVE always avoided using superlative terms in catalogs or advertisements of these sales. The high standing of the artists represented and the fine quality of the works offered make it unnecessary for me to say anything in praise of these pictures to those who know the best works of art.

By reference to the list showing bids that have been made on the pictures in this sale, it will be noticed that many of the very finest works in the collection have, as yet, low bids, while many works of less importance have been fairly well bid upon. This fact is difficult to explain, but it seems as though the very finest pictures in this sale, by artists of national reputation, will be sold at such a low price that buyers of discernment who are patrons of the sale will get pictures at a great bargain. The works by Blakelock, Bruestle, Bundy, Chase, Cornoyer, Crane, Dessar, Eaton, Harrison, Howe, Hubbell, Kitchell, Potthast, Shirlaw, Shurtleff, Turcas, Waugh, Wendt and Wiggins are all of them fine pictures by artists who are well known to art collectors.

It is well worth your while, if you like good pictures, to note the low bids made on works by these famous painters. A visit to the galleries will convince you of the fine quality of each work offered.

TO OUT-OF-TOWN BIDDERS

Each mail is bringing bids to the gallery from out-of-town customers, many of whom have bought pictures from former sales held by this plan. They are satisfied or they would not bid again. Nothing that can be said speaks better for the fairness of our plan, and the high character of the pictures offered.

We already have bids in this sale from out-of-town customers from five or six different states. These customers have not seen the pictures, but have received our catalog and know they can rely upon the fairness of description and upon the truthfulness of the illustrations in this catalog. They know, too, that if they buy a picture from this sale, without seeing it, and it proves disappointing, their money will be refunded. You can safely send us a bid on any picture in the collection. All bids must be made so that your bid will be 5% of the catalog price added to any bid that is already made. If you have not received a catalog, wire or write for it today. This catalog contains full explanation of plan of sale, description of each picture and illustration of many of them.

Since prices are now reduced 5% daily, bids will come to us rapidly on many of these pictures. It is well for out-of-town bidders to send bids that are two or three 5% bids in advance of those already made, so that the pictures of their choice will not already have received higher bids. The advantage in these sales always lies with the bidder that is fortunate enough to have made early bids.

FEED A JACKIE BY PAYING FARE, IS SUGGESTION

John C. Roth Points Way to Aid Thanksgiving Plan.

There is still a chance to make a "jackie" your guest on Thanksgiving day. You can do it by proxy.

The response of Chicagoans to THE TRIBUNE'S suggestion that the boys from the naval training station be invited to home dinners was so prompt and generous that every one was cared for a week ago, and despite a published announcement to this effect, enough invitations have come in to provide two for every man.

Fare as Welcome as Dinner.

Obviously there are many whose offers must be declined. But there's a further need that has not been entirely met. That is the matter of providing transportation from Great Lakes and back again.

"We want people to know that if they contribute a boy's fare they are doing just as much as inviting him to dinner," said John C. Roth yesterday. Mr. Roth has volunteered aid in carrying out the transportation part of the plan.

"It costs a dollar to bring a boy in and send him back, and we are still in need of contributions for that purpose. There was a big response today, but the fund is still short of $500, and of course much more is needed if many of the boys are not to find themselves unable to accept their invitations."

Reply to Invitations.

Chaplain Charles W. Moore of the training station and his assistants have been working night and day mailing acceptances or regrets to those who have sent invitations. Every one will have received a reply of one kind or another by tomorrow night or Tuesday morning.

About 3,000 "jackies" will be entertained through THE TRIBUNE invitations. Two thousand more will be the guests of relatives or personal friends in the city. This represents all the men who can get away. The others are in detention camps outside Chicago or will be on detail duty for the day.

All Like "Tribune" Plan.

"This proposal of THE TRIBUNE'S seems to have struck just the right note everywhere," said Chaplain Moore. "Commander Moffet is delighted and immensely gratified with the whole thing, as we all are.

"The boys especially appreciate the spirit in which the invitations have been given. They are not accepting them for the dinner, for they would get a good dinner at the station. They are going because of the friendly interest that has been shown and the 'home folks' idea that goes with it."

Opens Information Bureau.

The Chicago and Northwestern railroad will open an information bureau for the soldiers and sailors at its station on Thanksgiving day. This is made possible by the joint efforts of the law enforcement committee of the woman's committee, Woman's Church Federation, and the Traveler's aid.

Preacher Is Acquitted of Villisca Ax Murders

Red Oak, Ia., Nov. 24.—The Rev. Lyn G. J. Kelly was acquitted of the charge of committing the Villisca ax murders of 1912 by the jury in his second trial in the District court here tonight on the first ballot. The jury considered the evidence for four hours and twenty-five minutes.

GREATEST BAND, GREATEST NAVY, GREATEST BALL

Sousa and Full 400 Men to Play at Dance of Democracy.

Residents of the north shore are going to have an opportunity to hear, for the first time, the entire 400 piece United States Navy band of the Great Lakes Naval Training station when Lieut. John Philip Sousa leads his youthful musicians at the navy ball Thanksgiving eve in the big drill hall at the main station.

The band, the largest ever assembled in the history of music, is led by the greatest march king and bandmaster of all time.

The ball is to be the greatest navy society event ever held in the middle west. Capt. Moffett has invited Col. James A. Ryan and his staff from Fort Sheridan to attend this great democratic dance. The commandant is completing the list of officers who are to constitute his official staff at the ball.

"We are delighted with results of the ticket sale," Mrs. Moffett declared yesterday. "I have just received notice from a Chicago business house where 300 tickets were left a few days ago that every one had been sold and that people are leaving orders for more."

In keeping with the spirit of the times and the cause for which the nation is fighting, the ball is not going to be a dress suit affair. Mr. Average Citizen will not be debarred because he does not own a silk hat and a dress suit. Rather will this dance attract the largest number and probably the most cosmopolitan throng of people ever assembled at such an event.

Many high school boys and girls will attend. Also many business men who do not enjoy moving around in a stiff bosomed shirt will be there with their wives.

Tickets are being sold for $2 or $3 per couple. The proceeds are to be devoted to the Navy Relief society—the Red Cross of the sea.

100,000 TO AID RED CROSS SEAL SALE IN CHICAGO

Dec. 7 Is Theater Day; 15,000,000 Members Are Sought.

More than 100,000 Chicago men and women have been selected as aids in the nation wide campaign for a tuberculosis war fund which opens throughout the United States tomorrow.

The fund is to be raised through the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals at 1 cent each. For every cent contributed to this fund the contributor will be given one seal as a receipt. All of the money thus obtained is to be used in an effort to prevent in America the appalling spread of tuberculosis that has stricken practically every nation in Europe since the beginning of the war.

Men in Charge.

At the head of the campaign in Illinois is a Red Cross Seal War council, composed of Dr. Frank Billings of the State Council of Defense, Dr. C. St. Clair Drake, director of the state health department; Dr. J. W. Pettit of the Illinois Tuberculosis association, and W. D. Thurber, associate director of the Red Cross for Illinois.

Each of the 100,000 men and women who have been selected to help in the Chicago campaign will receive this week a preliminary consignment of 200 seals each. Red Cross seal booths are to be opened soon in the department stores and in the main corridor of the postoffice.

Red Cross Theater Day.

Henry P. Davison, the chairman of the Red Cross council, has proclaimed Friday, Dec. 7, as the National Red Cross Theater day. On that day in all the theaters of the country where the spoken drama is staged a special Red Cross matinée will be given, and the gross receipts will go to the Red Cross fund.

Acting Gov. John G. Oglesby yesterday pledged the state of Illinois to do more than its share in the Christmas membership campaign which the American Red Cross is planning.

The Red Cross now has 5,000,000 members, and the campaign is to get renewals of these and add a clear 10,000,000 to the rolls. A campaign will be carried on from now until Christmas day. Actual enrolling will begin on Dec. 17 and last for a week.

GOING TO HELP TAKE DENTS OUT OF WEIL BAND?

Chicago Musicians Need Cash to Keep Up Its Work.

Clink!
Clank!
Clink!

The coins from twenty stories down rattled on the Chicago band as it played in the Y. M. C. A. drive last week. The collection was $1,107.08. It cost members of the band close to $100 to take the dents out of their instruments, Director William Weil told patrons of the band at the annual meeting yesterday. "We expect it will be holes instead of dents if this war keeps on, and we'll be prouder of the holes than of the dents," the director said.

Seventy-Eight Public Appearances.

Last year the band made seventy-eight public appearances, in Grant park, the Municipal pier, the high schools, and street parades. Something over $25,000 was spent in dispensing music. Christmas day the band donates to the house of correction, New Year's day the band will play at the Art institute.

A spring tour, including Camps Grant, Dodge, Funston, Travis, Pike, Taylor, Sherman, and Custer is a part of next season's plan. Weekly tours of the downtown streets are also planned.

Mrs. McCormick Gives $2,000.

Last year's biggest subscriber was Mrs. Harold F. McCormick, formerly of Chicago, now of Switzerland, who sent a check for $2,000. Director Weil estimates that $50,000 could be used to advantage this year and trusts that several Mrs. McCormicks will send in their contributions.

The new board of directors elected at the meeting yesterday were: James H. Chandon, Alfred Decker, Ralph Esau, Howard H. Gross, Herman H. Hettler, Edmund D. Hulbert, William E. Kier, Samuel Kraus, Harry H. Latham, Walter D. Moody, Charles F. W. Nichols, Robert Olson, Augustus S. Peabody, William Nelson Pelouze, Frank F. Scott, Paul Schulze, Clarence T. Seipp, John D. Shoop, Dr. C. Pruyn Stringfield, and T. Edward Wilder.

The band association reëlected Frank F. Scott president, Ralph Esau secretary, and Edmund D. Hulbert treasurer. The following were elected vice presidents: Alfred Decker, Howard H. Gross, and Paul Schulze.

FOE AT GATES

Admiral Peary Warns That Attack on American Coast Cities Must Be Expected.

New York, Nov. 24.—German attacks in the near future on American coast cities were predicted by Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary in an address tonight.

"I speak of no secret," he said, "and I am giving no information that has not already been known or discussed when I say that a blow will be struck on some one or more of our Atlantic coast cities by Germany in the near future, and when it comes it will come out of a blue sky."

Discussing the development of the carrying capacity of airplanes, Admiral Peary said:

"Perhaps before this war is over, these airplanes will carry as heavy artillery as the famous French 75 millimeter guns, and when that time comes the airplane will be invulnerable. It will be able to carry enormous numbers of troops and do the work of cavalry, infantry, and artillery combined."

Easiest car for a woman to drive

Better Buy Your Cadillac Now

Let's Take a Look Ahead

How much longer will your old car give economical service—good performance without costly repairs?

Is it good for two or three years longer? Or will you be the loser if you drive it? There are many new things to figure.

Used Car Values

New cars have advanced in price and fewer new cars can be produced. Hence your old car will not depreciate in market value as fast as usual.

But your old car will give poorer and poorer service. It will cost more and more for repairs, the longer you run it. It makes of you a waster.

Its steadier market value, due to new car shortage, will be more than offset by the expense of keeping it going. Finally it will be next to worthless to anybody. Then what will be your situation?

New Cars to Cost More

New cars, we believe, will advance in price still further. Reduced production, now taking effect, must certainly increase production cost.

Material, and especially labor, will cost more, too. Result: new cars will sell much higher.

Ordinarily you could figure to run your old car one year more and take more depreciation when you trade it in. But now you must also figure on new cars advancing till the war is over.

What Is Economy?

Obviously, if you delay, it costs you not only the depreciation and repairs on your old car—you must also pay the advance on new cars which occurs meanwhile.

Any way you figure it, the longer you wait the more you must pay. This is poor business at any time—especially now.

To buy now requires the least cash—and what is economy for you is economy for the nation. So figure carefully. Elimination of waste is the nation's need.

If you have a high quality car in top-notch condition, perhaps it will serve you economically till prices are normal again, some years hence. If so, keep it—and let somebody else have the new car.

If your old car will not serve economically for three years more, you will save by buying a Cadillac at once. You know it will deliver unfailing service for many years. Certainly it is the soundest value, and you want your money's worth today as never before.

10,000 More Sets For Chicago

We have already given 20,000 sets of dessert molds to the women of Chicago and vicinity. But now we offer 10,000 more to homes which did not get them.

We do this to help you serve Jiffy-Jell in the most inviting ways.

Jiffy-Jell is the new-day type of quick gelatine desserts. It is the latest creation of the leading gelatine expert. It is made in the model food plant of America.

The owners of Jiffy-Jell make an extra-grade gelatine, known as Waukesha Gelatine. It is a rare, dainty product which costs twice as much as the common. And that grade only is used in Jiffy-Jell.

No Such Flavors

In old-time desserts of this kind the flavors came mixed with the powder. The desserts never tasted like real fruit dainties.

In Jiffy-Jell the flavors come sealed in glass vials. All their freshness, all their rich fruit flavor is preserved.

Then each fruit flavor is made from the fruit itself. Not one is artificial.

All are highly concentrated, so every dessert has a wealth of ripe fruit taste. For instance, half a ripe pineapple is used in the flavor for one Jiffy-Jell dessert.

You add the flavor from the vial when the jell has partly cooled. So the flavors are not scalded by the boiling water, as in other kinds of gelatine desserts.

For garnish jell there is Mint flavor, made from fresh mint leaves. For salad jell there is Lime flavor, made from lime fruit. It makes a tart, zestful, green jell. And there are new fruit flavors—like Loganberry—never used before.

Try Two Kinds

All we ask is that you buy two packages of Jiffy-Jell to try. Learn what it means to you. It will be a revelation.

Then send us this coupon for the molds. We will send the Pint Mold or three Individual Molds for just the cost of mailing—10 cents. Or we will send six Individual Molds for 20 cents.

Cut out the coupon now. Get the Jiffy-Jell from your grocer, then mail the coupon to us.

FUNNY STORIES WON HER SEAT IN STATE CAPITOL

Mrs. M. S. Hathaway Tells of Her Montana Victory.

Tanned by the winds from snow capped mountains, with cheeks like winter apples, and shrewd though kindly eyes sparkling behind her spectacles, Mrs. Maggie Smith Hathaway, member of the Montana legislature from Ravalli county, dropped into Chicago yesterday for a few hours on her way to Washington.

Mrs. Hathaway, herself a Democrat, was elected to the legislature a year ago, winning over 800 Republican votes in a county which she says has always been Republican. "There really isn't any trouble in managing men if you know how to go about it," she said modestly. "I just remember three things. In dealing with men you must 'play the game,' tell 'em funny stories, and not appear to dictate.

Decided to Keep Quiet.

"When I and Mrs. Emma Ingalls of Flathead county were elected last year to the legislature we put our heads together to decide how we'd behave in the meetings and we made up our minds that just at first we wouldn't say much. We didn't want the men to think that we thought we were so much or that we had come to show them what to do.

"I found that there was quite an undercurrent of opposition and if we weren't careful we'd make them our enemies. We just laid low and we made friends.

"At last a time came when I had to make a speech for the eight hour law for women. I am a widow and haven't any children and an old bachelor in the legislature who was working against the bill thought he'd be funny. He rose when I had finished and said I couldn't know very much about it as I didn't have any more children than he had. You ought to have seen the way the rest of the men jumped on him. A saloon man who's a friend of mine (I work against him in the W. C. T. U., but we're friends just the same) demanded an apology, and we had quite a time."

Have to Learn Just Like Men.

Mrs. Hathaway says she thinks women politicians make a mistake in trying for big positions before they have served apprenticeships as clerks. "They can't expect," she says, "to know all about it at once. They have to learn just like the men."

Besides being a legislator the lady from the Bitter Root manages a big cattle ranch, grows navy beans, which she cultivates herself, and has an apple orchard, the product of which she boxes like a regular carpenter. "I always wear overalls when I drive over the ranch," she declares. "It's much simpler."

Is Ardent Suffragist.

She is an ardent suffragist, but does not approve of militant methods and looks with horror upon the pickets and the National Woman's party tactics believing in the winning of the vote state by state as the surest way.

Her business in Washington is concerned with the passing of prohibition measures by the next congress.

ROBBED

Baker and Wife Bound and Relieved of $600 Worth of Valuables. Customer Also a Vicim.

Frank Dewey BELOW

Boy bandits with a penchant for trussing up their victims visited the bakery shop of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dewey at 202 South Western avenue yesterday and departed with jewelry and money totaling $600.

Dewey was behind the counter when the three entered. One covered him with a revolver, one lowered the window shades, and the third got a chair and tied Dewey to it hand and foot. They took his ring, a diamond tiepin, and $120 in cash. Mrs. Dewey was relieved of a diamond sunburst, earrings, and $180 in cash, and then tied to her chair.

About this time a customer arrived. He was Mitchel O'Connor of 2246 West Adams street. The bandits pounced on him, trussed him up, tossed him in a closet, and after separating him from his money, locked the door. Then the three left. A woman saw them driving away in a small automobile.

The automobile from which two employés of the Chicago Daily News were ejected yesterday after they had been robbed of $1,445, drivers' collections, was found yesterday morning in front of 23 South Whipple street. It showed signs of hard usage.

SAVE FISHERMEN FROM DEATH IN STORM ON LAKE

Crew of Steamer Forced to Leave Disabled Boat Adrift.

Weak from exposure and a fight for life against the storm that swept Lake Michigan Thursday, Julius E. Le Mere and Frank Nehring, the crew of the fishing boat Rough Rider, limped ashore yesterday morning from the steamer Grand Island in South Chicago and reported that their boat probably is drifting somewhere on the lake, a menace to shipping. While their official report was made to the shipping inspector in the federal building, they had an unofficial report of praise for Capt. W. T. Mooney of the Grand Island, who rescued them when they had almost given up hope.

Engine Is Disabled.

"We left Green Bay early Wednesday and put out from Sturgeon Bay in the afternoon," said Le Mere. "Our engine was disabled at 9 o'clock in the evening and we worked until after midnight trying to repair it. While we were working the storm came up, but we managed to get it in working order and proceeded. At 3 a. m. the water stopped the engine again, and from that time on we drifted.

"We had twelve boxes of fishing nets on board. These were wet and heavy, and we found we would have to throw them overboard if we wanted to keep afloat. First we threw three overboard, later six, and finally all of them. The water kept rising in the hold, and we started to bail. All we had to work with were two water buckets, and we were just able to keep even with the waves that washed over the deck, and we expected to founder any time.

Drifted Through Storm.

"We drifted through the worst of the storm. It was not until almost 1 o'clock Thursday morning that we met a steamer twenty-four miles south of east of Port Washington. It proved to be the Grand Island, and it came to our rescue immediately. The crew threw us a rope and tried to tow us into port. For a time things went all right, and then the Rough Rider got waterlogged and they had to cut it adrift. We left the vessel wallowing out in the lake. While it probably has gone down, it may still be afloat. There is quite a bit of gasoline on board, and if some boat should hit the craft in the dark there might be an explosion. For a time we never expected to see dry land again."

Le Mere is crippled from standing for hours in the icy water while he baled. Both men live in Two Harbors, Wis.

MEANS TO FACE TRIAL TOMORROW FOR KING MURDER

Concord, N. C., Nov. 24.—Gaston B. Means will be placed on trial here next Monday, charged with the murder of Mrs. Maude A. King of New York, widow of a Chicago millionaire.

Mrs. King was killed near here on Aug. 29 last while visiting relatives of Means, who was her business agent. A local coroner's jury decided she accidentally shot herself. After the body was taken to Chicago for burial suspicions were aroused which caused an autopsy to be performed, and the Chicago coroner's physician announced that the bullet wound in the back of the woman's head, which caused death, could not have been self-inflicted.

CHICAGOAN HURT AT CAMP PIKE

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Lieut. Raymond R. Collins, member of the South Shore Country club, Chicago, was injured today when a polo pony which he was riding stumbled and threw him heavily. Lieut. Collins was unconscious for some time, but was reported at the base hospital to be only slightly injured. Lieut. Collins is one of the student officers transferred from northern training schools and was among the first of the officers sent to Camp Pike.

Although the final assignments have not been made, figures compiled today in the headquarters of the Eighty-seventh division show that Illinois has a greater number of men in training at Camp Pike than any other state. A total of 6,000 Illinois selectmen have been sent here.

CHICAGO TROOPS AT CAMP GRANT ARE CRACK SHOTS

Surprising Records Made by City Boys on Rifle Range.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Chicago men brought into the army under the selective service act have lived up to their earlier promise of learning to shoot well.

Brig. Gen. Charles H. Martin, commanding the One Hundred and Seventy-second, "The Chicago brigade," today made public the records made by two regiments, the Three Hundred and Forty-third and Three Hundred and Forty-fourth, in two days of rifle range work. A week earlier these two regiments performed well at the short range of 100 yards. But these two days were spent shooting from the 200 and 300 yard firing points, and the results astonished the officers.

Their Records.

The tabulations show that the brigade averaged thirty-five out of a possible score of fifty at 200 yards and forty-six out of a possible seventy-five at 300 yards.

The Three Hundred and Forty-third regiment—made up of west siders—established averages of 35.4 and 46.27.

The averages made by the companies of the Three Hundred and Forty-third are as follows:

Company.	200 yards [possible 50].	300 yards [possible 75].
A	36.7	42.8

DEATH PENALTY

Capital Punishment Imposed on Soldier of German Birth May Be Commuted to Long Prison Term.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—While the death penalty has been imposed upon an enlisted man of the American army who is of German birth, on his conviction of desertion, it was indicated today at the war department that the findings of the court martial would be overruled and sentence commuted to a long term of imprisonment.

The soldier was stationed at Panama, and there appears to be little doubt that after his desertion he endeavored to make his way to Germany presumably for military service there. He was charged after his apprehension, however, only with desertion, and the question of his intention to join the enemy forces was not developed at his trial.

It has not been the custom in any army even in time of war to impose the death penalty for desertion unless the act was in the face of the enemy, or unless there was evidence to show that the purpose of the offender was more than merely an attempt to evade military service

3,500 IN ELGIN ADOPT KENOSHA PLAN FOR WAR

Many Cities May Join System of Half Hour a Week Service.

Following the inauguration of the "Kenosha plan" of war service, the 3,500 employés of the Elgin National Watch factory of Elgin, yesterday approved a plan to donate a half hour each of their services. This will amount to $500 a week, it is estimated, and will be donated to war aid.

The arrangement was made through George E. Hunter, superintendent of the factory and chairman of the Elgin Red Cross local. It is estimated the annual fund will be $37,500.

KENOSHA PLAN SPREADS.

Kenosha, Wis., Nov. 24.—The "Kenosha plan," providing that every one who works in Kenosha give a half hour weekly or its equivalent to the funds for the support of big war movements, is spreading over the country. Richard F. Kaiser, secretary of the chamber of commerce, has been buried under a mass of correspondence from cities wanting to know the full plan. More than 200 cities are investigating and many have declared their intention of adopting the plan. Printed matter has been sent in answer to the demands for information.

Cities which have showed especial interest are Akron, O., Kansas City, Mo., Rock Island and Rockford, Ill., Sheboygan, Wis., and Waukegan, Ill. These cities have sent men to Kenosha to investigate and get pointers.

Work Begins Wednesday.

The first patriotic half hour here is scheduled for next Wednesday morning between 11:30 and 12 o'clock. This week the way was paved for the great campaign which is expected to result in 22,000 people signing the pledge cards. It opened on Monday with a lecture to 2,000 women by the wife of Private Peat of the Canadian forces. On Tuesday night there was a great patriotic parade and concert.

Wednesday Lieut. Ivan Rossiter of the Canadian forces told the story of life in German prisons and made an appeal to all people in the city to aid the movement. Thursday there was another parade, with the band concert on the public square and "four minute men" talking at every prominent corner. Friday night there were patriotic prayer meetings and special gatherings in every school building. On Saturday night Private Peat spoke. Monday night R. Hugh Knyvett, the famous Australian scout, will close the speaking campaign and general signing of the pledge cards will be started.

Up to Thursday night, a week before the first patriotic hour, 5,000 pledge cards have been signed.

FOR JUSTICE

Appeal to Lawyers Urges Bar to Defend Civil Rights of Men Fighting for U. S.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—An appeal to the legal profession of the country to regard the defense of a soldier's civil rights as the "highest cause of every lawyer" was issued tonight by Acting Judge Advocate General Ansell. Pointing out the legal restrictions under which his department operates, he urged that as a matter of simple justice every effort should be made to protect the interests of men called to the colors.

Since the war began, Mr. Ansell said, several thousand lawyers have volunteered their services, but it has been possible to accept only about 150. They will be charged with the administering of justice within the military forces, but meanwhile the soldiers' civil liabilities continue.

"The law," Mr. Ansell's statement said, "cannot assail one who had risked his life that it might live. Unless the law intervenes, what will become of the family rent, the debts that easily could have been met, if the country had not called the soldier to its defense?

"To adjust these matters and give the soldier a fair degree of protection was the purpose of the soldiers' civil rights bill. The secretary of war has decided that it is the immediate duty of the judge advocate general's department to furnish every officer and enlisted man with legal aid."

FRENCH BLOCKADE CHIEF QUITS.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Ill health forced the resignation of M. Jonnart as minister of blockade today. President Le Brun of the budget commission was nominated in his place.

U. S. NOW PUTS STOP TO WASTE AT RIFLE RANGE

Camp Logan, Nov. 24.—[Special.]—"Hooverizing" has been extended to the rifle range at Camp Logan.

Thousands of rounds of rifle ammunition are fired here daily. The shells are put up in clips of five each to facilitate rapid loading. It has been the practice to load the gun and allow the clip to fall where it would.

The shells were ejected automatically and allowed to go to waste. A new order has been issued that will do away with this waste. The clips and the shells are carefully gathered up after each man is through shooting at a target and shipped back to the United States arsenals for reloading

A street dance, the largest ever given in Texas, and probably as large as any ever seen in the United States took place here tonight with the soldiers of Camp Logan as guests. Fifteen blocks of Main street were roped off and polished for the occasion. Ten military bands furnished the music and about 40,000 people tripped the light fantastic.

U. S. War Risk Policies Pass $1,000,000,000 Mark

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—[Special].—The total amount of war insurance written by the bureau of war risk insurance in the treasury department crossed the $1,000,000,000 mark today, with hundreds of policies from France not yet received. More than 120,000 policies have been recorded, the average "protection" asked being around $8,500. It is announced that students in the officers' training camps are eligible for this insurance and may file their applications until the close of the several camps—Nov. 27.

FORT SHERIDAN CANDIDATES ON LAST LEAVES

Fort Sheridan, Ill., Nov. 24.—Candidates for commissions at the training camp here today went on their last leave of absence. They will return tomorrow afternoon and then will mark time until Tuesday morning, when the lucky ones will be handed their commissions.

A farewell reception will be given them tomorrow evening in the gymnasium by Col. James A. Ryan, commandant; W. F. Hypes, Father Edward J. Vattman, post chaplain; Lieut. Col. Cromwell Stacey, senior instructor, and the Rev. Myron E. Adams, director of morale.

A report of the post chapter of the Army Mutual Aid society, made public today, shows that $6,000 was raised for the benefit of dependents of the regular army by the military ball given in the "gym" on the night of Oct. 5.

Neōlin Soles Preserve Style—and Wear Longer

YOUR new shoes always have style and shape when you first wear them, but how soon they lose their graceful lines if soled with ordinary leather soles. But your Neōlin-soled shoes preserve their style, because Neōlin Soles are waterproof.

Ordinary leather soles are not waterproof. After one thorough wetting they become spongy and porous, so that they easily soak up—literally breathe in—the moisture from snow underfoot, from muddied crossings, and even from the thin film of water on pavements after thaws and showers.

This moisture soaks into the uppers and the pressure of your walking foot causes the shoe to stretch and lose style and shape.

But waterproof Neōlin Soles make shoes last long because they protect the vital welts and seams from moisture underfoot—and do it more comfortably and more neatly than "rubbers."

And Neōlin Soles last from two to six times as long as ordinary leather.

With Neōlin Soles, thin and light as they are, need for re-soling disappears, for even though they make the uppers last longer they often outwear them.

And Neōlin is so naturally flexible that shoes soled with it require no breaking in.

You can get Neōlin-soled shoes in black, white or tan—at any one of the dealers listed below.

And remember that every Neōlin Sole bears the brand Neōlin. Mark that mark—stamp it on your memory—Neolin

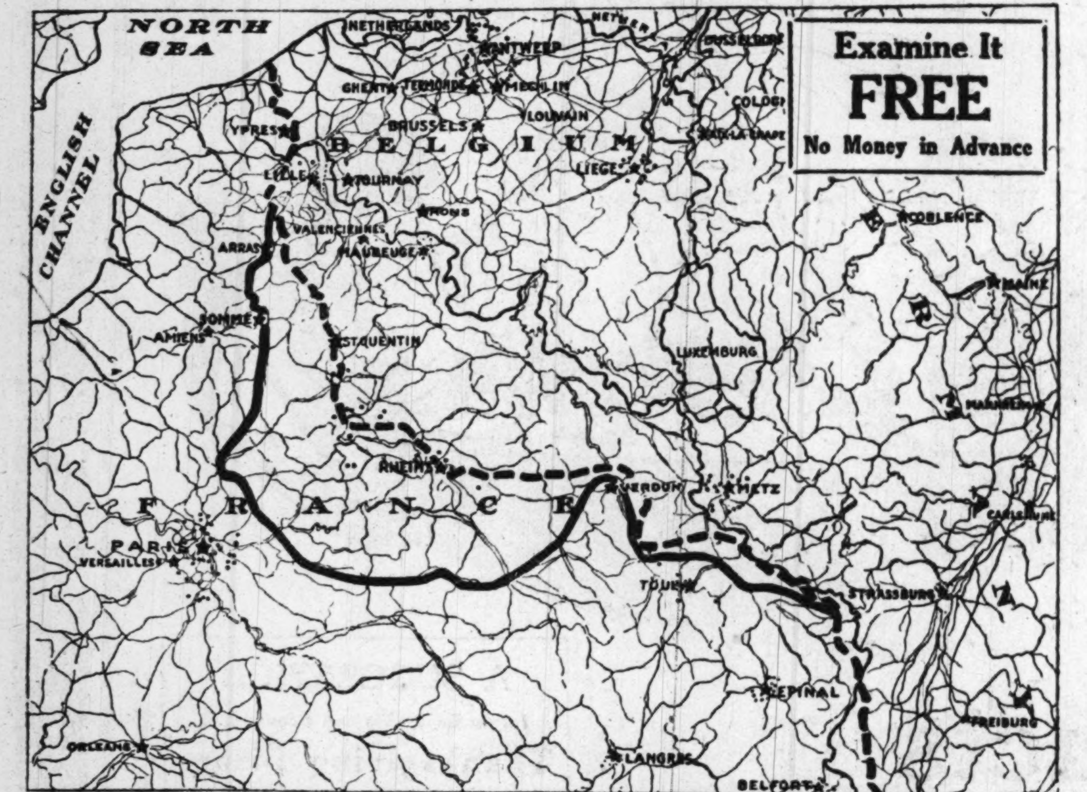
COMPLETE MAP OF PRESENT FIGHTING ZONE

The Greatest Battle of the War Now Taking Place



Follow the American Troops in France

THE photograph above is a reproduction of the most complete single map of the Western Front ever published. It is 28 x 36 inches in size, but folds into a convenient cover, 5½x7½ inches, just right to be carried conveniently in the pocket for frequent consultation. It is printed on excellent paper, and can be had mounted on cloth, if desired, at slight extra cost.

Most existing maps of the Western Front are valueless because they are not indexed, or because they do not contain the smaller places.

Over 7,000 Villages, Towns and Hamlets

On this new map there are shown more than 7000 places. The State of Illinois contains about the same number of square miles as shown on this map, and in Illinois there are less than 1700 places of 100 or more inhabitants.

In addition to over 7000 towns, villages and hamlets, this new map gives all woods, fortresses, fortified towns, naval arsenals, forts, redoubts, batteries, aircraft depots, wireless stations and railways. The forests and woods are indicated in green, giving the map an attractive appearance, and adding a strategical feature of importance.

The scale of the map is 10 miles to the inch. It extends west to Ashford, England; north to Antwerp, Belgium; east to Frankfort, Germany; and south to Orleans, France.

It shows for comparison the battle line of 1914, when the Germans were almost at the gates of Paris. The ground gained by the Allies; therefore, may be plainly seen.

It is without exception the most satisfactory map of the Western Front which has been engraved. It has been prepared especially to throw light on movements as they occur. It may be examined with ease, for the type is bold and clean cut.

A Complete Index Makes Locating Easy

An index of towns and villages accompanying a map of this kind has been proven an absolute necessity. The smaller towns are the ones usually mentioned in the news dispatches. They are not to be found on ordinary maps, and the locations of most of them were, and still are, utterly unknown to the general public, but unless their locations are known their strategical importance cannot be grasped.

Nothing is more unsatisfactory than searching all over the map for a small place that may and may not appear upon it. However, this loss of time and patience is now at an end, for the index which accompanies this map makes it vastly more useful and valuable. The index contains over 7000 names. An idea of the importance of this statement may be gained from the fact that 90 per cent of the war maps available today contain less than 500 names. This index is bound in with the map and enables one to locate instantly any one of the 7000 places mentioned.

Send No Money

The great value of this map is so apparent that a copy will be sent on approval, without a penny in advance. If, after examining this map, you decide to keep it, send only $1.00 for the plain, or $2.00 for the cloth-backed map. If not delighted with the map and index simply return it and you will owe nothing. VILLAGE BELLES OF SCHERERVILLE HAVE A WILD DAY

"City Dudes" Try Abduction and Barber Leaps to the Rescue.

("The Tribune" last night received the following dispatch from its Hammond correspondent, who had relayed the news as furnished to him by the village journalist of Schererville, Ind.)

Hammond, Ind., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Schererville, Ind., is agog over a bold daylight abduction of the three village belles which was frustrated by the screams of the maidens which attracted to the scene the barber, the proprietor of the garage, and the marshal.

The affair started when a limousine sped into the town and stopped in front of the grog shop. Out of the auto stepped three fashionably dressed young men as from a band box and the word spread among the Saturday afternoon shoppers that some "city dudes" were visiting Schererville.

The Misses Katherine and Margaret Bedar and Katherine Schweitzer, famoued about the countryside for their beauty, were gayly trodding the boardwalks of Main street.

Inside the inn the three young men had ordered cocktails to the despair of the bartender, who finally persuaded them to change their order. As the trio reached the street again the girls were passing.

"Peaches," one of the chaps was heard to exclaim. "Get 'em." In a second the girls found themselves surrounded. One was forced from her feet into the car and the others struggled with their assailants. Miss Schweitzer jabbed a finger in the eye of the ruffian who was endeavoring to lift her into the machine and her screams were heard from one end of the village to the other. In a minute help arrived.

The invaders beat off the townspeople and fled in the automobile while the town marshal shot in their wake.

In reporting the occurrence the Schererville newspaper correspondent said that he was unable to get the names of the young men.

Subsequent information received by telephone confirmed the fact that the three young women had foiled the "city dudes" and were safe in their homes.

YOUNG RAFFLES GLAD THEY PUT HIM BEHIND BARS

Gustave Larson, 18 year old high school graduate and society Raffles, was held to the grand jury yesterday in bonds of $9,000 on three charges of burglary in Judge John A. Swanson's department of the boys' court. He was arrested last Wednesday in the rear of his home at 1207 Frontier avenue and had been held incommunicado since.

Three suitcases containing diamonds, watches, silverware, and antiques were brought to court by the police, who placed the value at more than $5,000 and said it represented the work of the last few months.

"I would watch the society columns and do a job when the people were not at home," Larson said. "I am glad I was caught. In a few years perhaps I would be running into the tens of thousands of dollars or maybe commit murder. Now they have me and it will teach me a lesson."

In the daytime Larson was a clerk in the accounting department of the Peoples Gas Light and Coke company. His 20 year old brother, Morse, would dispose of the goods as soon as he brought them home, he testified, but Morse became frightened and left town. Larson said he had been committing burglaries for two years.

"MISSING"

Oak Park Boy Who Couldn't Wait for the Yankees to Get in Action Is Now Posted as a Missing Member of the Canadian Princess Pats.

John Knowlton Fisk

John Knowlton Fisk, 21 years old, of 206 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, who has been reported as missing from his regiment, the Princess Pats of the Canadian forces, was so eager to get into action against the Germans that he couldn't wait for the American forces. Soon after the United States entered the war, Fisk resigned as corporal in Battery D, First Illinois field artillery, and joined the Canadian regiment. He reached the front trenches, where he wished to be, on July 4. He has been marked up as missing since Oct. 31, following the drive on the Passchendaele front in Belgium.

MRS. LOGAN SAYS HER HUSBAND NEGLECTED HER

A husband's neglect was the excuse given yesterday in the Frances Willard hospital by Mrs. Effie Logan for her affair with Harry D. Whitcraft, with whom she was found in the Morrison hotel Friday night. Immediately afterward she took poison. Her condition is serious.

Mrs. Daisy Hartwig of 4425 North Racine avenue, a personal friend and school chum, gave Mrs. Logan's version to a reporter. It repudiates the statement of Whitcraft that he had registered at the hotel with another woman and had met Mrs. Logan by chance.

Mr. Logan, head of a conservatory of music where Whitcraft studied and for two years organist of John D. Rockefeller's Euclid Avenue Baptist church, is expected to arrive in Chicago this morning to confront his wife and Whitcraft, who is being held by the police.

Mrs. Logan came here and registered as the wife of Whitcraft, according to Mrs. Hartwig.

"I didn't know she was in town," said Mrs. Hartwig, "until she telephoned me on Friday to come to the Morrison to see her. I went to the hotel and found two men in the room. One was Whitcraft and the other a detective. I asked what they were doing there, and she stepped into an adjoining room, put something in her mouth, and cried:

"'Now, it's all over with.'"

Mrs. Logan, some years ago, gained fame as the "most beautiful woman in Iowa."

TENFOLD MISERY OF TEUTONS STIRS FRENCH TO PITY

Alpine Chasseurs' Officer Tells Fellowship Club of War Horror.

Pity for the German soldiers was expressed yesterday by Commandant L. C. Eckenfelder of the French Alpine Chasseurs before the Irish Fellowship club.

"I pity the German, for the hell that we endure is his intensified," the commandant said. "His misery is tenfold ours, for now he has no spirit—one may say, no hope.

"In spite of our unpreparedness at the outbreak of the war, we soon learned the science of conflict. Necessity taught us, the necessity of repelling the invader, who in 1914 swept toward our capital like a great ocean and was only stopped by the breakwater of French and Belgian lives.

France's Sacrifice.

"The gigantic effort France exerted at the beginning of the war sapped her manhood and took the blossom of her army. Many young men are left, but not so many as the old. Some soldiers not in the trenches can count 44 years. They are living like wild beasts, amid mud and horrors always. The man who goes into the trenches lets his mind slip into a daze, so that the memory of the hell he is to endure will not remain with him when blessed relief comes.

"As for the German, I will say, even though I am a Frenchman, and he is my enemy, I pity him.

"In battle, the 'poilu' hurls all that is in him against the German—his steel, his hands, at times his teeth. But when the struggle is over, and the enemy staggers into our lines, a captive, our hatred against him is gone, for we understand from our own experiences what he has been through.

Horrors of Verdun.

"The worst example of the horrors of modern warfare was Verdun.

"At Verdun men lost their souls. The dead were better off than the living. The expression 'pools of blood' is prosaic, but at Verdun soldiers drowned in shell holes filled with water that was tinged with the red from human veins, and in which floated remnants of human bodies.

"At the last, Frenchmen from the first line trenches told of Germans leaping in front of their own machine guns. Let us hope that such horrors as these will soon be over."

A second speaker was Capt. George Bertrand of the Alpine Chasseurs, or "Blue Devils."

A Matter of Life and Death

This page will save more lives than many a skilled physician. It is probably in many ways the MOST IMPORTANT ad you have ever seen.

It may save your life.

It will sell thousands of Berry Window Ventilators, which will serve ten to twenty thousand people for ten to twenty years. Thus, in hundreds of thousands of instances (as a result of the ad you are now reading) men, women and children WILL BREATHE PURE, FRESH AIR INSTEAD OF FOUL, GERM-INFESTED POISON.

Just as truly as vaccination prevents smallpox, so will the Berry Window Ventilators sold to readers of this advertisement prevent colds, rheumatism, pneumonia, tuberculosis, etc., in countless cases.

This page is important to us because it costs us more than $1,200.

It is important fundamentally and generally because of the sickness it will prevent and the lives it will save.

It is important to you because it may save your life or a life dearer to you than your own when the death rate soars this winter, as it has every winter in the past.

This chart shows how the pneumonia death rate of Chicago goes up in winter.

The Health Department says this increase in deaths is due to bad air.

This shows only one of the "bad air" diseases which reap a harvest of death every winter.

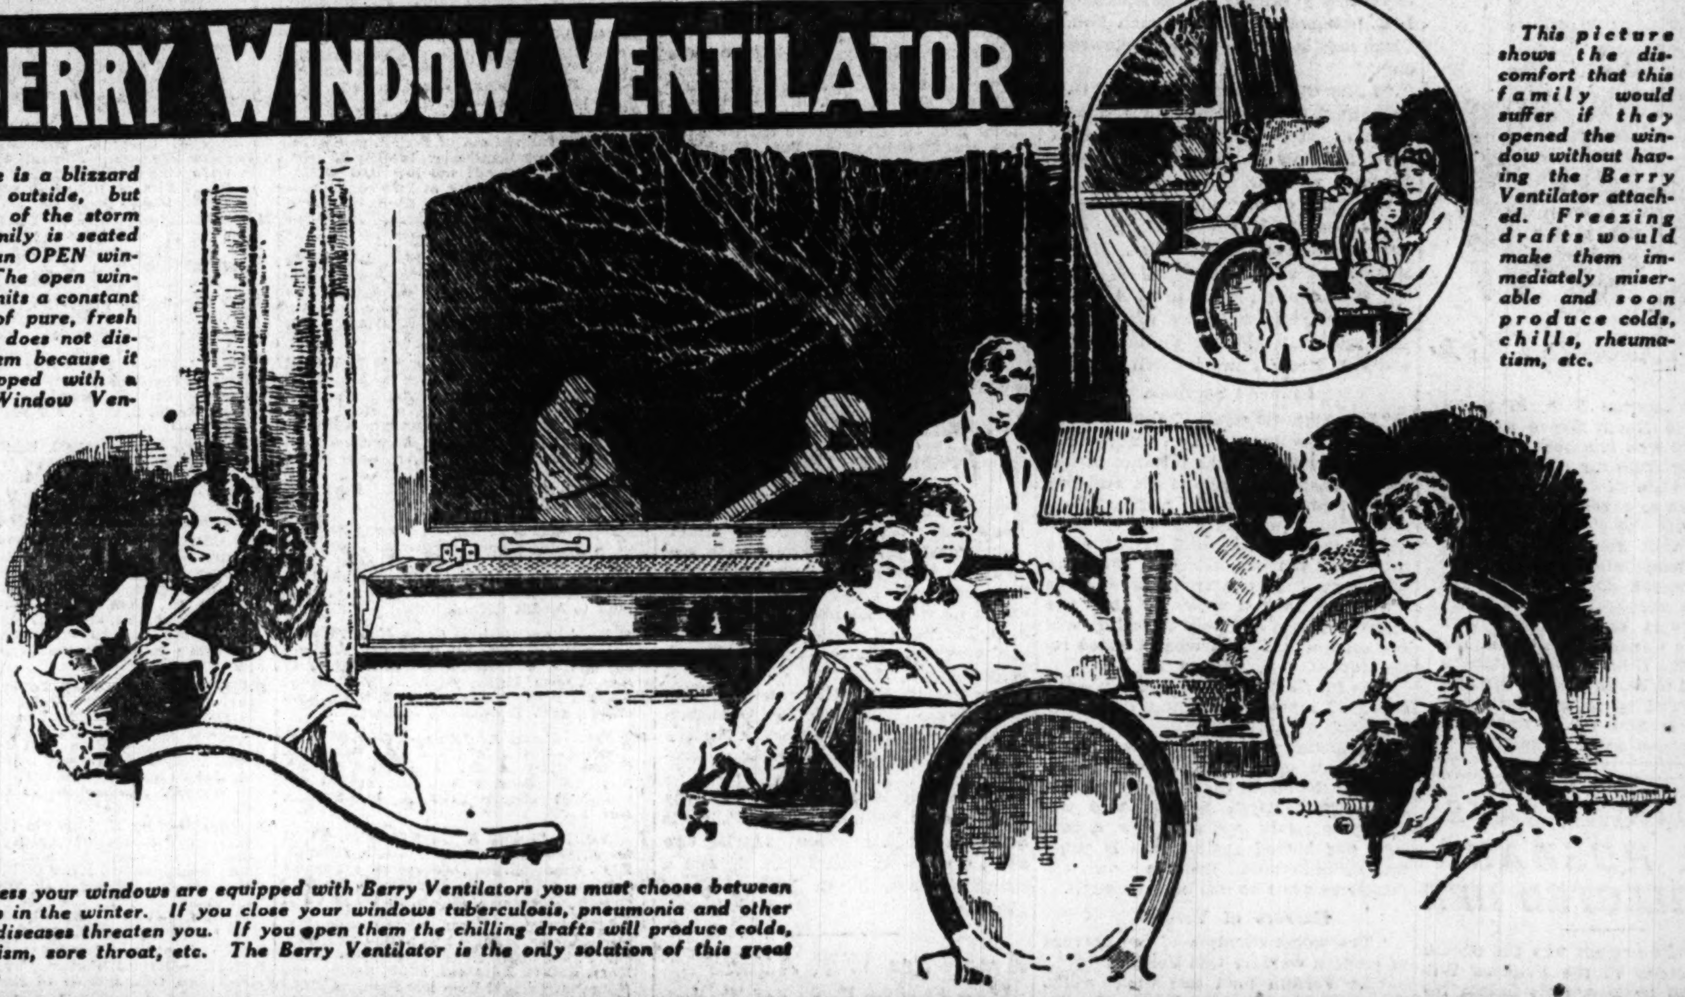
Therefore—we feel entitled to ask that you read it—read it ALL—though you have to miss the "Wake" and Mae Tinee and the markets and even Jack Lait's story to do it. For this page will not appear again and it is

A Matter of Life and Death

FRESH AIR

BEFORE AND AFTER USING THE BERRY WINDOW VENTILATOR

There is a blizzard raging outside, but in spite of the storm this family is seated beside an OPEN window. The open window admits a constant supply of pure, fresh air, but does not disturb them because it is equipped with a Berry Window Ventilator.



This picture shows the discomfort that this family would suffer if they opened the window without having the Berry Ventilator attached. Freezing drafts would make them immediately miserable and soon produce colds, chills, rheumatism, etc.

Unless your windows are equipped with Berry Ventilators you must choose between two evils in the winter. If you close your windows tuberculosis, pneumonia and other bad air diseases threaten you. If you open them the chilling drafts will produce colds, rheumatism, sore throat, etc. The Berry Ventilator is the only solution of this great problem.

GERMS breed in the stuffy, foul air of winter dwellings. Disease increases—deaths multiply. Promiscuous opening of windows produces chilling drafts which redouble the dangers and disasters.

To get fresh air in winter, people resort to hundreds of expensive subterfuges. They flee to Florida and California, spend hundreds of dollars on furs and heavy clothing, resort to winter sports and autoing, build sleeping porches, and install ventilating systems that cost fortunes.

In spite of all this, the great mass of people secure fresh air in winter only in doses. They eat and sleep and work in an atmosphere laden with poison.

This is no exaggeration. Your own breath will poison the air of a room in one hour unless that room has a constant supply of fresh air.

Necessity Mothers Invention.

Dr. Milton H. Berry was confronted with this problem one bitter winter night when his wife lay dangerously ill and much in need of fresh air. Her bed was too near the windows to permit their being opened, since there was a veritable blizzard outside. A cardboard box in which flowers had been received lay beside the bed. It seemed exactly the width of the window, and in his extremity Dr. Berry had an inspiration. He made a number of small holes in one side of the box and introduced it between the window and the sill with the holes up, the bottom of the box turned into the room, and the open side to the outer air. By this crude device he secured a supply of fresh air which was diffused into the room through the small holes. It did not produce a draft and it kept out the snow.

It was only after years of experiment, however, that Dr. Berry hit upon the collapsible feature which makes the Berry Window Ventilator the only practical window ventilator of the 1,200 on which the United States Government has issued patents.

Unique Advantages.

By means of this collapsible and telescopic feature, which is found only in the Berry Window Ventilator, the ventilator can be opened or closed by simply raising or lowering the window, and the supply of air can be easily regulated. When not in use it lies flat on the inside of the sill out of the way.

We state positively that it will give you a constant supply of fresh air night as well as day, winter as well as summer, in bad weather and in good weather, while you are eating or reading, while you are working or playing. We assert positively that you cannot, though you search the world over, find any other device that will perform these services so efficiently.

Trashy Substitutes.

A piece of glass is not a ventilator. A piece of glass on the sill is merely a "deflector." It permits wind, rain, snow, and burglars to enter and simply focuses the draft at a point some distance from the window.

Nor are any of the cheap muslin and cardboard contraptions which flood the market worthy of the name of ventilator. They are merely temporary make-shifts.

The Berry Window Ventilator not only does what it is intended to do but does it perfectly and will last a lifetime.

The Acid Test.

We do not hesitate to guarantee the Berry Window Ventilator to work perfectly and to offer to refund your money any time within two weeks if you are not satisfied. We can do this because the experiences of tens of thousands of users have proven it absolutely practical, absolutely reliable.

In response to our Tribune advertising last winter we received orders from 565 cities in 37 states Out of hundreds of Chicago business firms that ordered Berry Window Ventilators 90% have given us repeat orders and not one has returned a ventilator under our money-back guarantee.

The instance of the Postum Cereal Company of Battle Creek, Michigan, is typical.

On December 8th last they ordered one ventilator, stating that it would be tested and compared with a number of other makes. Since then, without further comment, we have received six orders for batches of Berry Ventilators from the Postum Cereal Company.

Typical.

When firms do comment in reordering, their remarks are like the following:

"We take pleasure in advising that the window ventilators arrived safely and have been installed and are very satisfactory. We will be glad if you will forward us, at once, five Berry Window Ventilators."
M. W. C. MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,
Detroit, Michigan.

"Zero weather is the severest test of your ventilators, and at that temperature they work perfectly. The air is uniformly pure, it cannot become overheated, and all unpleasant and dangerous drafts are avoided. We wish to voice our appreciation of this excellent condition in our offices."
CREDITORS' SERVICE CO.,
Chicago, Illinois.

"The ventilator proved entirely satisfactory, and we would not be without it."
JOHN P. BAST,
Muscatine, Ia.

"Hard to Beat."

"The Gordon-Van Tine Co., Davenport, Iowa, have referred us to you as a manufacturer of a window ventilator 'that is hard to beat.'"
THE GATLIFF COAL CO.,
Williamsburg, Ky.

"Please send me by first Express another 29-inch Ventilator. The one I got from you is proving very satisfactory."
G. V. DINGLE,
Winnipeg, Canada.

"I thank you for your favor of the 23rd ult., and would say that the one Ventilator I purchased has given entire satisfaction, and I would be pleased to have you ship me four more."
JNO. E. KELLEY,
McCook, Nebr.

"We are very much pleased with the Ventilators and this sale will probably mean more sales in this city, as we have shown them to several parties who are thinking of installing a ventilator of some kind."
MT. PLEASANT TELEPHONE CO.,
Mt. Pleasant, Iowa.

"Highly Recommended."

"Your ventilators have been very highly recomended to us by our Chicago office, in the Rookery, and if the two prove satisfactory, we will probably place an order for additional ones."
WM. B. JOYCE & CO.,
St. Paul, Minn.

"The Ventilator has been installed and is working very satisfactorily and we now wish you would kindly ship us another."
FIRST NATIONAL BANK,
Marshalltown, Iowa.

"The Ventilator that you shipped us for experimental purposes has given us great satisfaction, and we have great pleasure in ordering seven more for immediate use."
CITY OF WATERLOO, Iowa.

"I bought one of your new Berry Window Ventilators a few weeks ago and I like it so well that I am ordering two more."
MARTIN L. SMITH,
Racine, Wis.

"Some time ago I ordered a window Ventilator from your firm to use on trial. As this proved very satisfactory, I wish to order four more of the same size."
C. F. LADD, L.L.,
Lincoln, Nebr.

These are the experiences of only a few of the users of the Berry Window Ventilator. Scientific tests in the Chicago schools have proven that the Berry Window Ventilator kept the air of the school rooms fresh after expensive ventilating plants had failed.

How About Baby?

No human being is exempt from the urgent need of fresh air. Your baby draws 40,000 breaths a day. Have you seen to it that these are strengthening, rejuvenating, health giving breaths? Or are they 40,000 minute doses of vitiating, weakening poison?

The importance of good ventilation is so vastly greater than the cost of a Berry Window Ventilator that it is hard to grasp and appreciate.

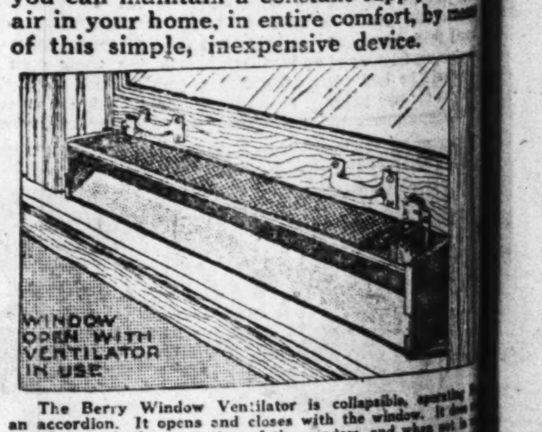
If, after reading this page, you still have doubts as to whether or not you should send in the attached coupon, ask your doctor.

How the Berry Ventilator Works

Each BERRY WINDOW VENTILATOR forms a splendid ventilating system in itself.

While an ample supply of fresh air (from which snow, dirt, and rain are screened) is gently and draftlessly diffused through the room the impure air is forced out of the opening between the upper and lower sashes.

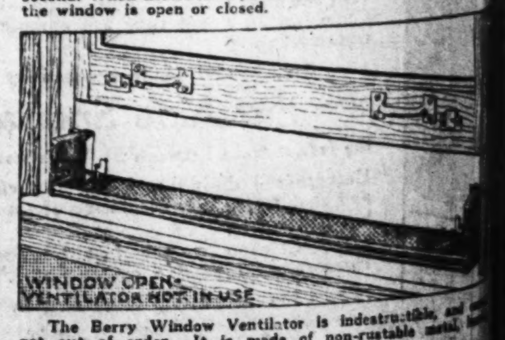
No matter how cold or windy the weather, you can maintain a constant supply of fresh air in your home, in entire comfort, by means of this simple, inexpensive device.



WINDOW OPEN WITH VENTILATOR IN USE

The Berry Window Ventilator is collapsible, operating an accordion. It opens and closes with the window. It does interfere with the operation of the window, and when not in lies flat on the inside of the sill—out of the way. The air admitted is easily regulated by raising or lowering the

One can attach it to the window or detach it within a second. When attached it positively locks the lower sash whether the window is open or closed.



WINDOW OPEN- VENTILATOR NOT IN USE

The Berry Window Ventilator is indestructible, and get out of order. It is made of non-rustable metal, enameled and finished in oak or mahogany.

It can be quickly installed by any one with a

ARRIES SCORING PURPLE'S FIRST TOUCHDOWN AFTER RECEIVING PERFECT FORWARD PASS

Ellingwood bucking the line

ADGER SQUAD EALS DEFEAT O STAGGS, 18-0

Touchdowns and Two Field Goals Bump Maroons.

BY MAROON.

Wisconsin skidded to an 18 to 0 vic- y over the Maroons on Stagg field. e gridiron was sloppy with snow, t not half so sloppy as was the foot- ll game and the erratic stuff made it pretty punk exhibition. Chicago emed to have a chance all through e first half, which ended 3 to 0, but Wisconsin got the breaks by forcing e fight, and as the game ambled through its woozy course it was ap- rent that the Maroons were lacking. As a spectacle the afternoon was tty much of a frost. Preparations 22,000 had been made, but a combi- tion of miserable weather, the at- ction at Evanston, and war condi- s robbed the affair of all the fancy mings. About 15,000 attended.

Maroon Passes Go Wild.

For a while Chicago battled evenly ith the Wisconsin eleven, but when y tried to throw forward passes ings became almost farcical. Big arlie Higgins tried to throw the ball wn the field, but to whom nobody er did find out. He hit the Wiscon- men in the back, in the chest, are in the face, and when there s no Badger in sight he hit the ound.

One of the Wisconsin touchdowns y on an intercepted pass. Eber mpson booted two dandy drop kick ld goals, which was about the only ng in the whole affair which was eet to look upon. This quarter back the whole show for the Badgers, d without him there might never ve been a score in the whole hour of rd pastime.

Badgers Outplay Foes.

In every department of the game isconsin had a shade, except on aight football, where things looked out even. That Stagg was able to n out a team which could defeat rthwestern and hold Illinois to a is considered a great feat out on e Midway.

There is no grumbling for the sorry owing in the Minnesota and Wis- sin games, for the Maroons have d to struggle along with three or r men whose day's work is to put their football suits. The one real r on the team, Charlie Higgins, d to be used at full back all season n he should have been in the line.

Higgins Forced to Quit.

n the third period Maroon fans for the first time this year a Chi- o man lying on the ground call- for time. It was Higgins, who s feeling pretty low with a kick the head. He was given a great nd when he strode to the bench, a ttered, but game giant. Stagg had back field substitute, so Red Jack- n Jr. moved back from tackle and e forward wall shifted all around.

The Maroons had been taught to ar the running passing game of er Simpson. They certainly feared That was about all that any of em did to the tricky Badger style attack. Simpson took the ball from punt formation and beat it for the e lines at top speed, looking down field until he found a man un- ered. Most often it was Bondi, o was straying only a short dis- ce away, but Kelly, Jacobi, and ncock grabbed a few of the longer es.

Rouse Plays Good Game.

To Gene Rouse go the honors in feat. This sophomore half back has en pretty erratic all fall. At the massmeeting before the game Rouse ed to say that he was soon to go o aviation, but he gave up in tears h the statement that he did not pect to be alive for another Chicago e. Then he went out to play the ne of his life.

Rouse was overanxious at the start fumbled the first punt of the ne. A Badger lineman recovered ball and in one minute Eber Simp- had kicked his first field goal. er that Rouse played a sensational e, tearing through the Cardinal kles for big gains.

Maroons in 40 Yard March.

The Maroons came right back after first score and carried the ball for- yards on a straight march with se and Higgins doing the gaining. the fifteen yard line the Chicago e choked itself. Blocki had an y goal kick, but lost his range. peon got off a rolling punt which ed along clear to the Maroon twen- yard line and the Wisconsin root- took a breathing spell.

arly in the second period a Chi- march halted on the Wisconsin en yard line. Then a penalty set Cardinals back to their own two line. Simpson's punt was weak Chicago took the ball only twenty from the goal line again, but y intercepted a forward pass. n the Maroons took the ball, but fifteen yard penalty ruined that nce and never was there a time Chicago threatened after that d.

HYDE PARK WINS COUNTY HONORS; MURPHY IS STAR

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Capt. Edgar [Eckie] Murphy led Hyde Park to the first undisputed championship achieved by a Cook county high school in years when the Hyde Parkers beat Oak Park, winner of the Suburban league heavyweight honors, 6 to 0, at Northwestern field yesterday morning. Oak Park fell before the Chicago leaguers' onslaught of split bucks just like every other Hyde Park opponent this year.

Murphy made three of every four gains for his team, and ripped the right side of the Oak Park line so wide in the first period that the game was won inside of six minutes of play. After that the suburbanites tightened but they could not score.

Uteritz Misses Goal.

Oak Park tried frequent sallies in the first three periods, mainly on forward passes, and made good gains on the open plays, but never could get near enough to score, except in the first period, when Quarter Back Uteritz missed a drop kick by inches. Phelps officiated at the starting end of the aerial tosses, and handled them well, but a Hyde Parker always butted in and intercepted one of the passes just in time to check the suburbanites' rushes.

The field was snow covered and hard but somewhat slippery. A crowd of 2,200, evenly divided between rooters from the two schools, saw the game. The Oak Parkers had their own school band, and even after the Hyde Parkers' margin seemed destined to last out the game the suburbanites refused to be depressed. Head Coach Fred Murphy and Pattie Driscoll of Northwestern were interested watchers.

Batter at Weak Spots.

Immediately after the opening kickoff Hyde Park tested both the left and right sides of Oak Park's line for weak spots and then began battering away, surging straight down the field through guards or on shift plays.

Inside of five minutes the Chicago leaguers had the Oak Park stands yelling, "Hold em!" but Oak Park couldn't, and from the fifteen yard line Murphy relinquished his rôle as advancer of the ball to Neff, the latter boy putting it over in two more plays. Halliday missed the goal, making the score 6 to 0.

Oak Park Braces.

Oak Park braced with the beginning of the second quarter and played a hard game. Neither side could gain, and after an exchange of punts it was Hyde Park's turn to fumble, Neff making the muff. Oak Park gained on a pass, but was thrown back when it tried to gain through the line. Then another pass put the ball on Hyde Park's twenty-five marker, and Uteritz fell back to try a drop kick. He missed by inches, and Oak Park never had such a good chance to score afterward.

Oak Park outplayed Hyde Park in spots, with Timme bucking the line on straight plays, and before the end of the second period had Hyde Park yelling "Hold 'em!" Hyde Park did, and was aided by some bad passes by Oak Park's center, which hurried Uteritz and Phelps on the plays they were calling, and finally checked the suburbanites' march altogether when Uteritz had to drop on one pass to keep possession of the ball.

Both Play Safe Game.

Most of the second half was devoted to playing it safe. Neff of Hyde Park disclosed himself as a good punter, and Phelps of Oak Park followed the same booting tactics. Murphy battered the right side of the Oak Park line wide open, although on the other side of the rush wall, Perry Reininga played finely for the losers.

In the fourth period Caldwell, Hyde Park's injured quarter, went in, and his team started another march, but could not pierce Oak Park's stiffened defense.

GOPHER ATTACK CRUSHES ILLINI IN 27-6 COMBAT

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Minnesota's powerful football machine crushed the desperate Illini today, 27 to 6, and the Gophers thereby acquired whatever laurels accrue to the runner-up for the conference championship.

The more or less dubious distinction of ranking second to a champion meant little to the crew of Northmen, however. Far sweeter from their standpoint was the fact that they had been able to humble Zuppke's Illini after three years of unsuccessful effort. The Gopher triumph was clean-cut. Four times the invaders drove across the Orange and Blue goal.

Dr. Williams presented a typical Gopher eleven, performing with a beautiful precision and teamwork, displaying little of the spectacular but constantly wearing away the Zuppke defense. While there were bright and brilliant moments for the Illini, the home boys were outclassed and that was all there was to it.

Use Straight Football.

While several long sprints by Arnston, the Gopher pilot, relieved the monotony, the Gopher attack in the main consisted of straight football. The Gophers had the ball most of the time and there were endless processions goalward. Seldom were the Illini able to halt the terrible drive of the men from Minneapolis.

The Minnesota line outcharged Illinois' forwards and opened up holes through which Carroll, Lampi, and Kingsley darted for steady gains. Every now and then the Illini ends were swept aside for Arnston on end runs. Arnston called on Hauser to forward pass only a few times, but the Gophers were not proficient at the stunt.

"Swede" Rundquist, the veteran Illinois tackle, playing his final conference game as acting captain, was responsible for the Illinois score when he broke through the Gopher line and blocked Ecklund's punt on the Gopher fifteen yard line. Larimer, who had replaced George Halas at right end, fell on the ball across the goal, while the Illini adherents went wild.

Charpier Plays Great Game.

Charpier was the chief Illini hero by his forty-seven yard run early in the second period, when he broke through the Gopher line and squirmed and dodged his way to the Minnesota seventeen yard line. Here a fumble by Charpier deprived the Illini of what seemed to promise a touchdown.

One of the prettiest sights to everybody but the Illini was Arnston running sixty-five yards in the final quarter, with Ecklund running along with him as interferer. Ecklund bowled everybody out of the way except the plucky Nichols, who made a beautiful tackle, even if it only temporarily delayed the final touchdown for the Gophers.

Minnesota's line not only swept the Illini forwards aside on offensive but was so stiff that the Illini backs could not penetrate it. When an Illini back did get through, the secondary defense was there to throw him back. In the

IN THE WAKE OF THE NEWS

by RING W. LARDNER

HIS MODESTY THE KAISER.

"FINALLY, in January, 1917, when he (Hollweg) was again talking of peace, I said, 'What are these peace terms to which you refer continually? Will you allow me to ask a few questions as to the specific terms of peace? First, are the Germans willing to withdraw from Belgium?' The chancellor answered, 'Yes, but with guarantees.' I said, 'What are these guarantees?' He said, 'We must possibly have the forts of Liege and Namur; we must have other forts and garrisons throughout Belgium. We must have possession of the railroad lines. We must have possession of the ports and other means of communication. The Belgians will not be allowed to maintain an army, but we must be allowed to retain a large army in Belgium. We must have the commercial control of Belgium.'"—Mr. Gerard's Book.

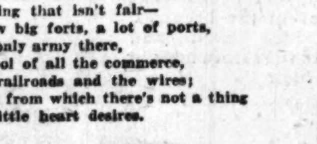
The Kaiser is a violet,
As modest as they grow.
Like Goldsmith's Man, the Kaiser wants
But little here below.
Should we delay the joyous day
Of butchery's surcease,
When they're so dog-gone moderate,
The Kaiser's terms of peace?



What does he ask of Belgium?
Nothing that isn't fair—
A few big forts, a lot of ports,
The only army there,
Control of all the commerce,
The railroads and the wires;
Aside from which there's not a thing
His little heart desires.

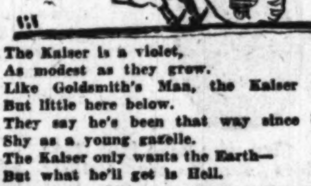
And if he wants so little
From a land of Belgium's size
He'll certainly go easy
On the rest of the allies.

Let's see if we can figure out,
Let's see if we can guess
What all the cuss will ask of us
Before he'll end the mess.

Of course, he'll wish for Poland;
He'll claim Alsace-Lorraine;
That part of Portugal which lies
Between the sea and Spain;
Roumania and Serbia
In toto and intact;
Not very much of Russia—
One-half, to be exact.
Of Italy, say, Venice
And Florence, yes, and Rome;
The choicest site in Naples,
Where he'll build a winter home.
Of France, the whole of Paris,
Versailles, Calais, Bordeaux,
And all the rural districts
Where the champagne makin's grow.

Of Britain, O not every much:
Merely some guarantees
That English ships will make no trips
Without first saying "Please!"
And that the Teuts be given
Exclusive right of way
Between the unimportant ports
Of Dover and Calais.

Of our U. S. he'll ask much less
Because we started late:
Possibly New York Harbor,
Besides the Golden Gate,
The Capitol, the White House,
Our railroads and our mills,
And just sufficient change to pay
His and his sidekicks' bills.



The Kaiser is a violet,
As modest as they grow.
Like Goldsmith's Man, the Kaiser wants
But little here below.
They say he's been that way since birth:
Shy as a young gazelle.
The Kaiser only wants the Earth—
But what he'll get is Hell.

CULVER CADETS BEAT L. F., 49-14

Culver, Ind., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy went over the Lake Forest academy eleven today, 49 to 14, and the undefeated cadets now lay claim to the middle west preparatory school honors. Holmes, Packer, Smiley, Hoster, and Denton figured largely in the Culver scoring. Brilliant running and passing by Bond, Bergen, and Bean gave Lake Forest two touchdowns. Lineup:

O'Dowd Beats M'Carron in Quaker City Battle

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Mike O'Dowd of St. Paul, middleweight champion, made a favorable impression tonight in his bout with Jack McCarron of Allentown. The champion won the popular verdict in six rounds of furious milling.

MICHIGAN FANS OF OTHER DAYS FLOCK TO GAME

BY EVAN STONE.

In the east grandstand at the Michigan-Northwestern game at Evanston were many fans who used to follow the fortunes of Michigan, but who for twelve years have not had a chance to see one of Yost's teams in action. College yells with a familiar sound to spectators who remembered the old Michigan-Maroon struggles were wafted across a home football field for the first time since 1905. Three sections were packed with Michigan supporters.

Benbrook, famous Michigan all-American player, who participated in the 2 to 0 game of 1905 on Marshall field, was back. Some of the old timers were unable to return because of military duties. Tom Hammond, for one, is in France.

Other Old Stars at Game.

Among the other Michigan players who saw the game were Frank Millard, guard on the 1915 team; Almindinger, now at Fort Sheridan, who played a few years ago; Bob Watson, who is an assistant coach; and Bill Knight, who held one of the lines.

Maurice Dunne, end on last year's team, was present in an army uniform. Carl Lundgren, who played football and baseball on Illinois before he went into professional baseball, was on the side lines pulling for Michigan. He is baseball coach at Michigan, and is making plans for a nine that will help revive interest in conference baseball next spring.

"Home Coming" for Purple.

It was "home coming week" for Northwestern and many graduates and former athletes saw the game. Among the guests of Northwestern were the members of the staff of Maj. Gen. William H. Carter, although Gen. Carter was not present. Maj. Philip Fox who is at Fort Sheridan, was there. Maj. Fox formerly had charge of military training at Northwestern. Lieut. Lang, now in charge of military work at Northwestern, sat in a box.

Louis Omer, civilian director of athletics at Camp Grant and formerly Northwestern's athletic director, came up from Rockford for the game. With him came E. M. St. John of Rockford, who went to Northwestern twenty-five years ago, and Lieut. Dana Hill, once an end at Northwestern.

President Holgate Entertains.

Wirt Humphrey, president of the Northwestern alumni, was in a box, as was Gordon Ramsay, an old Northwestern football man. President and Mrs. Thomas F. Holgate had a box party. Among their guests were Philip Shumway, treasurer of the university, and Mrs. Shumway; Col. Nathan William MacChesney, Prof. and Mrs. Walter Dill Scott, and Mrs. James A. James.

Among the old timers of Northwestern who were seen on the field were Dr. Potter and Van Doozer, half backs of the late '90s; Joe Hunter, quarter back in 1909; Dietz, another half back; Bob Hobart, who played half a few years ago; Bill Springer, George Scanlan, and Dr. Otis McClay, an old baseball man.

After the game there were reunions in the fraternity houses, dormitories, and old haunts.

Purple vs Wolverine

Mr. Benbrook and Mr. Lardner were two Michigan men who saw their team go down in defeat.

It was not only "home coming" day for Northwestern, for some of the players it was "father's" day.

Soldiers, jackies, flags, the Michigan and Northwestern bands in uniform, lent a military aspect to the field.

Coach Murphy observed the battle from a tower in the press stand. He had a telephone connection with the players' bench.

It has been a long time since Northwestern displayed the enthusiasm the rooters did yesterday. They sang and shouted for the Purple in a manner which amazed the Michigan men.

It sure was an inspiring sight to see the Michigan band march around the field. The musicians played the popular Michigan songs and the rooters gave the yells with plenty of spirit.

George Scanlon, former Purple football end and a star basketball player, came from somewhere in the east, where he is making powder for Uncle Sam's big guns.

For the first time this season the Purple rooters had competition. The Michigan delegation sometimes worried the Purple cheer leaders and kept them busy working to excel in noise.

While Michigan was on its spurt for the second touchdown, "Speed" Haas, erstwhile Michigan quarter miler, who is now at Fort Sheridan, seized the megaphone and directed the cheering.

Fred Murphy, coach of the Purple team, and Wee Willie McGill were tickled over the result. It was their last game of the season, and needless to say the players were dismissed from training last night.

M. J. Lynch came on from Boston to see his son Martin perform at center for the Purple. Koehler senior was on hand to cheer his son Bob's efforts. He didn't yell "Bob," however, but called "Now, Robert, go along."

With his usual smile, Coach Yost had little to say after the game. Like Al Sharpe of Cornell, Yost simply said the best team won as the game was played. He added he hopes Michigan will have games with Chicago, Wisconsin and Minnesota next fall.

For the first time in years O'Flaherty, the well known restaurant keeper in Evanston, laid off the game. He did not bet a dime, although he had plenty of opportunities. It has been his custom to bet on the teams opposing Northwestern.

Papa Jack Ulrich received an ovation when he had to leave the game in the third quarter because of a wrenched knee. Ulrich's knee has been "out again, in again" all season. It was his last game. Wee Willie McGill, Purple trainer, told Jack that if he ever thought of playing another game, he'd shoot him. Wee has a funny knee himself.

YOSTMEN GIVEN FINE GREETING BY 15,000 FANS

Passes by Evanston Team Upset Visitors' Defense.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Playing a brand of football hard to beat and displaying offensive and defensive tactics which not only surprised the most ardent Purple rooters but which proved a revelation to thousands of Michigan alumni, Northwestern university defeated Michigan on Northwestern field, 21 to 12.

Michigan was beaten from start to finish. Minus the services of Weston, quarter back; Lambert, center, and Culver, guard, the Wolverines still fought all the way. It simply was a case of make or break with the Purple and the men came through in a manner unexpected even by their coach.

Purple Backs Surprise Yost.

Underhill, quarter back, and Ellingwood, half back, performed in a manner which brought rounds of applause. Koehler always made a yard when the distance was needed. After the game Coach Yost asserted he did not realize Northwestern had such effective back field men.

Before the game Coach Murphy said Northwestern had everything to win and nothing to lose. He sent his team on the field prepared to use an open attack, and the way Underhill and Ellingwood shot forward passes, with Arries on the receiving end, upset the Wolverines.

Michigan Draws 15,000 Spectators.

At least 15,000 persons were in the stands when the first toot of the referee's whistle sounded. Some of the snow was scraped from the field before the battle and the Michigan band marched around the field playing "Hail to the Conquering Heroes" and "The Champions of the West."

While the band was playing Northwestern rooters, men and women, stood up and paid homage to the Maize and Blue. The band, with Maize and Blue overcoats, certainly made a natty appearance as it paraded.

Defeated but not disgraced was the trend of talk as Michigan's alumni trended their way back to the city. Men and women who traveled many miles to see the battle were satisfied they had watched a real football game. It was the first game played between Northwestern and Michigan in sixteen years. Michigan won the last in 1901, 29 to 0.

Ideal Day for Sport.

It was an ideal football day. There was just enough tinge in the air to stir the players to their best efforts. Instead of continually calling for time the athletes bent to their work in a manner which brought applause from such old timers as Umpire Walter Kennedy, who played in the days when Michigan was represented by its best teams.

Kennedy played against Michigan in the days when Clarence Herschberger and Gordon Clarge were instrumental in the promotion of a place kick. These games were played in the old Coliseum on Sixty-third street. Roby, a tackle, was captain of the Maroon eleven. Michigan men will remember Chuck Widman, Niel Snow, and Boss Weeks, not to mention Sweeley, Heston, Redden, Joe Maddock, and Germany Schultz.

The Michigan team which came out on the field yesterday was given the greatest ovation ever accorded a football eleven. The Northwestern rooters rose from their seats, took off their hats, and stood in silence as the Michigan band played the Wolverine Alma Mater. That Michigan is welcomed in its return to the conference goes without saying. Despite its defeat, western football fans are with the Ann Arbor boys.

Star of the Battle.

After the usual preliminary practice Referee Holderness brought the captains to the center of the field to call the toss of the coin to determine goals. Capt. Randolph called the turn and elected to receive the ball, and Weiman kicked off for Michigan. Ellingwood caught the ball and returned it to his forty yard line.

The Purple could not gain, and an exchange of punts left the ball on Michigan's thirty yard line in the Purple's possession. A perfectly executed forward pass, Ellingwood to Arries, resulted in a touchdown. Underhill kicked goal, making the score 7 to 0 in favor of Northwestern. Neither team threatened during the remainder of the period.

Yosts Score Touchdown.

When play was resumed it was Michigan's ball in midfield. The Wolverines, by short off tackle drives, with Cohn and Hanish carrying the ball, placed the oval on the Purple three yard line. Fromke, who had taken Weston's place at quarter, then drove through center for a touchdown. Weiman failed to kick goal, and the score stood 7 to 6, in Northwestern's favor.

Capt. Randolph elected to receive the kickoff. Weiman kicked off to Underhill, who made a beautiful return to the center of the field. The Purple back field, by driving off the tackles and executing forward passes, Underhill to Arries or Marquard, took the ball to the Michigan two yard line. On a straight line plunge Koehler went through center for a touchdown. Ellingwood kicked goal. Score, 14 to 6.

Purple Scores Again.

Play at the start of the third period seesawed about the middle of the field. Finally a forward pass from midfield, Ellingwood to Underhill, netted thirty yards, and Underhill then circled right end for a touchdown. He also kicked goal, giving the Purple a 21 to 6 lead.

Much punting marked the remainder of the period. Michigan was in danger twice—once when a Purple pass was incomplete in its ten yard zone, and again as the quarter ended with the Purple holding the ball for first down on the Yosts' five yard mark.

Fromke Makes Long Run.

An incompleted pass in the ten yard zone stopped the Purple as the fourth quarter opened. The complexion of the game changed then. After an exchange of punts Fromke caught one of Underhill's kicks and ran fifty yards before being nailed in the Purple ten yard zone. Line plunges by Hanish and Rye carried the ball to the Purple three yard line, then Fromke dove through center for a touchdown. Weiman failed to kick goal, making the score 21 to 12.

As the game was played, Northwestern was the better team. Offensively and defensively the Purple was superior. Despite the fact the ball was in Wolverine territory most of the time, Michigan played a game of football which satisfied alumni who came miles to see the game. Michigan played its best football, but its best was not good enough.

CARLISLE SCALP TO PENN, 26 TO 0

Philadelphia Pa., Nov. 24.—Pennsylvania defeated the Carlisle Indians, 26 to 0, a much smaller score than had been predicted by followers of Penn. With the regular team in the field in the first and part of the second periods, Pennsylvania showed its superiority. After that the Indians put up a plucky fight, twice threatening to score. Casey Jones, Indian center, was injured in the second period and removed to a hospital. Later he was able to return to the field and watch the game.

NO PERMITS FOR AUTO CONTESTS

New York, Nov. 24.—The contest board of the American Automobile association, which governs automobile racing in this country, today decided not to issue any more sanctions for motor contests during the period of war exigency. This practically means the abandoning of automobile racing until after the war, it was stated.

The step was taken because of the government need of skilled mechanics. It was explained that there are more than 1,200 drivers and mechanics enrolled in the American Automobile association, who, now that the temptation to race has been removed, will be available for war work. The resolution of the association putting the ban on racing will go into effect Jan. 1, when the rules of the contest board will be suspended. It was announced.

BOWEN AND SENN MIDGETS SCORE HARD VICTORIES

Former Downs Lake View, 6 to 3, and Latter Beats Parker Team, 7-3.

BY PREP

While the suburban and city league high school champs were deciding the Cook county heavyweight title, lightweights in the two divisions of the Chicago league were playing post-season games to determine the divisional winners. In No. 1 division, Bowen downed Lake View, 6 to 3, at De Paul field. In No. 2 division, Senn kept its season's record stainless by finally eliminating Parker, 7 to 3, also at De Paul.

Lake View got off to a lead against Bowen, rushing the ball near enough for a field kick in the first period. Capt. Bulot made the place kick and things looked gloomy for Bowen. In the second half, however, Taylor, a fast half back for the south siders, managed to break away for a forty yard gain, and before he could be dragged to earth placed the ball on Lake View's five yard marker. Meyers made the score by hitting the line.

Hanvick Hero of Game.

The rest of the game was a hard but futile fight by Lake View to get even, but Bowen kept the ball out of danger by kicking whenever possible. Hanvick, of the losers, played the game of his prep career. Kisch broke up many of Lake View's trick plays. Lineup:

Bowen [6].		Lake View [3].

Touchdown—Meyers. Goal from field—Bulot. Referee—Lipski. Umpire—St. Clair. Head lineman—Gaughan, Notre Dame. Field judge—O'Connor, Chicago.

Senn Clinches Title.

Senn clinched the title in division No. 2 by beating Parker in a hard game. The teams formerly had played a scoreless tie. A Parker fumble proved the break of the game in the first quarter, starting Senn on a confident promenade of fifty yards up the field, with Ryan and Lifvendahl hitting the line. Ryan went over for touchdown and Wright kicked goal.

In the third period Morris of Senn caught a pass and raced for a long gain, and Senn seemed on the way to a decisive score, but the same player fubled and again turned the tide, this time in Parker's favor. Parker rushed the ball into Senn territory, with Gardner doing good work, and from twenty yards Holmes drop kicked for three points that made the game uncertain until the final whistle.

Parker Stops Enemy.

Parker's steadfast defense piled up the Senn attack twice in the former's ten yard zone in the third period. Pullen, Gardner, and Rankin played well for Parker, although Rankin was so closely watched he could not break away as in former games. For Senn, Lifvendahl and Wright were prominent. Lineup:

ATTACK BY GOPHERS DOWNS ILLINI, 27-6, ON LINE SMASHING

entire game Illinois [illegible] only six first downs, while the [illegible]s' total was twenty-five.

Five Gopher Stars.

Capt. Hauser, Ecklund, and Harry Williams in the line and Arnston and Carroll were especial Gopher factors.

The Zupp men held the Gophers scoreless in the first period. Dr. Williams' outfit paraded all the way down the field to the orange and blue fifteen yard line, where Capt. Hauser muffed a forward pass which seemed an easy bet. Carroll soon made another costly fumble and the Gopher partisans began murmuring things about the Illinois jinx.

They were sure that there was a hoodoo when in the second period Charpier made his forty-seven yard sprint. Illinois began to produce a jinx, too, however, when Charpier fumbled when the Illini were within a few yards of the Gopher goal. This gave the Gophers a scare and they went to work with a will. Another relentless drive, broken up only by an eighteen yard sprint by Arnston, took the ball to the Illini threshold. Zuppke's men were stubborn and it took four downs before Carroll crossed.

Dr. Williams' squad came back strong in the third period when another score resulted in short order after the typical march to the goal. Unrelieved by any sprint or pass, just a remorseless battering away at the line, the Gophers were feeling pretty good when Illinois got its breath. Rundquist blocked Ecklund's kick and Larimer fell on the ball for a touchdown.

Despite this feat, disaster came quick and fast to the Illini in the fourth period. Once more the Gophers drove goalward, a buck here and a punch there, until it was easy for Arnston to cross. When Hauser kicked goal this made the score 20 to 6.

Passes Puzzle Visitors.

It was at this juncture that Zuppke removed Lovejoy and put Nichols back at quarter with immediate results. For the first time Illinois showed snap. Nichols hurled the ball precisely, now to Klein, then to Sternaman, until the Gophers were at their wits' end. A daring pass over the goal line went bad, however, and the rally ended. It was Ilinois' last effort.

Soon Arnston ran sixty-five yards, protected by Capt. Hauser, to the Illinois ten yard line, where Nichols made his plucky and expert tackle. The Gophers quickly rushed the ball over, Kingsley scoring, and the game ended in a few moments. Lineup:

LAKE FOREST LOSES TO NORTHWESTERN COLLEGE ELEVEN, 6-0

Northwestern college of Naperville defeated Lake Forest college, 6 to 0, in the hardest fought game seen at Lake Forest in recent years. Northwestern, although outplayed, made the only touchdown on a questionable decision by the umpire on interference on a forward pass which put the ball on Lake Forest's one yard line. Lake Forest held three times, but the fourth time Werner put the ball over for Northwestern. Lake Forest twice had the ball near the Northwestern goal line, but was held both times. The stars of the game for Northwestern were Werner and Erffmeyer. McFerran, Lake Forest captain, playing his last game, was good both on offense and defense. Finney and Leiter played hard and well in the line.

By its victory, Naperville claimed the state collegiate title, as it defeated Knox, champion of the "Little Five," 28 to 19, in a previous game. Lineup:

BADGERS SWAT MAROONS, 18 TO 0

field Simpson shot a pass to Bondi for a nice gain and followed up with another. The Badgers were penalized, but the next pass bounded off the fingers of a Maroon to Keyes, who ran to the Chicago ten yard line before he was dragged to earth. Still another pass went over the goal line incompleted and Chicago took the ball as the first half ended, 3 to 0.

The Maroons got frisky with the forward pass in the third period. Bondi intercepted one and ran to the Stagg twenty-five yard line. Two passes from Simpson to Jacobi and Bondi put the ball on the five yard line, where Jacobi plunged over for a touchdown. Simpson missed goal.

Second Touchdown Funny.

The second touchdown for Wisconsin was laughable. Higgins was set to throw a forward pass, but the Badgers rushed upon him. He let go a shot which hit Carpenter, only four feet away, in the chest. The lanky center juggled the ball for a moment and when he had recovered from his surprise ran forty yards across the little snowdrifts to the goal line. Simpson missed the kick for the extra point.

The fourth period was uneventful, except for the Maroon imitation of the Wisconsin short forward pass game. Jackson threw the ball to his own men three times in a row, but then a long one failed. Simpson intercepted another attempt, which put him in place to kick his second field goal and wind up the scoring. The game ended after Chicago had three times stopped the visitors on the two yard line.

Plenty of Rough Stuff.

There was a lot of rough work on the field. Once Brelos and Kelly sneaked off in the corner and scrapped it out while the officials were measuring off a penalty. Kiekhefer was penalized for roughing Blocki on a punt and the men on both elevens called each other naughty things all during the fray. Lineup:

FUNSTON BEATS GREAT LAKES, 7-0, IN GREAT SCRAP

Potsy Clark Makes Score Possible with a Run of 32 Yards.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—The army triumphed over the navy in the west's big service game at Association park this afternoon, 7 to 0. "Potsy" Clark, a lieutenant in Uncle Sam's land forces and former Illini star, was the hero for Camp Funston. His thirty-two yard dash through a broken field put the army in a position to score early in the second quarter. The Naval Training station team held momentarily and the army suffered a penalty of five yards, but that did not daunt the Camp Funston boys, and Clark on a fake punt formation tore through the line for eight yards and the touchdown that won the game. Beck kicked goal.

Navy Loses Johnson.

The rest of the game was a scoreless struggle, with the army havin an edge and at times threatening to increase its lead. The navy eleven lost its star, Johnson, early in the game through an injury to his leg. He got back for only a few minutes of flashy playing later, but the Jackies never seemed to get well under way and were forced to fight a defensive play most of the time.

The cold weather and an occasional gust of snow seemed to have no effect on Kansas City's desire to see football players of the service in action and 15,000 attended the game.

FORT GRID TEAM HAS MANY STARS

Five All-American football players, reinforced by many All-western and All-conference stars, will represent the Fort Sheridan Reserve Officers' Training camp in the game against the Great Lakes jackies at Stagg field on Thanksgiving day.

Three full elevens are practicing for the fray, and it is planned to have every man participate at some time during the contest. The lineup and personnel of the reserves will not be announced, by edict of Col. Ryan, until after the official award of commissions to the embryo officers Tuesday morning.

Until the last few days the Fort Sheridan men did their practicing between 9 and 10 o'clock at night. Since their military duties have lightened, owing to the imminence of the closing of camp, they have practiced in the afternoon. The teamwork is said to have developed rapidly.

The net proceeds of the game will be divided equally between the jackies' recreation fund and a fund started by the Fort Sheridan men of the first and second camps for those left behind when the husbands and daddies go to war. Prices of admission are $1 to $5.

Sousa's band of 350 pieces will attend the game with Capt. Moffett and staff and Col. Ryan and staff as guests of honor.

PLANS BIG SHOW TO AID SOLDIERS

Charley White, boxing instructor at Camp Grant, returned to Chicago for a day yesterday and immediately launched a movement which is expected to result in considerable money being raised for athletic equipment at Rockford. The plan is to hold a big entertainment at the Coliseum within a month in which boxing, wrestling, and vaudeville will be featured. White said last night that the plan looked sure to go through and that one vaudeville agency already has started to line up the talent.

Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, on his way to Denver to box Sailor Kirke on Thanksgiving day, and Gunboat Smith, who mixes with Fred Fulton at St. Paul on Tuesday, will be in the city today and stop off here for a workout at the Arcade gym.

Alvarez Bowlers Take Lead in Pin Tournament

Des Moines, Ia., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Chicago teams rolling in the first squad at the Midwest Bowling tournament tonight played havoc with the five man standing by rolling into first, second, fourth, seventh, ninth, and tenth places. Alvarez, with 2,920, took the leadership, the L. & G. team, with 2,830, placed second, while the Marion Handleys of Milwaukee, former leaders are now in third place with 2,822. The Logan Squares, 2,811; Clausius, 2,752; Wabash Banners, 2,739; and the Borger Coals, 2,724, were the other Chicago teams to place well up.

Alvarez got away with a game of 1,001, and their second effort was good for 997. The third game was 922.

Soldiers Beat Case, 20-7; Then Reserve Team, 13-0

Cleveland, O., Nov. 24.—Camp Sherman soldiers beat two college elevens in one game here today.

They took the Case university footballers into camp in the first half, 20 to 7, and then in the second half walloped the Western Reserve, 13 to 0. More than fifteen thousand persons saw the game.

James Garfield, a grandson of President Garfield, starred for the soldiers against the reserve eleven. The soldiers' eleven was made up of famous former college football men, now officers and privates in the national army.

CAMP GRANT ELEVEN BEATS PICKED TEAM OF ROCKFORD, 35 TO 0

BY PARKE BROWNE

Rockford, Ill., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—There are folks in these parts who allow there's going to be a mighty good football game at Stagg field next Saturday when Camp Grant meets Camp Custer. That opinion became universal here today when the Grant team defeated an eleven made up from the teams of the Rockford Amateur Athletic club and the Badger Athletic club. The score was 35 to 0.

The army officers showed a big improvement over last Saturday, when the Great Lakes team shaded them, 9 to 6. The worry which followed that contest has been replaced by a feeling that Grant will be well represented in the big army battle.

Less than two minutes after the whistle Jack Eddy, former Princeton quarter, got away for twenty yards, and the march for the Rockford goal was on. Shiverick, Eddy, and Rasmussen did most of the running with the ball. In the second half Walter Wood performed brilliantly. The officers' line held so hard that only once did Rockford make first down. Lineup:

BOOST CONTEST HERE SATURDAY

The most remarkable list of patrons ever announced in support of a sporting event in Chicago was made public last night by Frederic W. Upham, chairman, and Emil C. Wetten, vice chairman of the citizens' committee in charge of the Camp Grant-Camp Custer football game to be played at Stagg field Dec. 1.

Nearly 300 Chicagoans, many of whom have boys at Camp Grant, are individually boosting the game among their associates.

The proceeds are for the benefit of the camp athletic equipment and company funds. Headquarters are at room 317 Women's Temple building and tickets are on sale at Thomas E. Wilson, Mandel Brothers, and the Fair.

Since 1910 the successful treatment of an 82-year-old woman and a 17-year-old boy by the Australian government Neal Institute was the best "age record" of the modern "Neal Way" method.

Among the many men and women of nearly all "classes" and ages treated at the Head NEAL INSTITUTE, No. 811-T East 49th Street, Chicago (Oakland 439), last month there was one minister and one woman 84 years of age.

MICHIGAN AGGIES HOLD SYRACUSE TO 21-7 VICTORY

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—The University of Syracuse defeated the Michigan Aggies, 21 to 7, in the final game of the season. The teams appeared evenly matched, but towards the close of the first period Steele, on an off tackle play, raced for a touchdown.

The Aggies scored in the second period. A series of short passes put the ball on the Syracuse twenty yard line. Archer fell back for a place kick, but passed to Ramsey, who went over for a touchdown. Recovering a fumble in the third quarter, Swartzer ran sixty-five yards for a touchdown, and M. Brown scored a few minutes later on an end run of twenty-five yards.

The Aggies have not won a game during the season. It was generally supposed Syracuse would win by at least 40 points. Lineup:

DARTMOUTH BEATEN IN REVIVAL COMBAT WITH BROWN, 13 TO 0

Boston, Mass., Nov. 24.—The Brown-Dartmouth gridiron rivalry, once an annual feature of the New England football calendar, was renewed today for the first time in eleven years, and Brown won, 13 to 0. The contest was held on Braves' field. It was stubbornly fought and the largest intercollegiate football crowd of the season here cheered the teams.

Brown's points were made in the third period. A wretched fumble of a long high punt by McDonough, Dartmouth quarter back, gave Brown the ball on Dartmouth's ten yard line, and Chief Brooks went over for a touchdown. Brown scored again after taking the ball from midfield to Dartmouth's six yard line. A long forward pass helped in this advance. Brooks was used in a line play and scored the second touchdown.

Dartmouth, undismayed, immediately started a dash which carried the ball to within a foot of the Brown goal. The Brunonians held after a terrific struggle inside the five yard line.

In the second period Phillips of Dartmouth booted a drop kick from the forty-five yard line against the goal post crossbar, and in the final period Dartmouth twice brought the ball deep into Brown's territory, only to lose it when forward passes were intercepted. Lineup:

IOWA WINS AS GAME ENDS, 6-3

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Thanks to Capt. "Waddie" Davis, playing his last college game, Iowa won the state football classic, defeating Ames, 6 to 3. Davis' two drop kicks to Boyd's single boot turned the trick. Iowa went through the bruising game without a substitution, an unprecedented record for this season's team.

Then just before the pistol cracked Davis booted his second goal from the twelve yard line and won the game in a spectacular windup. Lineup:

BRANDY'S BOOT WINS 3-0 GAME FOR NOTRE DAME

Player Who Beat Army Downs Wash. and Jeff. in West-East Clash.

Washington, Pa., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Joe Brandy, Notre Dame's flashy 137 pound half back, was the western team's hero in the 3 to 0 victory over W. and J in the intersectional game here today. Brandy's trusty right toe sent a kick from placement through the goal posts from the forty-five yard line in the third quarter. Brandy is the same player who decided Notre Dame's former intrsectional game in favor of the west. He made the touchdown that beat the Army.

The game opened disastrously for Notre Dame. Degree, star punter of the Catholics, was carried from the field after the very first play. His wrenched knee that has kept him out of every game this season would not support him. Rydzewki was also lost to the visitors when he was put out of the game for slugging. Madigan, who was with the team against his physician's order, following a pneumonia attack, had just substituted for Degree, then moved over to Rydzewki's place. Although scarcely able to talk, Madigan played through the game.

Bahan Stars as Pilot.

Bahan played a brilliant game at quarter for the winners. Henry and Garbisch, W. and J.'s star pair of tackles, met their equal the first time this season in Philbin and Andrews. Tresselon on offense and Henry on defense, stood out as the W. and J. stars.

W. and J. tried nineteen passes, but gained only forty-seven yards, as Notre Dame was watching for tricks. Notre Dame tried only three passes and all failed.

Battle to Standstill.

OHIO HELD EVEN BY AUBURN TEAM

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 24.—Auburn today held the western conference champion football team of Ohio State university to a scoreless tie in a benefit game played before the Ohio National guard division at Camp Sheridan. Ohio was the aggressor throughout but when its goal line was in danger the Plainsmen beat back every assault.

"Chic" Harley, the visitors' star, twice had opportunities to achieve victory through field goals, but both times his kicks were wide. Right Half Back Ducote for Auburn played almost as brilliantly as did Harley and his great punting proved a factor in counteracting Ohio State's smashing drive. Lineup:

RUTGERS BEATS NEWPORT TEAM

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Cupid Black's Newport Naval Reserve team suffered its first defeat of the year here this afternoon when the powerful Rutgers college eleven won, 14 to 0. All scoring was done in the second period.

Fullback Whitehall scored first with a touchdown between right guard and tackle. When Hite fumbled a punt on his own seven yard line Rutgers recovered. Two short forward passes sent the collegians over for their second touchdown. Right Half Back Gardner booted both goals.

The sailors' line was weak before the tremendous smashing of the Rutgers backs. The former college stars performing in the backfield for Black's eleven did well, but could not offset the alertness of the Sanford team.

Philadelphia Man Wins Pinehurst Golf Tourney

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 24.—C. L. Becker of Philadelphia won the president's trophy in the finals of the autumn tournament at Pinehurst today, defeating H. G. Phillips of Pinehurst, 1 up. The governor's trophy, in the second division, went to C. F. Lancaster of Boston, who won over G. T. Dunlap of Summit, N. J., at the twentieth hole. The secretary's trophy, third division, was won by W. J. Hitchcock of Youngstown.

ANGRY HOOSIERS BATTER PURDUE IN 37-0 VICTORY

Indiana, with Two Stars Barred, Surprises Its State Rivals.

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Surprising Purdue with a whirlwind offense, Indiana overwhelmed its ancient rival, 37 to 0. Playing without the services of Howard and Ewert, the Crimson stars who were declared ineligible on the eve of the great homecoming game, the Stiehm coached team carried the fight to its rivals in the first quarter and outplayed, outfought, and outwitted the eleven which was picked to win.

Every man on the winning team put every ounce of playing power into his game, and Purdue was kept on the defensive during the whole four periods, except at the end, when the forward pass attack was opened up in an attempt to produce a touchdown.

Stars for the Winners.

Cravens, Minton, Bowser, Heuring, and Keever rammed the line, skirted the Boilermaker ends, and dashed through wide gaps which the forwards ripped on the off tackle plays.

The Crimson presented a well rounded and varied attack which the Purdue defense was unable to solve at any time, and seldom did Indiana have to punt. Indiana's backs displayed running ability that gladdened the hearts of the hundreds of "old grads" who came back to see the annual scrap. Minton's long forward passes worked for large gains time and again, while the side kick caught the Boilermakers off their guard at least twice at critical moments.

Play for Revenge.

The Crimson players were keyed to fighting pitch by the disqualification of their two stars, and Stiehm did the rest by welding together in the last day a combination that swept irresistibly through a surprised Purdue team. Lineup:

LEAGUE OWNERS SEEK ADVICE ON HOW THEY STAND

Statement by Ban Johnson Asks Definite View; Wants No Favors.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

In a formal statement prepared yesterday by request of the press, President Johnson of the American league put in concrete form the situation which confronts professional baseball, and outlined the problems to be solved. He invites frank discussion of them, with a view to developing a possible solution during the winter, declaring it will be the "height of folly to send a baseball club owner blindfolded into the campaign of next summer."

In view of the disapproval expressed by the administration and from other sources of the offer to close the gates of the ball parks last summer and devote all the man power of baseball to ending the war, he asks "wholesome advice" as to what to do now.

Ban Outlines Situation.

The statement follows:

Chicago, Nov. 24, 1917.

Professional baseball confronts a serious situation, and the matter of operating leagues next summer will be a difficult problem to solve. Conditions, such as the war has produced, never existed before in the life of the game, and they can be met only as they come to the surface.

With the country involved in the most terrific conflict in the history of the world it behooves every man to give serious and profound thought to the nation's welfare. The American league is a unit in its desire to do the right thing—which fact was amply demonstrated by its work last summer.

With millions of men to be sent to France the man power of the nation will be taxed to its full limit. The time does not seem opportune for play or recreation. With that thought in mind it was suggested last summer we close our gates, and one and all should bend a shoulder to the wheel until the war was brought to a close.

Offer Not Approved.

This declaration did not have the approval of the administration and did not strike a popular chord in other quarters. The president said he saw no reason for the curtailment of our schedules, and many of the leagues operated to the close of the season. The draft was not in full force, and none of the clubs felt its blighting effect.

Those who are not familiar with the workings of baseball have no conception of the delicate mechanism of a major league club. Deprive a team of a single player and you might remove it from the rank of a "contender" and send it to the bottom of the list.

Could the draft fall upon all clubs with equal force, then some semblance of a favorable "lineup" might be obtained. It would be the height of folly to send a club owner blindfolded into the campaign of next summer. Common sense and prudence must prompt us to get our bearings. This can only be brought about by an open and frank discussion of the subject. If the public demands baseball of the highest grade, that fact will be developed during some period in the winter months.

Years Spent in Upbuilding.

Our present formations were created through years of strenuous labor and careful thought. To a casual observer it will be apparent this fine balance can be easily destroyed, with no means available for its reëstablishment. Fully 90 per cent of the players in the major leagues will meet the draft requirements, and with the tremendous demand for men, it can be readily understood how great will be the drain upon the profession.

The patriotism of the player is unquestioned, and I am confident they will all cheerfully respond when the call summons them to the colors. Teams are developed and rounded into form at the spring training camps, and there is seldom a radical departure from the original "makeup."

Ask No Favors.

In this trying period the government can wait on the convenience of none, and men must go to the cantonment camps when notified. Such conditions will arise in 1918, and must result in endless confusion in the great baseball family. The matter of maintaining a contest of keen interest that would appeal to the public, seems impossible of accomplishment.

We ask for nothing, but an interest that represents millions of dollars seeks wholesome advice on the subject.

BOHEMIANS PLAY HARVEY KICKERS

Bohemian-Americans, by defeating Harvey this afternoon at Forty-sixth street and Kedzie avenue, have a chance to advance to third place in the Chicago Soccer league. If Harvey can get out its regular team it should be a close contest. Swedish-Americans and Scottish-Americans, who are tied with four points each, will meet at Forty-second and Chicago avenues. Lincoln Park, which is in third position, will tackle Joliet, undefeated leader, at Joliet. Games in the other divisions are:

Second division—St. George's at Lake Forest; Calumet Park and Cechie at Twenty-sixth and Kostner; Columbians and Washington Park at Fifty-second and Cottage Grove.

Third division—Palmer Park and Hungarians at Dauphin park; Olympia and Rangers at Thirty-first and Tripp; Sellers and Atlas at Portage park; Union and Swedish American II. at Thirty-first and Central Park.

Fourth division—Sparta and Hebrews at Twenty-eighth and Kenton; Fram and Roseland at One Hundred and Eleventh and Indiana; Victoria and Hungarians II. at Lincoln park; Danish-American and Cechie II. at Douglas park.

Games start at 2:30.

SOME DEER HUNTING HINTS.

BULLETIN.

Open season for deer in Michigan—Nov. 10 to Nov. 30. Nonresident license fee, $25. Limit, one deer.

Wisconsin—Nov. 21 to Nov. 30. Nonresident license fee, $50. Limit, one deer.

Minnesota—Deer and moose, Nov. 10 to Nov. 30. Nonresident license fee, $25. Limit, one d[illegible] one moose.

Each state has laws regarding hunting in certain counties. Get the complete laws and study them before you go.

It is estimated that between now and the first of the year 10,000,000 pounds of venison will be added to the meat supply of this country by deer hunters. Whether these figures, which are furnished by the government, are accurate or not we are unable to say, but we would venture the guess that 10,000,000 pounds of hunters will be combing the woods this season in search of game and recreation. A report from St. Louis county, Minnesota, stating that 2,500 licenses were taken out there the week before the season opened, indicates that our guess is, indeed, conservative.

The best advice to a city man going to the big woods for the first time is to get a guide (some states require it) and follow his instructions to the letter. It would seem to any sane person that this advice is superfluous, but we know inexperienced hunters who have gone after deer (ten inch bowie knives, high leather boots and all) and who tried to tell the guides how to do it after they got there.

Reading "The Still Hunter" will not put any man in the Deerslayer's class—not by a long shot—but a novice, reasonably well ballasted with horse sense, can get an idea of the problem from the printed page and a rudimentary knowledge that will be useful, whether he hunts with a guide or goes it alone.

The following, written by G. F. De La Mater, in the Michigan Farmer, is heap good talk:

"Here are three fundamental facts for the deer hunter to keep in mind:

"Nature has provided the deer with a very acute sense of smell, very keen ears, and odors are blown with the wind. It but follows that when the deer lies down for the day he will lie where he can smell the hunter before he is himself seen. He accomplishes this by walking for some distance in the direction that the wind is blowing before lying down. Then he is enabled to smell the hunter long before the latter approaches the immediate vicinity. As soon as the deer is certain that the hunter is on his trail he jumps and is gone like the wind.

"The success of the hunter who never fails to bag his deer is explained by the fact that he takes advantage of this trait. The deer is almost oblivious to approach from any other direction, so long as the hunter is not walking directly toward him. To prove this contention I have located a deer in a thicket and then, walking to the leeward of him in a course that would take me past him at a distance of 200 or 300 yards, I have fired my gun several times in passing and the deer still kept to his bed; but as soon as I entered the thicket on his trail—making no noise at all—he jumped and was gone. I have found that this will work nine out of ten times.

"Having learned this much, the course is obvious. When you start out in the morning, if the deer tracks are plentiful, always take a track that is going in the direction toward which the wind is blowing; on approaching a place wherein a deer is likely to lie make a wide detour and approach from the opposite direction, then beat back and forth—crosswise to the wind—until you either jump your deer or find his track going farther on, in which case the performance must be repeated. By proceeding in this manner you are almost certain to get a shot at close range.

"To aid those who haven't had very much experience in hunting deer I will endeavor to describe the places where he is most likely to lie. In open country the deer loves to feed in the most exposed places, where he usually finds grass to suit his taste. After a fire he feeds on the tender shoots and sprouts of the 'burning.' In this sort of country there are apt to be thickets and 'jam piles' where the brush is dry and it is next to impossible for the hunter to approach silently. This is the sort of cover that the deer delights to lie in. In a thickly wooded country he will stop in dense thickets, swamps, sloughs, or any place hard to approach.

"When 'jumped' the deer will go straight down the wind if the hunter approaches on his track; if he comes from the opposite direction the deer will take to his back track and follow it for some distance. I have noted many exceptions, but still this is the best rule to follow. If the hunter follows a deer after he has been 'jumped' he will keep going in the general direction of the wind until he either finds water or tires the hunter out. By taking advantage of this trait two men can work together and get the deer. This is hard work, and I never make a practice of it unless I am after an especially fine head."

AMES' HARRIERS WIN X-COUNTRY CONFERENCE RUN

Chicago Finishes Second, Wisconsin Third, and Ohio Fourth.

Led by Capt. A. E. Hawthorne, the Ames' harriers won the Big Ten cross country run in Washington park yesterday morning. The Iowa runners, representing the only nonconference school in the race, were assessed 42 points. The Chicago runners were second with 59. Wisconsin totaled 61, Ohio 80, and Minnesota 87.

The big Ames captain stepped over the snowy paths in the fast time of 26:48 3-5. Capt. George Otis and Harry McCosh of Chicago were a close second and third. Capt. Golden of Wisconsin was fourth.

The Maroon team would have been an easy winner if the fifth man had been the equal of his mates. The last of Tom Ecks' runners tagged in last, giving the well balanced Ames team victory.

The park course was covered with snow, but the runners covered the course in fast time and were well bunched through the five mile grind.

YACHT CLUB MEN DO PART IN WAR

What the Chicago yachtsmen have done for the government and the U. S. navy in particular in the war will be told to members of the Chicago Yacht club at their annual meeting and dinner next Tuesday at the Chicago Athletic association, when Charles H. Thorne, newly elected commodore, will take office.

Last March, when the entrance of this country into the war seemed inevitable, the yacht owners of the Chicago Yacht club, after conferring with Capt. Moffett, organized the Chicago Yachtsmen's Naval auxiliary, which is now known as the U. S. Naval Reserve Force auxiliary. James O. Heyworth, ex-commodore of the club, was appointed chairman, and he and the committee did effective work in furnishing officers and men for the navy. Commodore Heyworth is now in Washington with the United States shipping board, and Frank O. Wetmore, president of the First National bank, has succeeded him as head of this organization.

Godfrey H. Atkin will be toastmaster at the dinner. Speakers will be Charles H. Thorne, Charles E. Kremer, who was secretary of the club when it was organized in 1875, and Frank O. Wetmore.

AT THE BILLIARD ROOMS.

Charley Morin [57] found Harry Whiting of Burdick's an easy victim in their Chicago Billiard league match at Bensinger's last night, winning, 52 to 27, in sixty-three innings. Whiting led, 23 to 22, in thirty-one innings, but after that scored only four singles. Starting at the forty-ninth inning, Morin made thirteen points in five innings.

G. Butler Sutton, Ora Morningstar, and Welker Cochran will compete in a balkline tournament at the Recreation room in Detroit, starting Dec. 5. Sutton has started practice for the tournament, which will be for the benefit of the Billiard Players' Ambulance fund.

Illinois billiardists are perfecting their plans for collecting $100,000 as their contribution to the American billiard players' ambulance fund. Already a number of local exhibitions have been staged and subscription blanks placed in over 1,000 rooms in different parts of the state.

At a meeting of the state committee last week at the Illinois Athletic club it was decided to ask Gov. Lowden to act as honorary president of the state committee, and in addition a local committee was appointed to enlist the services of prominent citizens who play billiards.

FALLING OFF IN STEEL TONNAGE IS TRADE AID

Consumers Gain Through Ability to Secure Stocks.

The heavy falling off shown in the unfilled tonnage of the steel corporation on Oct. 31 which was assumed by the public to be an unfavorable feature is regarded by producing interests as a benefit. Consumers also gained through their ability to secure stocks. Since the first of November many consumers who have been long waiting to place contracts for rolled steel at the lower level of prices established through government intervention have been accommodated. The commercial orders accepted, together with the tonnage distributed by the government, have called for a volume of tonnage double the contracts booked during the first half of October.

New Warehouse Prices.

Another important feature is the establishment of new warehouse prices on various commodities by which the ultimate consumer as well as the distributing agents will receive the benefit of the price revisions. At the same time the prices realized by the steel mills will continue profitable to them.

It may be noted that the prices fixed through the coöperation of the government and the manufacturers are approximately the average prices which were realized on the material shipped to consumers at the time the new schedule was announced. Only in exceptional instances did the producers sell any important tonnages of steel at the higher prices quoted for several months in the open market.

Federal Reserve Bank.

The weekly statement of the Federal Reserve bank again reflected loans made in connection with the payment of the 18 per cent installment on the second Liberty loan. Bills discounted to members reached a total of $98,313,197, an increase of over $21,000,000, compared with previous week. Check collections, or rather checks on hand, for collection at the member banks, decreased about $27,000,000. All normal operations in the district were overshadowed by the loan payment.

The statement of condition of the Federal Reserve bank in Chicago at the close of business Friday, Nov. 23, follows:

Gotham Loans Decrease.

The New York bank statement showed a decrease of $181,833,000 in loans. This in part offsets the expansion of nearly $223,000,000 loans the previous week. These loans presumably were made in connection with the carrying of government bonds. When the 18 per cent installment was paid, there followed a reduction in the loans. The statement yesterday also showed a decrease of $48,883,000 in deposits which led to a gain of $4,123,380 in the surplus reserve. That item now stands at $113,383,690. The figures follow:

BROOKLYN UNION GAS CO. OMITS USUAL 1% EXTRA

Directors of the Brooklyn Union Gas company have omitted the usual 1 per cent extra dividend, which has been paid since 1911. This action was taken because of the abnormal increases which have taken place in all raw material costs during the current year.

The principal item which increased was water gas oil, which this year is costing 5.025 cents a gallon, an increase of 2 cents a gallon, or 65.7 per cent over the contract rate which prevailed in 1916. Since the company will use approximately 74,000,000 gallons of water gas oil this year, the excess cost will be $1,500,000. Coal is another of the raw materials which has advanced a great deal in price.

LIBERTY LOAN PAYMENTS CAUSE RISE IN DEPOSITS OF CHICAGO NATIONAL BANKS

Deposits of 21 national banks of Chicago on Nov. 20, 1917, were $699,288,860, as shown in published reports in response to the call of the controller for a statement of condition of the national institutions on the date mentioned. The total is an increase of $30,666,094 compared with the figures of Sept. 11, the date of the last previous call.

Deposits of 93 state banks at the beginning of business on Nov. 21 were $701,663,548, compared with $703,310,880 on Sept. 12. The decrease is $1,647,332.

The rise in deposits of the national institutions is due to the piling up of funds here to make payments on the 18 per cent installment of the Liberty loan. A great deal of this money came from country banks of which Chicago institutions are correspondents. The figures of deposits, however, are not so high as they were one week ago before the loan installment was paid. The deposits then were at almost a record height. The largest bank, the Continental and Commercial National, had, ten days ago, deposits of $287,000,000. On Nov. 20, the date of the call, the amount had been reduced to a little over $263,000,000. This was still $10,000,000 above the figures of Sept. 11.

The state banks as a whole decreased because of payments into the reserve bank on account of the Liberty loan.

The normal state of business does not differ much from last September. The loan account naturally fluctuates with deposits, though the expansion on Nov. 20 of the national banks compared with Sept. 11 was $31,878,483, or 6.68 per cent.

The individual statement of the Continental and Commercial National shows it had at the Federal Reserve bank rediscounts amounting to $21,000,000. These rediscounts doubled at the time the loan installment was being paid.

Other national banks had a smaller volume of rediscounts in accordance with their volume of business.

Following is a summary of the loans, deposits, and cash resources of the national and state banks of Chicago on the dates of the last two calls:

The new Packard Touring Car, seven passengers

Six smashing records

In the most splendid motor test that the world has ever seen—the Twin Six principle again demonstrates its marvelous economy.

And a Packard twelve-cylinder engine has evidenced its ability to get record power from every atom of its fuel.

At Sheepshead Bay, in an official six-hour trial, Ralph DePalma has battered down all world records for high speed endurance—covering 633 miles in six hours, an average of 105.6 miles an hour, as against 94.4, the previous record.

With a Packard engine of only 300 cubic inches cylinder capacity he traveled, in a single hour, 112.96 miles—bettering a record no one has been able to lower in seven years—a record made by an English machine of twice this cylinder capacity.

Then, in succession, the world's records for two, three, four, five and six hours fell to the game Italian pilot and his flying car.

These six world records are but further proofs of the amazing endurance and economy of the Packard car.

Seventeen distinctive body styles in open and enclosed cars in the Third Series Twin Six—3-25 and 3-35

Development

The company is shipping ore from Cohutta to the Chattanooga Coal and Iron Company. This one property has put the company on better than a 20% earning basis.

Wells have been sunk to determine a location on the manganese property at Cohutta, and it is the company's intention, in the very near future, to develop this property.

At Wildwood, Ga., development is being pushed as rapidly as possible, and the company is now shipping ore. Roadways have been built, tracks, steam shovels, and other necessary equipment have been bought and the Southern Railway is building us a siding.

LATE REACTION IN GRAIN MARTS; OATS TAKE LEAD

Elevator House Sells Oats Freely; Cash Corn Is Weak.

New high levels were attained for oats futures yesterday, but the market subsequently weakened and finished unchanged to ⅛c lower than previous resting spots. Heavy selling of May oats by the Armour Grain company was a late feature. It induced a number of the longs to sell out and also encouraged some short pressure, the bears working on the theory that the market is due for a reaction and some entertained hopes of a material betterment in the receipts in the near future. Commission houses had oats for sale at the outset, but the offerings were quickly absorbed by cash interests and a rally followed during which December oats advanced to 71c. The latter went to the widest premium over May on the crop, the difference at the close being ¾c.

Cash oats were 1@2c higher with premiums firmer, No. 3 white oats selling mainly at 2¼c over December price. Local shipping sales were 80,000 bu. A little export business was reported done at outside points. Primary receipts were 971,000 bu, against 869,000 bu a year ago.

Corn Uneven at Finish.

Corn closed ⅛@¼c higher for December and ¼@⅞c lower for distant deliveries. The market was much inclined to follow the movements of oats and during the morning was a small affair. Later there was some broadening in the trade. Updike was a free seller of May corn and there also was good selling by Blum. Nye-Jenks covered December corn and found fairly liberal commission house offerings at certain limits. The weakness in the cash corn market and belief that receipts will run larger in the near future because of the order to furnish more cars for movement of grain were depressing influences. Weather conditions were also favorable for drying out the new crop.

Cash corn was steady to 15c lower with good grades showing the most weakness. Local shipping sales were 10,000 bu. Primary markets had 708,000 corn, against 1,190,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts for the week were 1,840,000 bu, against 2,674,000 bu a year ago.

Provision Market Easier.

Provisions were quiet and easier. An early decline followed a break in hog values and prospects for a larger run of hogs next week. There was some scattered demand around the lower levels, but small interest was shown in the market and the late reaction in grains caused prices to dip again near the finish. Western markets received 656,000 hogs for the week, compared with 602,800 last week, and 861,550 a year ago. Local meat shipments were 17,540,000 lbs this week, compared with 18,634,000 lbs a year ago, while lard shipments were 5,985,000 lbs, against 7,676,000 lbs last year.

Firmer Rye Market.

Rye was ½c higher with cash No. 2 selling $1.79@1.79½. Receipts were 14 cars.

Barley ruled 1@2c higher. Malting was quoted $1.25@1.41 and sold $1.33@1.41 feed and mixing quotable, $1.05@1.31, with sales at $1.15@1.31; screenings were quoted 60c@$1.10 and sold 85@90c. Receipts, 42 cars.

Timothyseed was dull. March closed $8.30 bid and $8.50 asked. Cash lots sold $6.25@6.60. Cloverseed held steady with cash quoted $20.00@26.00.

Flax closed 1½c lower with cash quotable $3.20½@3.23½.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—COFFEE—The market for coffee futures showed renewed steadiness today on covering by December shorts and scattered trade buying, accompanied by reports that Brazil was offering coffee less freely in the cost and freight market. The opening was unchanged, but prices worked higher during the morning, with December selling up to 6.92c and May to 7.35c, or about 5@6 points net higher. Talk of stiffer freight rates was considered a factor on the advance, with the market closing 6@10 points net higher. Closing bids: December, 6.94c; January, 7.03c; March, 7.19c; May, 7.36c; July, 7.53c; September, 7.71c. Spot coffee was quiet; Rio 7s, 7½c; Santos 4s, 9½c. No fresh offers were reported in the cost and freight market. The official cables reported an unchanged market at Rio. Santos spots were 50 reis and futures unchanged to 25 reis lower. Brazilian port receipts, 61,000 bags; Jundiahy, 43,000.

GOSSIP OF THE PIT

It is reported that J. J. Stream, vice president of the board of trade, has been appointed a member of the food administration, to take charge of the coarse grain department. Mr. Stream denied that any definite arrangements had been made. It is believed that the duties of the new office would be to look after the movement of corn and oats and attempt to get an accumulation of this grain at the terminal markets. Thus far this season the demand for cash corn and oats has been in excess of the supply, and this has prevented the food administration from obtaining lower price levels. The trade is of the opinion that this move would be of much help to relieve conditions.

Wheat receipts at primary markets since July 1 total 111,960,000 bu, compared with 227,756,000 bu for the same period last year. Corn receipts since Nov. 1 were 10,868,000 bu, against 24,443,000 bu last year. Oats receipts since Aug. 1 total 140,665,000 bu, against 159,265,000 bu a year ago.

Good grades of corn were sharply lower, the declines in some instances being 15c. The industries were mainly after the cheaper grades of corn, and further reduction of the big premiums for the better kinds is anticipated next week.

Grading of corn is distinctly better, and some houses report a decided increase in country offerings. Recent demand for cash corn has come largely from dealers who had sold corn for November shipment. This seems to be pretty well filled up. Moisture tests in the country are getting lower daily. Iowa points reported some 16.22 per cent corn taken in yesterday.

Crary-Johnson Co. have the following from a traveling correspondent covering the corn belt: "There has not been as much soft corn in any crop for years. I find farmers buying cattle and hogs in large quantities, some even going to Canada to procure stock to feed, and they are sorting out the best corn for the market and claiming they are going to hold for $1.50."

Minneapolis and Duluth received 3,008 cars wheat for the week, against 4,242 a year ago, while Winnipeg had 5,932 cars, against 6,037 last year. Kansas City, St. Louis, and Omaha received 1,206 cars, against 2,120 a year ago.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 26 cars; corn, 160 cars; oats, 152 cars; rye, 14 cars; barley, 42 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 46,000 head; for all next week, 180,000 head.

JOHN V. FARWELL REVIEW.

The John V. Farwell company, in its weekly report of trade conditions, says:

"Advance spring orders for dress goods, silks, ginghams, and many other lines continue to show increase. Retailers' staple wool dress goods commitments for late spring delivery indicate that many merchants are at this time partially covering their fall, 1918, requirements.

"Cotton market continues very firm with greater shortage being felt in many lines of cotton goods. A noteworthy feature in the cotton goods field is the splendid progress having been made by finishers in giving the "wool" appearance to lines of dress goods and suitings.

"Large demand for ginghams in piece goods is being felt by the ready to wear lines and merchants are operating in a big way on women's, children's, and misses' dresses, giving the spring outlook for this class of wearing apparel an exceedingly bright aspect.

"Reports from Belfast state that warehouse stocks of not only linens, but practically all classes of fabrics are smaller than ever."

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—COTTON—The cotton market showed continued or even greater firmness today on a renewal of active trade buying covering and a broadening outside demand. All deliveries made new high records for the season, with the advance led by December. The general list closed firm at a net advance of 31@62 points. The market opened steady at a decline of 2 points to an advance of 2 points. Offerings were quickly absorbed by the buying of brokers with Liverpool and domestic trade connections, and the market became more active with the demand growing more general as prices worked higher. January sold at 28.90c and March to 28.60c, with these and later deliveries showing net gains of 38@40 points late in the morning. The close was within 5@6 points of the best. Futures:

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 24.—COTTON—New high levels again were reached in the cotton market here today, prices being forced upward by heavy buying, caused chiefly by the absence of December tenders. Hogs at Chicago yesterday sold 5@10c lower. Pigs were 25@50c off, as compared with Friday's closing figures. Hog receipts were estimated early at 25,000 head, but were later reduced to 18,000. The market closed strong, with the reduction in the supply the principal reason for late firmness. Top sales were made at $18.00 and the bulk at $17.60@17.95. Pigs sold up to $16.75, with the bulk at $15.00@16.00.

Final prices made medium and strong weight hogs 15@25c higher than a week ago, while the lightweights were that much lower. Pigs were $1.25@1.75 lower than a week ago. Average price of all hogs here this week was $17.75, compared with $17.45 last week. Receipts for the week increased 13,000 head, but were 71,000 short of arrivals for the same week last year.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 5,000; Anglo-American, 1,500; Swift & Co., 2,900; Hammond, 1,500; Morris & Co., 1,800; Wilson & Co., 1,600; Boyd-Lunham, 500; Western Packing Co., 1,800; Roberts & Oake, 400; Miller & Hart, 300; Independent, 700; Brennan, 900; Agar, 300; butchers, 700; shippers, 1,500; total, 21,400; left over, 5,000.

CATTLE.

Low priced steers finished the week at an advance of fully 25c, while more expensive grades were barely steady at last week's closing figures. Cows and heifers were 25@40c higher, and all kinds of western range cattle finished at a substantial gain, the bulk being up 50@75c. Total receipts for the week showed a decrease and were much smaller than a year ago. Consumptive requirements for high priced beef were restricted, but cheap dressed and canned beef met with a broad demand. Calves had a brisk and steady trade at last week's closing level.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week, 328,000, against 329,000 the preceding week, 288,000 a year ago, and 180,000 two years ago. Total for 1917 to date, 10,051,000, against 8,483,000 the same period in 1916.

SHEEP.

Sheep and yearlings finished the week on a steady basis, while lambs were unchanged to 50c lower, the heavyweight lots showing the decline. Receipts for the week showed little change, but demand was sluggish, excepting for prime, lightweight, fat lambs, which early in the week sold up to $17.40, and showed good gains. The sheep offered came in scattered lots and were of ordinary quality. They sold within a narrow range of prices on about the same basis as for the previous few weeks.

Water Power Should Be Utilized.

The greatest economic need of the country today is more and cheaper power. The government has fixed the price of coal, but this seems to have decreased the output, which was hardly equal to consumption in the first place. The result of the situation is short supplies everywhere, from dealers' yards to consumers' bins, and the continual menace of disaster if a heavy snowfall or other cause should tie up the railroads for a few days.

The consumption of coal has been unusually large in the last two years because of feverish activity in the iron and steel business. This activity will decline at some time in the future and relieve the tension, but the same trouble is liable to recur later.

In the meantime there are thousands of good water power sites where the energy furnished by nature is allowed to run to waste. Attention was called to this matter recently by the fate of a power project in Nebraska. A company was formed ten years ago to build a canal and turn to use the current in one of the swift flowing rivers that run down the long slope from the great plateau of the west. Engineers approved the plan and a small experimental plant was built. Then work stopped because the authorities would not consent to a grant of rights sufficient to make possible the financing of the undertaking. Water that might have saved the consumption of many thousand tons of coal annually is running to waste there, and apparently may continue to do so till the coal mines are exhausted.

There are hundreds of other power sites that might be and ought to be utilized.

Reading.

H. I. W.—The Reading company is a holding corporation owning a railroad and a coal company. Its bonded debt is relatively small, but its subsidiaries have bonds outstanding and its $140,000,000 of stock is half preferred, so that the charges ahead of the common are large and the surplus applicable to dividends is subject to wide fluctuations. At present the 8 per cent is being earned rather more than twice. The railway net earnings have been falling off, but the coal company has gained, and the result is only a small decrease from last year, when the dividend was covered two and one-half times.

American Cities Company.

J. B. D.—After paying only half dividends on its $20,553,500 of preferred stock for two years, the American Cities company stopped payments altogether last July. The company operates utilities—principally street railways—in six cities of the south. Its difficulty is that gross earnings have been growing slowly and costs rapidly. The report for the year ended Sept. 30 last, however, showed a small increase in net earnings. The half dividend on the preferred was earned, but money is needed for financing improvements of subsidiaries. An early resumption of dividends would seem unlikely.

Midland Counties Coal.

The Midland Counties Coal company is a subsidiary of the Commonwealth Edison. It owns some large tracts of coal lands, mostly in Illinois, and has issued $2,500,000 of serial bonds secured by first mortgage. A sinking fund of 5 cents a ton is to be paid on all coal shipped. The mine has been leased to the Peabody Coal company and the Commonwealth Edison company has contracted to take a minimum of 1,500,000 tons a year. The margin of security is wide and the companies owning and operating the mines are strong, which makes the bonds better than the average one secured on a coal mine. Coal bonds have, however, been in disfavor here for some years.

Missouri, Kansas and Texas.

A. F. D., Indianapolis, Ind.—The Missouri, Kansas and Texas was put in a receiver's hands two years ago. It had issued $63,283,257 of common stock and $13,000,000 of preferred and $141,689,400 of bonds and notes. The receiver has issued $2,166,000 of certificates. The report for the calendar year 1916 showed a deficit of $1,134,634 after fixed charges. This was due to increased outlay for maintenance. In 1916 $14,900,000 was spent on maintaining road and equipment, compared with $9,900,000 in 1915. This year less has been spent on maintenance and the report for the eight months to Aug. 31 showed a balance of $416,000 after charges. The stock will be assessed heavily. Until a definite reorganization plan is adopted it is impossible to make any estimate of the prospects.

United States Operating Company.

S. R. N., Fremont, O.—The United States Operating company had the general agency contract of the United States Annuity and Life company. Last January the Annuity and Life was consolidated with the International Life of St. Louis and the agency contract canceled. The International Life, however, assumed liabilities already incurred under that contract. We do not know what value is left to the operating company. It never has made public any reports. Indications are that the stock now has little value.

Brief Answers.

C. H., Griffin, Ga.—Plans to reorganize the Drexel Motor corporation were given up recently and the property was sold at auction. It is understood that hardly enough was realized to pay the debts. Stockholders probably will get nothing.

E. V. W.—Dividends on the St. Paul railway stocks depend largely on what the interstate commission does about rates. In September the road did not fully earn its preferred dividend.

OILS AND MINES

Holders of Osage-Hominy and of Oklahoma Producing and Refining stock were informed yesterday that the merger of the two concerns was now assured. As a matter of fact, the two companies have been operating as one concern for some weeks. Oklahoma Producing two weeks ago offered to purchase all the outstanding stock of the Osage-Hominy company. The purchase will be effected by the holders of the Osage-Hominy stock depositing their shares with the Bankers' Trust company and receiving in return an equal number of Oklahoma Producing and Refining company shares.

A new process, said to yield 75 per cent of gasoline, is reported to have been successfully worked out at the Midwest Refining company's plant at Casper, Wyo. It is a modification of the Rittman process and was developed under the supervision of Dr. David T. Day, formerly with the United States geological survey. It is called the Rittman-Day theory. The importance of the new process is considered far reaching. Experiments have been conducted for more than a year, and the efficiency of the process is believed to have been fully established.

Between 10,000,000 and 11,000,000 pounds of copper will have been produced by the Magma Copper company during 1917, according to present indications. This will compare with 8,400,000 pounds turned out last year. With the payment next month of a regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share there will have been distributed to stockholders in the twelve months about to end $2.10 a share.

It is expected that trading in the shares of the Copper Valley Mining company will begin on the New York curb tomorrow. The company has $800,000 of capital stock, of which $400,000 is treasury stock, and owns free and clear 200 acres in the Copper Basin district of Yavapai county, Arizona, within a few miles of the Phelps-Dodge Commercial, the Timken-Garfords Copper Hill, the Jerome-Prescott, and other well known copper properties.

Motor Truck Prosperity
HARVEY MOTOR TRUCK COMPANY
INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF ILLINOIS
WM. E. DEE, President

The motor truck industry is growing by leaps and bounds—in 1917 more than 100% increase.

Business men no longer question the economy of motor trucks as compared with horses.

The War Department and our Allies are demanding more trucks for 1918 than the total number to be produced this year by all manufacturers combined.

This, in addition to our rapidly growing domestic market, and the number demanded by foreign neutrals imposes a tremendous task upon American motor truck manufacturers.

To enable us to produce our share we require additional working capital for expansion and the purchase of large stocks of materials. For that purpose our capitalization has been increased $200,000.

You are invited to participate with us in the substantial profits that are bound to accrue.

The Harvey Motor Truck Company has been in successful operation since 1910.

First Mortgage 6% Real Estate Bonds

First Mortgage Bonds in $100, $200, $500 and $1,000 amounts, secured by new apartment and business buildings in choice Chicago locations, have proven to be as sound as the land itself. There is no element of speculation about them.

The careful investor prefers 6% rather than promises and worry. He wants results now, not after he is dead.

He also prefers a Chicago Title & Trust Co. guaranteed first mortgage to a beautifully engraved share in the sun's rays, which, reduced to the plebeian tongue, is "hot air."

If you would invest carefully, and with your eyes wide open—write for our folder No. T-126; also let us show you the security, and furnish you with our Investor's Manual, which is free to investors.

I want a few men able to invest not less than $5,000 each to join me in enlarging my proposition.

I have a large farm within 50 miles of Chicago, on which I now have several hundred hogs. When, as The Tribune of Oct. 26 states, "one sow will produce two litters of pigs each year, and will bring up from 6 to 10 pigs in each litter, and these pigs can be brought to a weight of 200 lbs. in 8 months," you can see the profits that will be possible from a herd of 100 brood sows.

Pork is selling today at $17.40 per hundred weight on the hoof. The government has established $15.50 as the minimum price at which pork can be sold. Take your pencil and figure what will one sow's 12 to 20 [illegible] in a year, each weighing 200 [illegible] months, bring at $15 per hundredweight. I breed my sows twice a year, and instead of killing the little females in each litter, I breed them when they are 6-7 months old. After the first year there is certainly from 100 to [illegible] per cent profit in scientific hog raising.

I want several silent partners to enable me to close a deal for several hundred brood sows and another farm upon which I hold an option.

IMPROVEMENT HALTED.

New York, Nov. 24.—Recent improvement in the stock market was halted today by indications that requirements due to the war and attendant labor troubles are likely to revolutionize the country's transportation system.

Rails reflected this prospective condition to a greater extent than other issues, but industrials, shippings and metals also were affected. Gross recessions of 1 to 3 points were registered with no appreciable recovery at the heavy close.

Trading was light and narrow, early gains being limited to equipments, the tobaccos and a few specialties. An extreme advance of 3 points in General Electric was more than sacrificed later on announcement of a new stock issue, even though accompanied by an "extra" stock dividend.

Steels and Motors Fall.

Steels, motors, equipments and coppers yielded 1 to 3 points. United States Steel falling back to 96⅞, a net loss of 1⅝ points. Crucible Steel, Bethlehem Steel, and Republic Iron were 1 to 2¼ points lower.

Reading made an extreme reaction of 1⅛; Southern Pacific a point and Atlantic Coast Line as much. Canadian Pacific was strong at the outset but succumbed to moderate pressure later.

Bonds were irregular on more active offerings. Liberty 4s ranged between 97.62 and 98 and the 3½s from 98.96 to 99.06. United States bonds [old issues] including Panamas, were ¼ of 1 per cent lower on call during the week.

Railroads Show Decrease in September Net Increase

Reports made by leading railroads to the interstate commerce commission for September show a decrease of more than $19,000,000 in net operating income and a decrease of about $50,000,000 for the first nine months of this year, as compared with September and the first nine months of 1916. The comparative statement follows:

	1917.	1916.
Gross oper. rev.	$357,711,187	$325,711,288
Net oper. income	88,985,043	108,001,011

Henry Ford War Orders Now Exceed $200,000,000

It is reported from Boston that Henry Ford has war orders exceeding $200,000,000. The company proposes to reduce the daily output of its automobiles from 2,800 to 1,500, a reduction of about 50 per cent from the high mark reached last September.

The output of 1,500 cars a day is expected to be maintained for some time, though Henry Ford is committed to the promise of turning over his entire plant if the needs of the government so require.

Standard Oil of Louisiana to Increase Capital Stock

The increase, Standard Oil company officials stated, was largely to retire existing indebtedness. The fee paid the state for doubling the stock was $2,500, said to be a record amount in Louisiana.

Steamship Company Asks for Higher Grain Rates

The Clyde Steamship company filed application with the interstate commerce commission to increase rates on grain and grain products and on iron and steel articles between New York and Boston and South Atlantic ports and beyond.

ON THE BROAD STREET CURB

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—[Special.]—Business broadened materially on the curb in the last week, with prices of many stocks fluctuating over a wide range and with substantial advances established in the great majority of the issues traded in.

The minor stocks which had been for months without features shared in this improvement. Chevrolet ranged from 55 to 66, United Motors from 15 to 17¾, and Standard Motor rose from 8¼ to 10½.

The copper stocks were also in increased favor. The greatest gain of this group was made in Magma, which rose from 34 to 39.

Oil stocks share in the improvement, with the greatest gain made in Midwest Refining, which was traded in at 109 to 123. Merritt rose from 21⅞ to 25⅝, and Cosden company sold at 7⅛ to 7⅜.

War order stocks were fairly active, with Aetna moving up from 6⅞ to 7¾; Curtiss Aeroplane from 27 to 28⅝, and Wright-Martin from 7⅛ to 8. Submarine ranged from 13 to 14½.

Bonds were active and irregular, with the initial trading in the General Electric two year 6 per cents when issued, which sold at 99 and 98⅝. The old three year 6s declined from 100½ to 99. Russian 6½s sold at 65 to 63 and the 5½s dropped from 55 to 50½.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

John D. O'Neill, trunk manufacturer, 5516 Lake Park avenue—Liabilities, $1,446.20; assets, $620.40; Coleman S. Everett, attorney.

FINANCIAL NOTES

SALES for ten months ended Oct. 31 of the American Tobacco company were larger than for the entire year 1916. Ten months' business amounted to over $71,000,000; sales for the twelve months of 1916 were $70,009,000. Gain in October touched the previous high water mark in point of increased business, which was June of the current year. In each of these months the company's business gained approximately $2,500,000 over the corresponding months of 1916. These sales figures are for American Tobacco company proper, and if continued during the closing two months of the year mean a business for the twelve months of between $85,000,000 and $90,000,000. The previous record was last year's total of $70,009,000.

Although the Erie railroad management has procured authority from the New York and New Jersey public service commissions to issue $15,000,000 6 per cent twenty year refunding and improvement bonds, series A, bankers say the company does not contemplate any public financing at present, but is securing authorization of the issue in order to be prepared to sell bonds or notes issued by them should the occasion later on require.

Net earnings of the United Cigar Stores company for the full year 1917 will run approximately $1,000,000 ahead of 1916, after allowing for war taxes. The company will earn approximately $14 a share for its common stock in the current year, as compared with $10.09 in the previous year. The United opened and equipped 100 new stores in 1917. Its chain is now made up of about 1,100 stores and 500 agencies.

The Emergency Fleet corporation has placed a contract for thirty-six 3,500 ton ocean going boats with the American Shipbuilding company, instead of with Robert Dollar. The contract price is reported to be $700,000 for each boat, or a total of $25,200,000. Construction will be on the great lakes and the deliveries will be made next July or August.

Announcement comes from Washington that if Michigan coal operators refuse to ship coal in accordance with prices fixed by the state fuel administration under authority of the United States fuel administration, the government will take possession of the mines and operate them.

Directors of the General Electric company voted to offer to stockholders at par an issue of $20,000,000 new stock. The board also voted a special semi-annual dividend in stock of $2 a share.

MARKET COMMENT

SOME New York observers predict a specialty trading market, with independent steels, motors, tobaccos, and leathers prominent. Sentiment among professional traders is distinctly bullish, especially on steels, and still further substantial advances in this group are confidently predicted.

Net earnings of the Tobacco Products corporation for the ten months ended Oct. 31 increased approximately 100 per cent over the corresponding period last year. Because of the large orders for cigarets, the company is working some of its plants on a night schedule. The concern is doing the largest export business in its history.

Gossip from New York is to the effect that a plan now under consideration for the payment of back dividends on International Mercantile Marine preferred calls for a new issue of preferred stock to replace the present one. This new issue would be either 7 or 8 per cent cumulative, probably the latter. In addition the company would distribute cash and notes to an aggregate value of at least $40 a share. Those favoring this plan point out that an 8 per cent dividend instead of the present 6 would mean only an increase of $1,000,000 annually in dividend charges.

TEN PAYMENT PLAN
To Increase Your Income

Intrinsic values are not reflected in existing prices, which, in our opinion, may not be witnessed again for a long time, if ever.

This fact is recognized by the cautious and thrifty hunter of market bargains who, through the easy terms of The Ten Payment Plan can buy a year's supply of stocks now, getting anywhere from 8% to 15% on the investment.

Orders for any active security accepted upon an initial deposit of 20%, the balance to be paid in nine equal monthly payments.

Write for booklet describing the advantages of the plan which will be sent on request together with copy of our weekly market analysis.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK SHOW TO OPEN SATURDAY

Blooded Animals from the U. S. and Canada Will Compete.

Exhibits of blooded cattle and other high grade stock have started arriving for the International Live Stock exposition and horse fair which opens at the Union stockyards next Saturday and continues through Dec. 8. Inside of a few days all of the 472 exhibits will be on the ground, representing 5,000 head of cattle, sheep, swine, and horses.

Something will be doing every moment during the exposition, according to Manager B. H. Heide. Delegations are coming from all parts of Canada and the United States. Gov. Stuart of Virginia will head the visitors from his state. Like Gov. Lowden of Illinois, who is keenly interested in the international exposition, Gov. Stuart owns a large farm and takes pride in his live stock.

Evidence of the interest other governments are taking in the show was shown yesterday when a challenge cup was offered by the British remount committee in Canada and America. This trophy will be won by the champion heavyweight hunter at the exposition.

College Farm Exhibits.

Twelve colleges and universities will be represented and will give the public the benefit of their years of experiment in scientific feeding. Some grand championships have been won in the past by exhibits sent by these institutions.

Teams of student judges will be present from Purdue, Nebraska, Iowa State college, Kansas State, Minnesota, Ontario Agricultural College of Guelph, North Dakota Agricultural college, Texas A. and M., State College of Brookings, South Dakota, Missouri, Pennsylvania State, and Ohio State.

For the first time in history women will be represented on these student teams. One will be Miss Vesta Steer of South Dakota, the other a daughter of Dean C. F. Curtis of Iowa State college. This is merely one more indication of the part women are to take in this nation's affairs in the future.

Lessons in Conservation.

A demonstration of the proper way to use cheaper cuts of beef and mutton, preparing it into as delicious dishes as the high price meats, will be made by Catharine MacKay, the dean of domestic science at Iowa State college. She and her assistants will also show how to save wheat by the use of corn, alfalfa, and other materials which can be used to more advantage in this country than abroad.

FIND DEPENDENT CHILDREN BETTER CARED FOR EAST

Ralph L. Peck of the Cook county civil service commission announced yesterday that Chicago is far behind Boston and New York in their methods of caring for delinquent and dependent children. Mr. Peck, with Judge Victor P. Arnold of the Juvenile court, returned yesterday from a tour of the east.

"Chicago seems to be alone in its practice of putting dependent children behind the bars," said Mr. Peck. "Boston has homes for the care of dependent and delinquent children, privately endowed, to be sure, but under municipal supervision. Adoption of dependent children is more frequent there than here."

Crowded conditions at the Lincoln Home for the Feeble Minded caused Judge Uhlir to address a plea to Gov. Lowden yesterday asking that more buildings be built or a new home be established in or near Chicago.

Only One 'Frat' Member on Northwestern Honor List

Books have been awarded to the twelve highest students in the freshman class of last year at Northwestern university, and of the six men winners none is a fraternity man; and only one of the six girls belongs to a sorority.

FORGERY STARTS "BACK TO CHINA" MOVEMENT HERE

When Hoey Tip appeared as witness for a wily fellow Chinese a few days ago, and incidentally defeated a case the government had prepared, Tip tipped them off to himself and spilled his own beans. So Tip is going to be deported and Ng Ah Chung also may be deported, and the federal officials think they have found out a new crooked game.

Hoey Tip, who has dealt in chop suep and viands at Ann Arbor, flashed what seemed a perfectly good "discharge" signed apparently by Frederick G. Paddock, an eastern United States commissioner. Howard D. Ebey, immigration investigator, gave the document a slantwise look.

He seemed pleased with it, and he was. He noticed that the watermark in the paper was not of governmental brand. Further investigation, he alleged yesterday, before Lewis Mason, United States commissioner, showed that the paper was a remarkably clever forgery. As a result, he has started a "back to China" movement and Tip, like Abou Ben Adhem, will find his name leading all the rest.

It is claimed that Ng Ah Chung's document is a twin brother of Tip's and Chinese agents suspect there are many more.

M. E. CHURCHES BEGIN A DRIVE FOR $600,000

A campaign to raise $600,000 was launched yesterday by the Methodist Episcopal churches of Chicago at a meeting of the ministers in the Union League club.

Bishop Thomas Nicholson launched the big drive and in his speech asked for coöperation.

He asked for $250,000 to be used as a fund for retired ministers, $250,000 for the Methodist hospital in Peoria, Ill., and $100,000 for the Wesley foundation, a social center at the University of Illinois.

The government has asked for the use of the hospital, Bishop Nicholson said.

Janitor's Guests Cause Police Burglar Hunt

"Three suspicious looking men carrying black bags have just entered our apartment building. I am sure they are burglars!" excitedly exclaimed Mrs. E. M. Sundell of 25 North Grove avenue, Oak Park, over the telephone to the Oak Park police yesterday afternoon.

A wagonload of Oak Park's "best" was sent to the scene, and the apartment building was searched.

They found the men were guests of the janitor of the building.

AEOLIAN-VOCALION

The Wonderful New Phonograph of Perfect Tone

At Mandel Brothers

Close by the foreign shops on the ninth floor are the beautiful, splendidly equipped Vocalion Salons. Please consider this a personal invitation not only to inspect the new instruments on exhibition there, but also to play the Aeolian-Vocalion.

At Vocalion Hall
On Michigan Boulevard, near Adams Street

At Julius Bauer & Co.
305 South Wabash Ave.

At Rusnak Bros.
Three Stores

A LARGE proportion of Aeolian-Vocalion sales are made to people who hitherto have entertained a strong prejudice against the talking-machine, because of that instrument's universally recognized tonal deficiencies.

Such persons have invariably come to Vocalion Hall to reassure themselves that all tone reproducing instruments are alike in result—that the much vaunted phonographs are little different.

And what agreeable surprises they have met with!

The process of converting the doubters continues day after day with little variation in its successful conclusion.

The skeptic seated in a pleasant music room looks on as the record is placed in the Vocalion. Expectantly he awaits the thin, reedy, talking machine tone—and is therefore all the more astonished to hear the wonderful voice which swells through the room as the record begins—a voice that is human, that is full and clear and vibrant with emotion.

Softly the high notes waft forth, bell-like in their sweetness and purity. Lovingly the deep, harmonious tones of the accompaniment entwine the voice, each instrument sounding clearly; the basses infinitely rich, with all their subtle, sympathetic overtones adding their distinguishing tint of wonderful music color—every treble tone true in pitch, true in every delicate shade of expression.

There is nothing phonographic in this exquisite music. Here is no stridency—here are no half-sounded, half-distorted shadows of tone.

It is a real voice, and it is real instrumental tone, unchanged, undimmed, just reflected through intervening time by this great new musical instrument.

None but unreasoning prejudice can withstand the weight of such conclusive demonstration. No music lover but must respond to the music-richness that the Vocalion reveals in every record.

THE WONDERFUL NEW PRIVILEGE

But it is not tone alone that has won for the Aeolian-Vocalion its present position of supremacy.

The wonderful new privilege of tone control makes the Vocalion more than a tone-reproducing instrument—in reality a remarkable new medium for musical expression.

By means of the Graduola, the unique patented device exclusive with the Vocalion, you may shade each note, graduate each tone—literally play each record as you like, as you feel.

The master artist's skill and sweet tone become the voice of your heart and at last you may enjoy the transcendent pleasure of making music, instead of being a listener merely.

Use the Graduola if you wish. It will bring you a new knowledge of, a new joy and belief in music. And when you prefer, the Vocalion plays itself as any other phonograph—but with its vastly more satisfying tone—its rich, full, natural tone.

AN INVITATION Come in and hear and play this newest and greatest phonograph. Do not hesitate because you are not immediately interested in buying. We are glad to demonstrate the Vocalion irrespective of any question of purchase.

A first payment as low as $8 secures delivery of Vocalion, style G—together with a fine collection of records.

A HARD NUT CRACKED—Abandoning the old system of trenches, the Germans have made their forward positions without any definite line and built blockhouses with granite and concrete, so arranged in depth that they defend each other by enfilade line fire, and so strong that nothing but a straight shot from a heavy shell will damage them. These little forts are manned by machine gunners trained for outpost work. The forts, however, have failed to stop the advance of our allies, who are now using great howitzers to batter down these underground strongholds, as is shown in the picture.

A COMPLETE FRENCH AVIATION CAMP SEEN FROM AN AEROPLANE—French battle planes are lined up in the upper right corner for immediate service against enemy fliers. The inclosure reveals a number of ambulances. To the left center are craters for inflating observation balloons, and sheds are seen in which balloons and planes are housed. On the field are buildings with complete photographic equipment so that when reconnaissance pictures are taken they may be developed hurriedly and sent to the commanders for inspection.

What has he said to her?

Does your glowing face cause an exclamation of pleasure?

Brilliant lights revealing every grace and every flaw; eyes fixed upon you ready to admire—can you face them unembarrassed?

Don't spoil your evening wondering about your complexion. Descend the stairs to meet your friends radiant and blooming—thrilled by the knowledge that you are looking your best.

You can have this confidence

Any young girl has a right to a soft glowing skin. Youth should not endure the thought of wrinkles, of colorless faces, of blemishes of any sort. Constant care of the skin in youth insures a clear, fresh complexion later.

You can make your skin what you will. Nature does her part. You can do the rest. Every day the old skin dies and new skin forms in its place. What this new skin is depends on the care you give it.

Skin specialists say that the best way to build up a clear, beautiful complexion, to keep the skin in a healthy, active condition, is by proper cleansing and stimulating treatments with a soap carefully prepared to suit the nature of the skin.

Woodbury's Facial Soap was prepared by a skin specialist after 30 years of experience with the skin and its needs.

Let this treatment give you the charm of a flawless skin.

Begin tonight to get the benefits of this skin specialist's soap for your skin. Use this Woodbury treatment every night and watch your skin lose every flaw; watch it take on a smooth texture, a soft glowing color.

Lather your washcloth well with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water. Apply it to your face and distribute the lather thoroughly. With the tips of your fingers work this cleansing antiseptic lather into your skin, always using an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, finish by rubbing your face for a few minutes with a piece of ice. Always be careful to dry your skin well.

A 25 cent cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap is sufficient for a month of this treatment. Get a cake today. It is for sale at druggists and toilet counters everywhere in the United States and Canada. Watch your skin gradually improve so you can face the most glaring light, the most critical eyes—confident of its smoothness and freshness.

4c brings you a week's treatment

WHICH was the true heir?

They had been changed in the cradle—only one woman knew the truth—and she kept her secret. But a clew that no one dreamed of was at hand and one day ——

But this is too good a detective story to tell here.

Did you know that Mark Twain wrote this—one of the best detective stories in the world? One with a mystery and a magnificent climax—but also with the laughter and the tears that only Mark Twain could call forth.

MARK TWAIN

Mark Twain has been translated into more foreign languages than any other American writer.

is the greatest American who ever put pen to paper. The San Francisco Bulletin said, only a few days ago, "Without his influence, it is not too much to say, American humor would be far different from what it is. Millions have read his books. Perhaps America itself would be different if it were not for his influence. Looking backward upon his period he seems an inevitable phenomenon. American history would not be complete without him. There HAD to be a Mark Twain, just as there had to be an Abraham Lincoln."

And an American home without his work is as empty as an American history would be without Lincoln. And now the price of his books must be raised. We don't like to do it. We'd like forever to keep on putting these marvelous volumes of joy and tears into American homes at the low price Mark Twain liked. But we have no control over the price of the paper and cloth that go into these books. Already the prices of these have gone to nearly double what they used to be—and yet the price of the books has remained low. But we cannot keep it down any longer and in a few days Mark Twain's works must be sold at a higher price.

Balmy Air Is Moist Air

Have balmy, refreshing, healthful air in your home or office by using the Buddington Humidifier. Dry, harsh, heated air is injurious and irritating—very often the direct cause of colds, sore throat and catarrh and a constant tax on vitality.

With proper humidity, air feels warmer at 68 degrees than dry air at 75 degrees. Safeguard your health and conserve fuel as well. The

BUDDINGTON HUMIDIFIER

"THE WICK DOES THE TRICK"

by forced evaporation, restores the natural moisture which artificial heat dries out of the air—evaporates gallons to other devices' pints, yet automatically evaporates only enough to supply needed moisture. Used in homes of cultured people throughout the country. Adopted by many corporations, including five Life Insurance Companies, for office use, after efficiency tests.

Ask your dealer about the Buddington. If he can't supply you, write direct for free trial offer. We also manufacture the Buddington Automatic Humidifier for hot air furnaces.

KATHLEEN CLIFFORD, many years on the stage and quite famous for her boy impersonations, is now keeping the public guessing as to "Who Is Number One?" a Paramount serial. She made her debut with Balboa some months ago.

CORINNE GRIFFITH is one of Vitagraph's latest acquisitions, and that company, after viewing her in several pictures, feels that it has "done itself noble" in securing her. Miss Griffith until joining this corporation had been taking a long rest from the screen.

IRENE CASTLE, better known as Mrs. Vernon Castle, having proved to the world that no one could dance as she does, is endeavoring to prove to movie fans that few can act better either. She brings to the screen grace, charm and considerable ability.

GERALDINE FARRAR, now with Lasky, is the subject for much discussion. Some like her work in films. Others decidedly do not, declaring that they always feel like calling "Sing, Gerry, sing!" whenever she appears. At any rate, nobody is neutral regarding her.

Why your skin needs two creams

Every normal skin needs a cleansing and massage cream—and also a protective, skin-softening cream. Read why one cream cannot do both.

For cleansing the skin and for the nightly massage, you need an oil cream, a smooth easily spread emollient. Pond's Cold Cream is just the cream for this purpose. It has an oil base and was prepared especially to meet the need for a pure, dependable oil cream.

When you need Vanishing Cream

For the protective cream your skin needs to keep it soft, white and clear, and to keep it free from chaps, use Pond's Vanishing Cream. It is greaseless and has for its chief ingredient a product which is recognized by dermatologists as being of the greatest value in keeping the skin soft, smooth and free from chapping all winter.

Apply it just before you go out. The moment you use it, the skin absorbs it. It will never reappear on the face—cannot make the skin look oily.

Neither Pond's Vanishing Cream nor Pond's Cold Cream will promote the growth of hair on the face.

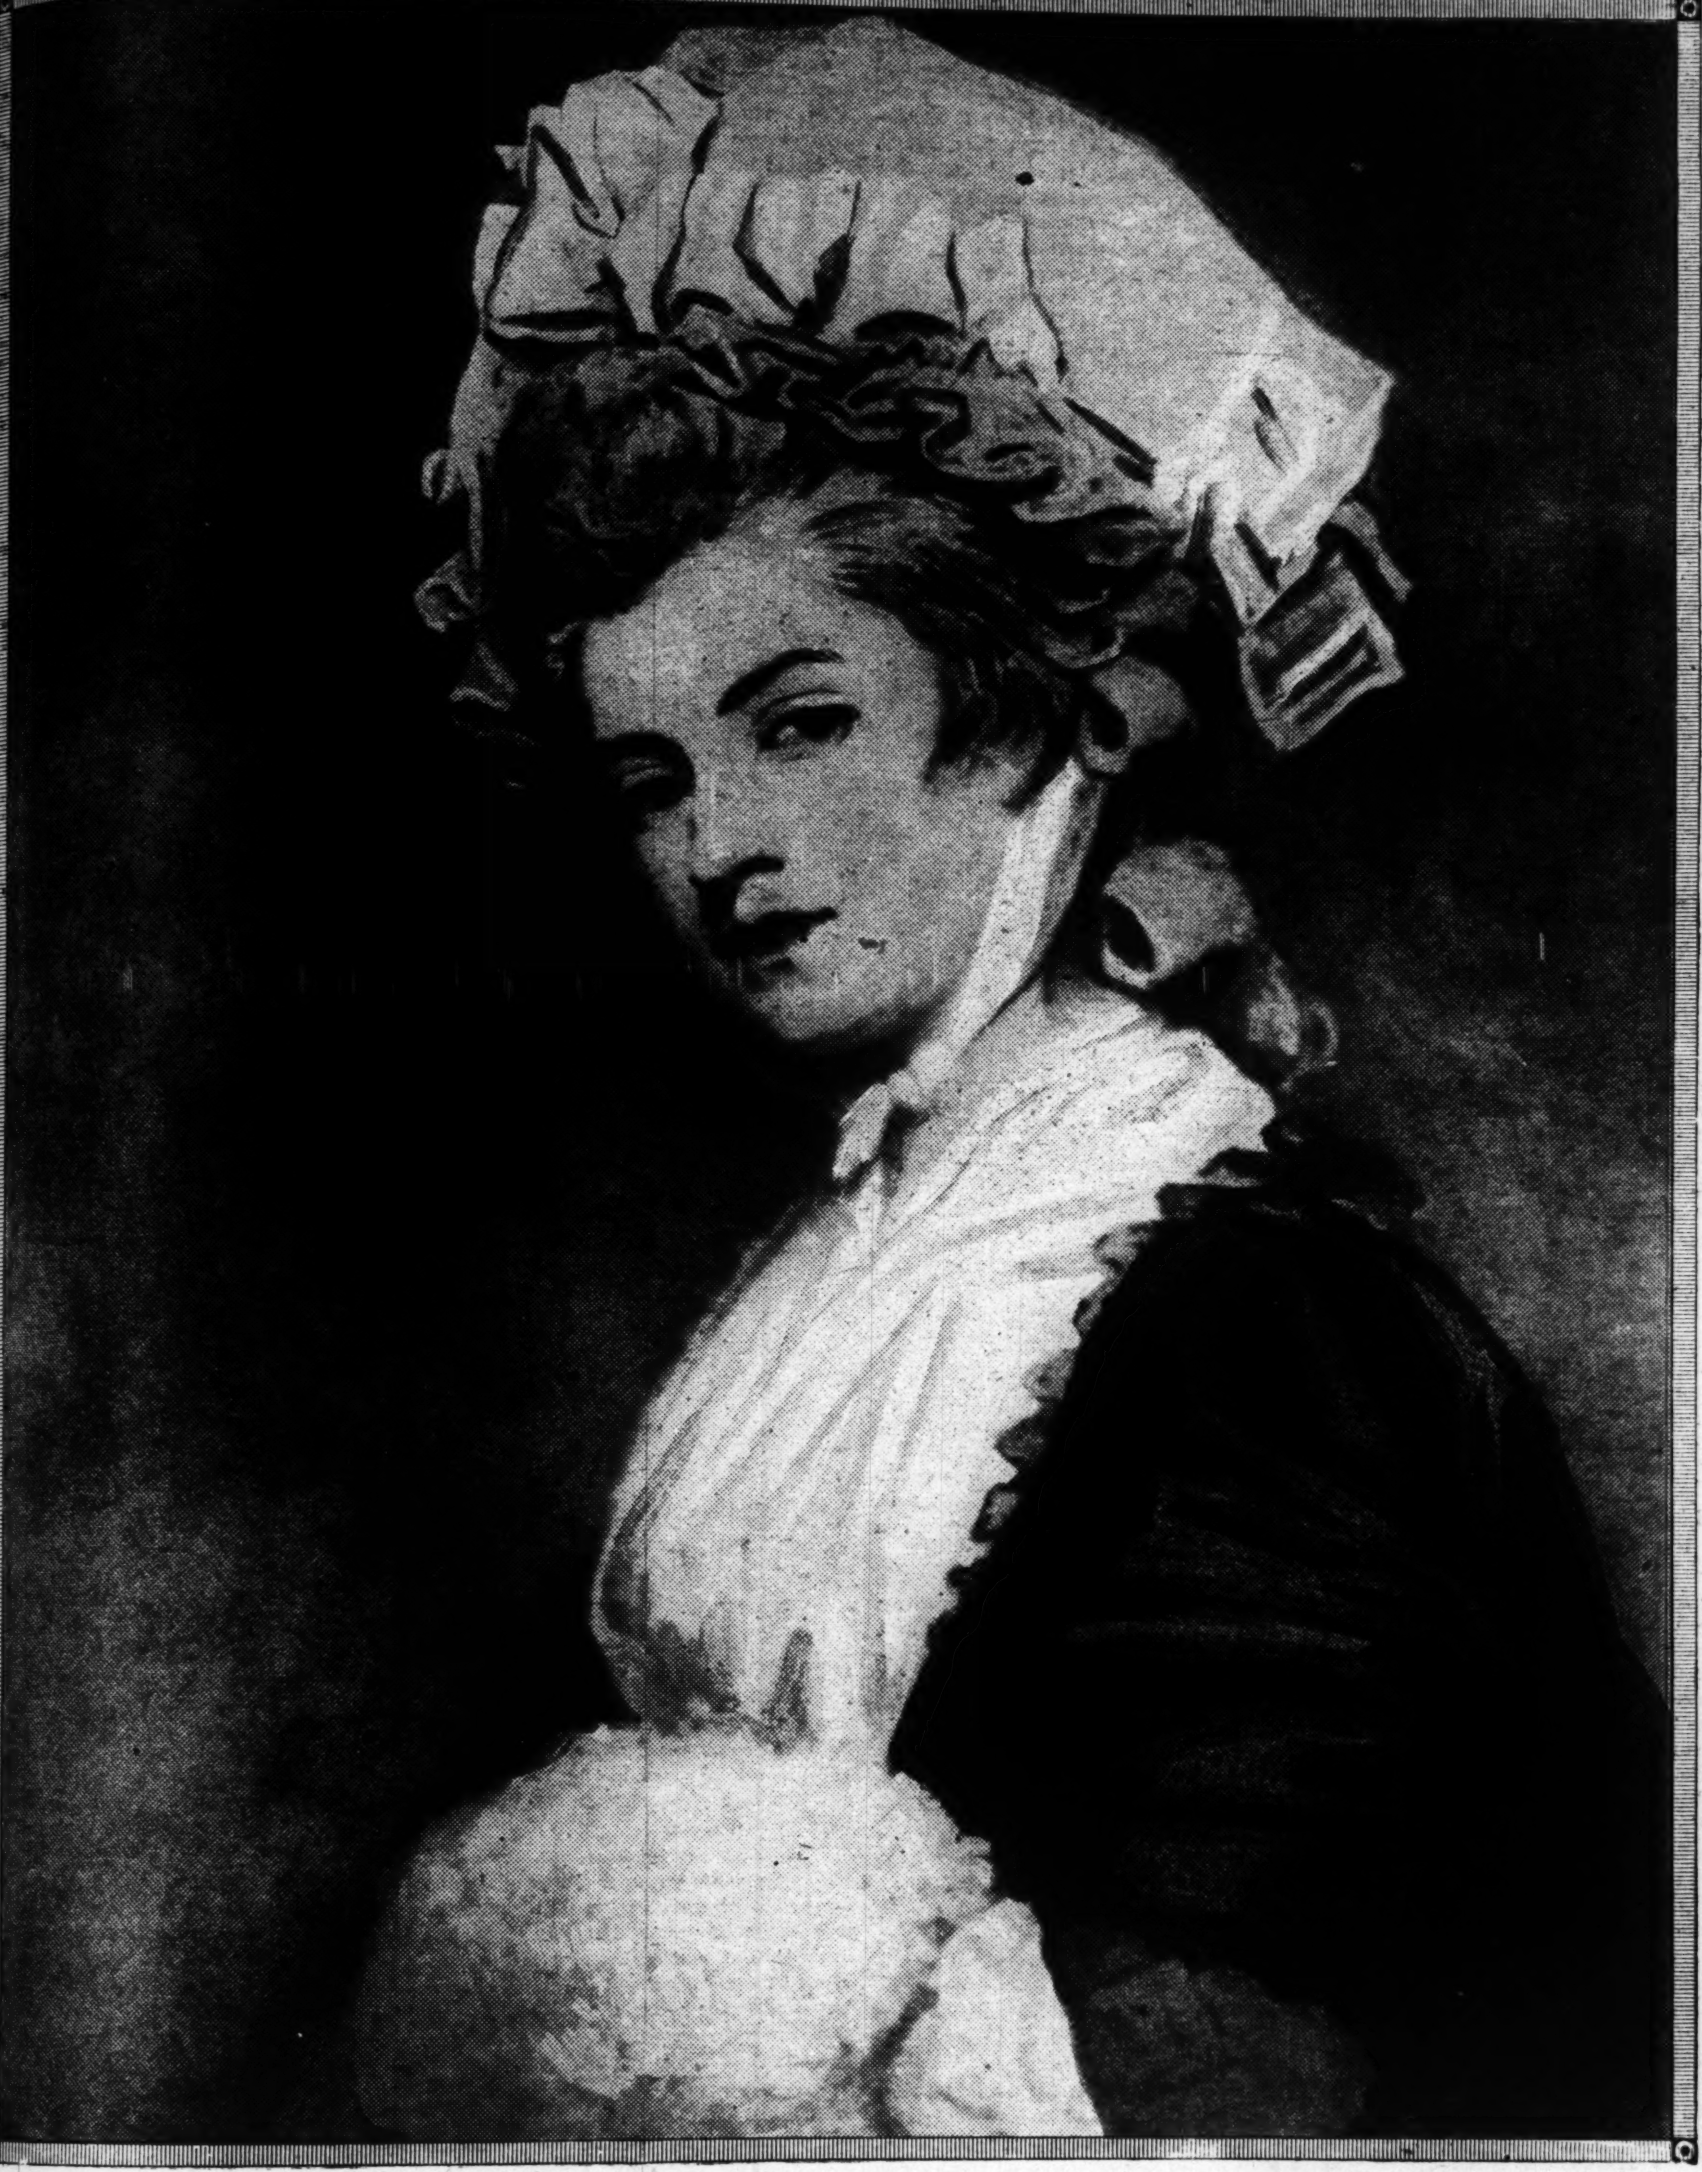
MRS. ROBINSON painted by Romney



By LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

Mrs. Robinson, by Romney (George). (1734-1802). Wallace Collection, London.

IN the Wallace collection in London there are three paintings of the celebrated Mrs. Robinson, or "Perdita," as she is more commonly called. One of these portraits is by Reynolds, another by Gainsborough, and the third one, this one of Romney's, is said to resemble most closely the beautiful and unfortunate original.

Mrs. Robinson was scarcely 21 when she made her first appearance on the London stage as "Perdita." Immediately she captivated the young Prince of Wales, afterwards King George 4th, and, for a brief two years, left the stage and became the reigning beauty of fashionable London society.

Every day she appeared in a different costume, each one more dazzling to the public gaze than the one which she had previously worn. Each day hats swept the ground as she passed in her carriage painted light blue, with its design of a basket of flowers so artfully arranged that it might easily be mistaken for a coronet. And each day the ardour and passion of the prince was fanned into new fire by the witching eyes and seductive smiles of the fair "Perdita."

But her supremacy over the prince was fleeting. His light fancy turned to other loves and Mrs. Robinson, facing straitened circumstances, struggled to support herself by writing short poems and shorter stories of adventure and love. These, of mediocre merit, proved utterly insufficient for her maintenance and she was finally saved from actual want by the generosity of the statesman, Charles Francis Fox, from whom she obtained a small annuity. This lasted until her death, which brought to an end a checkered and pathetic career.

This portrait of her was painted when she was in the heyday of her happiness. She wears a grayish white lace bonnet tied under her chin, a black mantilla, and carries a muff or soft grayish white fur. Her hair is prowdered after the fashion of the day and her complexion is a lovely pink and white.

Romney, always a poet and a dreamer, with marvelous visions of beauty nestling deep in his soul, has seized on the evanescent spirit of her enchanting charm. Of this picture the first word said might be grace and then, traversing the gamut of praise for its delicacy, its expressiveness, its feminine power, grace might also be the last word said, Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

MANY A SLIP

Concerning a Successful Young Literary Cobbler Who Would Not Stick to His Last.

IT was a sad eyed author who originated the term, "round-trip script," designating the story which is sent to the editor and which the editor sends back to him. Poor fish, his was a hard "break," for he seems to have had a flying start toward success in his chosen endeavors, either a sense of humor or no sense of shame.

The comedy usually dies out of the heart of one who has tried, who has created, who has fountained forth the essence of his soul, only to have a thin blooded professional reader (usually a disappointed and acidulated failure as a writer himself) or an editor unmindful of all finer appeals pin a slip to the "copy" and ship it back to the torn bosom whence it came. It is a sickening feeling—at least, I am told it is.

System, destroyer of individuality, natural enemy to the arts, has possessed publishers, too, in its broad and obliterating concourse. Now the magazines have sets of rejection slips prepared to fill any of the several contingencies, each a specific alibi for the return trip of a hopeful manuscript. If the hack reader notes that the subject matter is passable but the style is stilted, a blue slip is pinned thereto, for on the blue one is printed a concise statement of regrets caused by blowholes in the technique; if the narrative is bright, brisk, and breezy, but the plot is trite or underweight, a slip of becoming pink, so explaining, is thereunto attached, and therewith, forthwith, mailed to return address.

And so on, ad desperandum, there are all the colors of the spectrum and of Joseph's jacket, and for each is tabulated an author's classified error to correspond, so that a critic needs but note "Pink" instead of "Punk" to express his exact findings, or "Blue" or "Yellow" or "White" to tell in a monosyllable the woe which the author will recount in voluble chapters, capacious steins, and sonorous blasphemies.

Almost every one who takes a nickel's worth of blank paper and tries by making it commercially useless through writing words thereon to raise its value to $500 is under the thumb of the slip-pinners, who work like the treasury department's secret service men, scrutinizing the literary currency for counterfeits. No Abe Potash, tremblingly shaking a newly slit incoming envelope in hope of finding an "inclosure," ever palpitated with more vociferous ague and tense suspense than the striving writer fearful to open the envelope with the magazine's imprint lest there be an inclosure. A large and bulky envelope is almost certain to be a death warrant, though there is always the springing hope that the manuscript has been accepted and is sent home on leave for minor revisions. A small, square envelope is the talisman, for "material" cannot be enfolded in its dimensions. Strange, too, there are no printed forms for eagerly grabbing a story, whereas there are so many different ones for the turndowns.

There are a few men who write for the prints at large, however, who may successfully gamble on their output, who get back blue and pink checks instead of canned regrets. One such was Bradwell Trymball Bickerdike.

He was about three of the six best sellers all the time. His novels, published first as magazine serials, went over the counters millions fold. He had a way of making fat women forget their girth, slaveys forget their birth, and housewives forget to wash the dishes with the blue eyed romances that he wrote of golden haired maidens and square shouldered only sons of wealth.

Bickerdike wrote Cinderella for a living; a handsome one. Every author should have a story and should stick to it. If he sells it once he should cease experimenting and resell it and resell it. Bickerdike, taking no chances, was peddling Cinderella with many changes of costume, time, and place. And, since almost every girl wants—yea, awaits—a fairy prince and a coach and four (cylinders) and a fairy godmother and a ball gown that will bewilder each beholder, he had the world's biggest ready made audience seated and with palms itching to applaud before he began.

It had not always been cushions for a soft fall in the life of Bickerdike. He had known years when he limped, bruised from the kicks of adversity with its best foot forward. He had been a newspaper man for many terrestrial revolutions before he had come to realize that Cinderella had never been effectively told before in the 89,653 versions of it extant in any circulating library.

In those low days of coarse reporting, when he had had no such rich and prolific inspiration as Cinderella to fructify his talents—nothing beyond the daily tragedies, comedies, romances, epitaphs, epics, pastorals, ante-mortems, confessions, mysteries, jerimiads, sermons, parables, lullabies, and hysterics of a city of millions—he had clumped along the limited lane of this rocky realm, unnoticed and unknown. Not even the one romance of his own had suggested to him the selling possibilities of love's sweet, giggling, blushing story. Least of all had it summoned him into the mail order Cinderella business, though, as you shall read, it indirectly tumbled him into it, in a manner of speaking.

His own romance had been nothing like the one the fairy prince put over on Cindy. For one thing, he didn't put it over. And, far from his fitting a dainty slipper on the divine one's piggy, she had slipped a mitten on his flipper, also in a manner of speaking.

He had met, wooed, and almost married a slender little college girl whom he first encountered in the "local" room, where she was feeling her worried, panic-stricken way through a tyro's period of terror, the first few days of reporting. The moment Bick saw Ethel Rider he knew he loved her. He didn't know whether she had any brains or a heart or normal vibrations or a past or a beau or an ounce of discrimination or the inclination. But he knew she had him. So, somewhat abruptly, he almost married her. That is, he would have married her had she said "Yes." But she said "No."

A girl may be inexperienced as a reporter or as any other kind of an artisan, but no girl is an inexperienced girl; I mean to say every girl has had experience at being a girl. And that experience has taught her, if she is amenable to the most elementary and rudimentary instruction in the curriculum of a girl's primary course, these axioms:

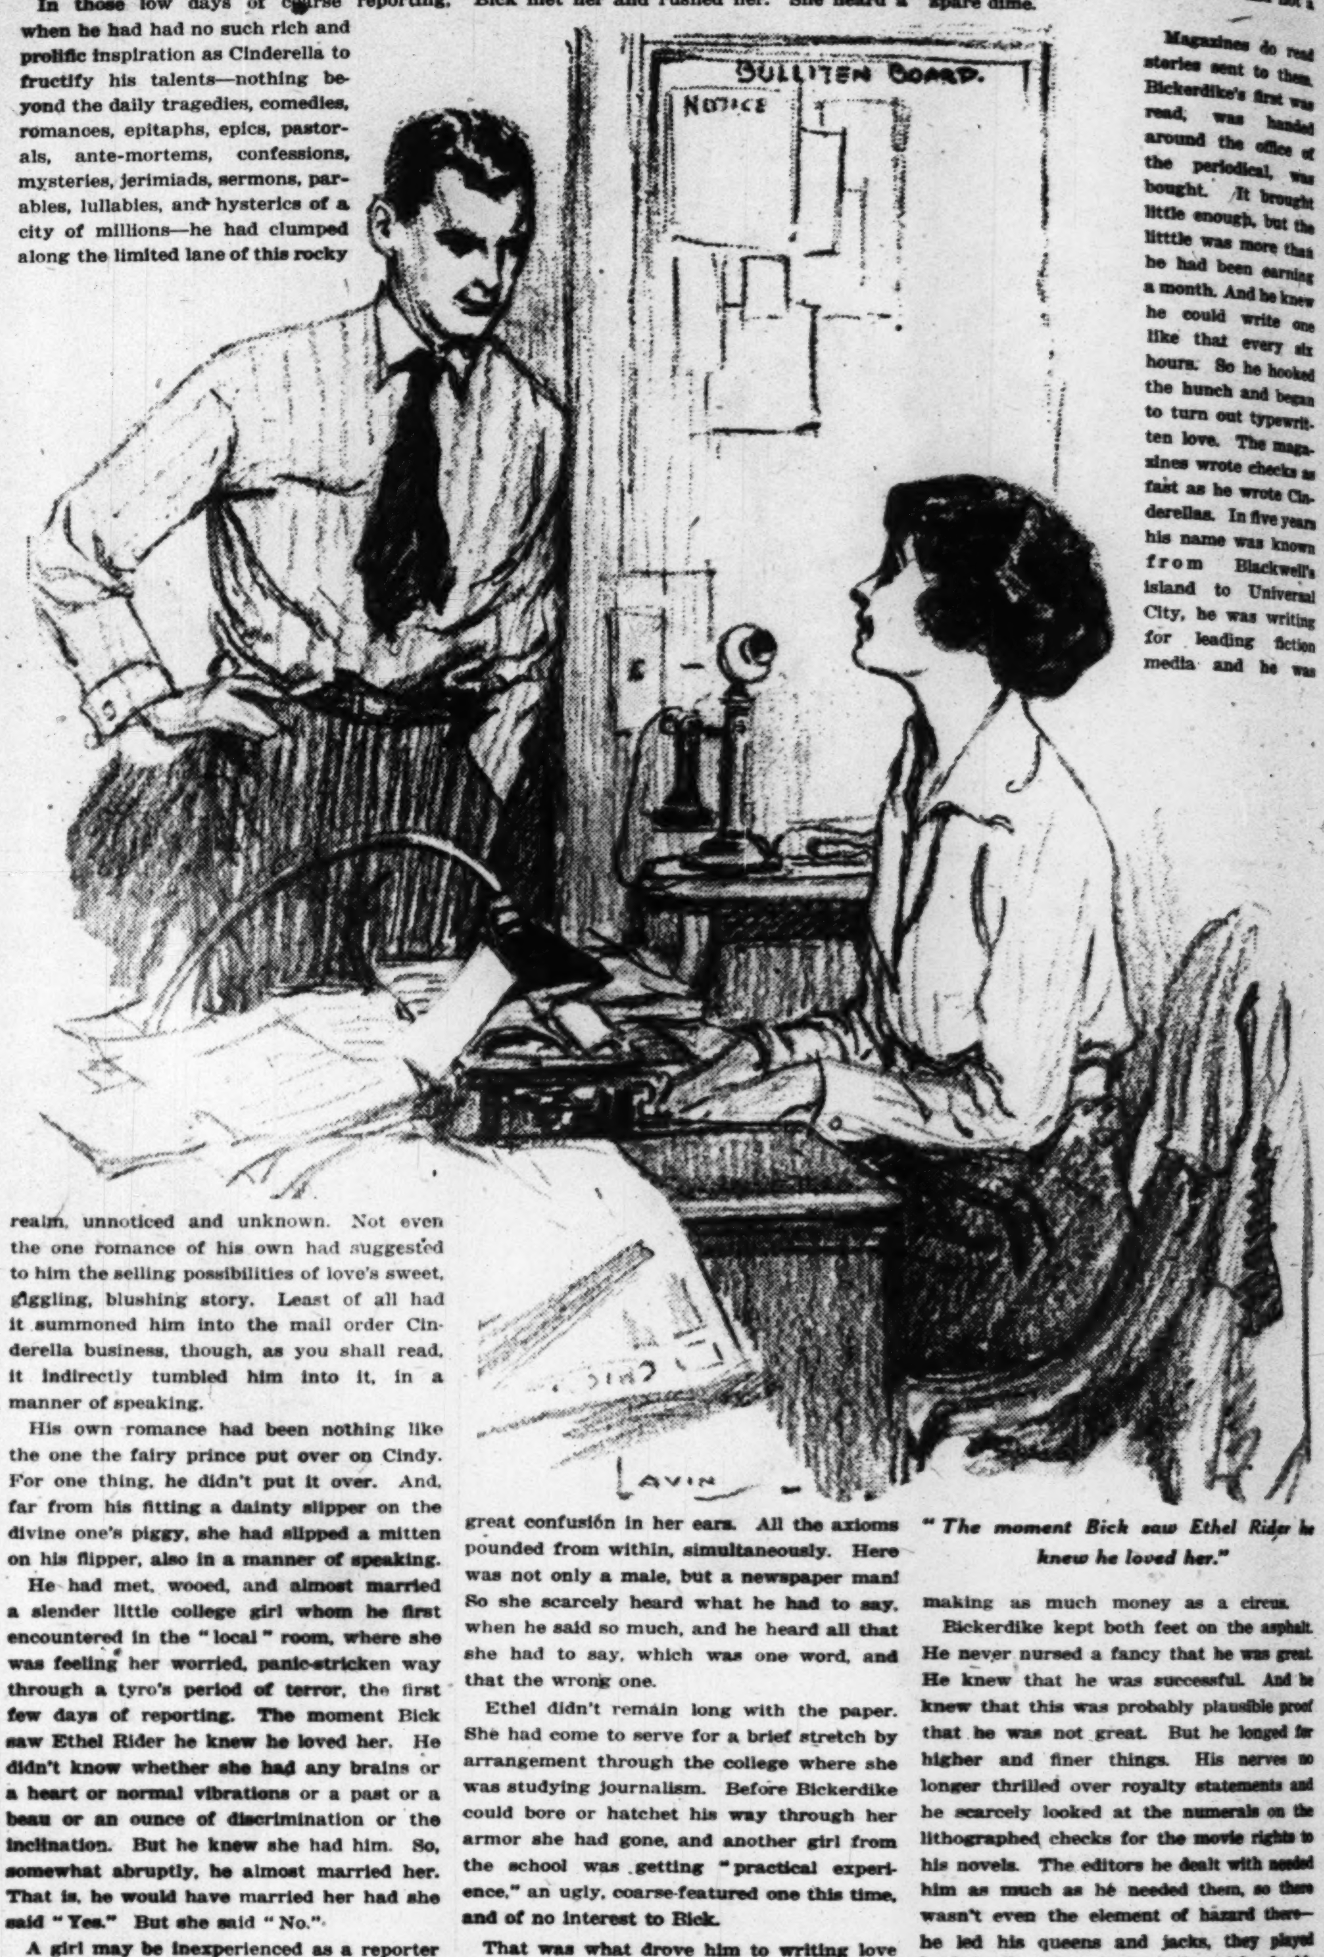
"Suspect every man you meet, especially those who want to help you."

"Don't believe it. Very little that you hear is true, and nothing that you hear from a man is true."

"She who lunches with a male is lost."

"Be on your guard. Man is a villain."

"Don't listen to a man's soft nothings unless mother is eavesdropping in the back parlor."



"The moment Bick saw Ethel Rider he knew he loved her."

These are the great and vital verities taught to girls who are "brought up" according to Grundy & Hoyle. When they get wisdom and come to know what poppyrot the sage warnings of their prudish great-aunts often are, then they are no longer girls—they are women, and may then be trusted with discretion. Until then they are armed only with impenetrable caution. Perhaps this is well.

Ethel was only a girl—about 17—when Bick met her and rushed her. She heard a great confusion in her ears. All the axioms pounded from within, simultaneously. Here was not only a male, but a newspaper man! So she scarcely heard what he had to say, when he said so much, and he heard all that she had to say, which was one word, and that the wrong one.

Ethel didn't remain long with the paper. She had come to serve for a brief stretch by arrangement through the college where she was studying journalism. Before Bickerdike could bore or hatchet his way through her armor she had gone, and another girl from the school was getting "practical experience," an ugly, coarse-featured one this time, and of no interest to Bick.

That was what drove him to writing love stories. O, no; it wasn't that his great grief moved him to spontaneous outburst. Stories aren't written that way. A writer laboring under intense emotion no more rushes to record it than does a plumber suffering the same stress rush to solder a leak in a bathtub. Stories are planned and painstakingly done by translators of other folks' feelings. The most adventurous life and the most generating temperament could not supply the possessor of them with enough writing matter to pay for a motorcycle. A man who writes must not write about himself, except in rare cases; his nucleus stock is in what he sees, knows, remembers, calculates, imagines of others' acts and thoughts and visitations.

The fact in the affair was that the boys in the office had all been jerry to his crush on Ethel, and they rode and bickered Bickerdike so vigorously that it led to hard feelings, which led to his resignation. He found jobs hard to get—every man who hasn't one finds that so. And, while waiting for an answer to a letter he had written to a city editor in a faraway town, he tried his hand at making an honest dollar with fiction for a cheap magazine, because he had spare time and not a spare dime.

Magazines do read stories sent to them. Bickerdike's first was read, was handed around the office of the periodical, was bought. It brought little enough, but the litttle was more than he had been earning a month. And he knew he could write one like that every six hours. So he hooked the hunch and began to turn out typewritten love. The magazines wrote checks as fast as he wrote Cinderellas. In five years his name was known from Blackwell's island to Universal City, he was writing for leading fiction media and he was making as much money as a circus.

Bickerdike kept both feet on the asphalt. He never nursed a fancy that he was great. He knew that he was successful. And he knew that this was probably plausible proof that he was not great. But he longed for higher and finer things. His nerves no longer thrilled over royalty statements and he scarcely looked at the numerals on the lithographed checks for the movie rights to his novels. The editors he dealt with needed him as much as he needed them, so there wasn't even the element of hazard there—he led his queens and jacks, they played back bank orders, he took the tricks, for his "name" was trumps.

But he humored and slept with and coddled and wooed an obsession. He wanted to "make" the Olympian, the toniest and most undercirculated of all the monthlies. The Olympian, alone, had never made him any overtures. The book reviewer of it dismissed his bound works with contemptuous little paragraphs, whereas he spent columns on William Dean Howells. In referring to Bickerdike's writings he always flanked with quotation marks the word "popular." Every man who writes wants to be popular, but in his heart no man who writes wants to be "popular."

rejection slips of his own printed to fling back in answer to requests from editors, felt the Olympian gnawing at his marrow. It was entirely human of him. Eddie Foy wants to sing grand opera, though vaudeville showers him with coin; Charlie Chaplin wants to play Ibsen, though he gets a million a year for doing what he knows how to do; Bert Williams aches to portray Othello, and I wouldn't be shocked if he even yearned to delineate Romeo; compilers of telephone directories dream of publishing the classics; the composer of "Livery Stable Blues" has an original hymn locked in his trunk. And Bick would have given a year's income to the Home for One-eyed Orphans to see a yarn of his on one of the cold, unillustrated, deckel-edged pages of the Olympian.

With his toes so long, so silently, and so burningly scratching at the approach to the bridge of his visions, at last he made the dash across the River of Desire. Into the office of the Olympian came a Bickerdike story.

It was a story that Bick had fondled and refined and buffed and burnished in his mind through wakeful weeks, a serious and high-minded sort of story, foreign to his familiar style, miles from his faithful meal-ticket, Cinderella of the many manifestations. He had toiled and he had tugged to make that story subtle—and it bore all the subtlety of toil and tugging, creaked with oilless epigrams, clanked with the base metal of strained effort against pig-iron artificialities of personally constructed realism.

The first reader for the Olympian arched her brows at sight of the Bickerdike imprint on a manuscript envelope coming to that desk. Of course, she knew who Bickerdike was. She opened the thing curiously and read the story—"Topsy Turvy." She read, and, having read, moved on the script to Reader Number 2, having first noted in the margin the cryptic judgment "Blue." The second reader went through it and added "Pink" and sent it along. The third appended "White"; the fourth, "Yellow."

With four badges of shame attached (clerks follow instructions, that is why they are clerks), "Topsy Turvy" boomeranged back to Bickerdike. He felt for the first time that tremor which less lucky authors live so often as he opened the Olympian packet. Bickerdike's eyes almost shot from their casings as he beheld the four-time indignity. He glanced through the formally worded slips—one saying the story lacked story, another saying its construction was lame, a third saying it wanted quality, the fourth and bitterest saying "This is not the type of matter acceptable to a publication of the standards of the Olympian."

Bickerdike seized a pen and wrote:

"Editor, the Olympian,

"Sir:

"Manuscript of my story, 'Topsy Turvy,' reached me today from your editorial rooms. With it came no less than four vari-colored rejection notices. I realize and appreciate that the Olympian is a publication of lofty ideals and effete appetites, and that I am only a mushing mummer who has been identified with the over-production of literary corned beef and cabbage, rather than caviare. But this gratuitous and blunt affront was neither coming to me nor becoming to you. Though I have truly hoped to see a contribution from me in your pages, I shall abandon the hope now. I am too old to be spanked and too venal to turn the other cheek. You will forgive me if I observe that the conduct of your staff toward me in this sorry matter has been unprofessional, undignified, witless, and unnecessarily offensive.

"Sincerely,

"BICKERDIKE."

Four days later Bick got his reply:

"My dear Mr. Bickerdike:

"I was indeed mortified to learn from you of the tactless behavior of the assistants in this office. The multiplicity of attachments was not directly intended. It was not a conspiracy at all, but it so chanced that each of four readers found a fault in 'Topsy Turvy,' no two the same, and noted in the office code their findings; an amanuensis did the rest, and I am mighty sorry that your sensibilities were bruised.

"Please reconsider your decision. The Olympian will welcome from you any contribution which falls within the policies and the fixed lines of its standards.

"Very truly yours,

Bickerdike's grew red with a million sparks. What was that signature? Wh-wh-what!

"Ethel Rider, Editor," he read.

He wilted into his chair as he held the letter in his unsteady right hand. Ethel Rider! Of course. It was logical enough. She had finished her studies and had entered magazine work, and now she was the editor of the superior periodical which had been his ultimate beacon light.

For hours he sat, this prosperous, unsatisfied man of letters, with the one letter that had tumbled a tumult into his heart. Into the night he sat and wondered and pondered and hesitated and smiled with a feeble effort to deceive himself. Then he reached for a sheet and wrote:

"My dear Ethel of Old:

"For eight suffering, hungry years I never saw you, heard from you, or had word of you. You had been locked down in the one-gem jewel-case of my memories and my dreams. After all this it would have been more consistent, perhaps, had I met you anywhere else except at the end of a business letter—bending over me in a Red Cross uniform as I came to in a field hospital, or even popping suddenly out from the thick throng on a busy highway.

"I have never let the wound heal. I have never wanted it to heal. It has been my most treasured belonging, that wound. No other woman has ever seen it. No man has ever heard me speak of it. It was my love, my secret 'affair,' and I was true to it, for I would rather have the remembrance of how you looked and how I throbbed when I looked at you than physical possession of any other woman or all other women.

"And now, to mock me in a miser's gloating over his pitiful little hidden hoard, you rob me of it all by destroying the mystery, the wild hope of a miracle which has sustained me. You are an editor. You are the editor of the only publication which ever hurt me—you, the only woman who ever hurt me. Your readers took from me the only other thing that life had that I wanted. Now you take away my seventeen-year-old baby love.

"Yours in worship and in great confusion,

"BICK."

There was no sleep for Bickerdike. He knew it would take not less than four times twenty-four hours before an acknowledgment of his note could reach him. How he spent those days he will never remember. But at last it came—in the envelope of the Olympian. Strange, he thought, that Ethel should communicate on such a topic in a business envelope. He tore it open and took out—

His letter! And to it pinned a blue printed slip on which he read:

"We regret that we must return the inclosed manuscript. While its subject matter is splendid, its style is unsuitable to our requirements. If you will revise it we will be glad to further consider it. We desire to accentuate the fact that we prefer simplicity and directness of speech, plain words, a minimum of rhetorical figures, and a straight course to the point of your story.

"The Editor."

Bickerdike yanked himself together. He picked up a telephone and called for a messenger boy. Ten minutes later the boy, hugging a dollar for his very own, flew with the following dispatch:

"Ethel Rider, Olympian, New York: I love you. Will you marry me? BICK."

Two hours later a rush message came to his hands:

"B. T. Bickerdike, Chicago: You bet.

"ETHEL."

ON THE LAST DAY by H.R.R. Hertzberg

Another of Life's Little Ironies, Involving the King of the Cobras.

"RASSILLAH DASS, the King of the Cobras," handled a dozen of the dreadfully venomous snakes called cobras de capello every day without a bit of fear or caution.

They are picturesque devils are cobras. When they're excited they distend the skin of their neck until it stands out like a shield bearing the likeness of a pair of eyeglasses, so that the creatures look wickedly scholastic. And picturesque, too, was Rassillah Dass, in his costume of a Hindu rajput, a warrior noble, tall, slim, distinguished, none the less so for the bronze hue of his face and hands.

He did not make his scaly subjects perform, dance, after the fashion of the fakirs. No. The interest of the performance lay in the horror of it. For Rassillah Dass not only allowed but encouraged the serpents to strike and bite him as he picked them up and worried them. They bit him half a dozen times while I stood in the side show booth.

Somehow I felt as if I knew Rassillah Dass, though I had never met a Hindu in all my life.

That's why—it was near closing time, almost midnight—I left the tent and waited in the neighboring darkness for Rassillah Dass' nonprofessional appearance.

After a little while he came. Tall, slim, aquiline featured—it was Rassillah Dass all right enough. Also it was a dear old friend of mine.

I caught up with him and grasped his arm. "Hello, old boy!" said I.

He turned his face—white now, quite free from makeup—and recognized me immediately.

For a dear old friend he wasn't overglad. Naturally. When a gentleman, a man of birth, breeding, education, and position, is discovered in the shape of a "king of the cobras," he doesn't feel proud of his elevation to royalty, doesn't enjoy the failure of his incognito.

And this man had been such a gentleman, a gentleman in every way, save only a seemingly overpowering passion for strong drink, throughout the days of our acquaintance, in our home town far away. Besides, he had been the favored one of the town's unquestioned belle. She loved him as he loved her—the matter was a very open secret. Then, suddenly, he had disappeared, leaving never a trace.

Well, this night of our accidental meeting we seated ourselves on the deserted piazza of the hotel. And because our friendship was not dead and a man must sometimes tell his troubles, even though he may be able to keep all his joys to himself, he briefly related the whys and hows leading to his performance as Rassillah Dass.

It was his great love, his very great love, for the girl at home that caused the transformation.

One day, some six months ago, he had come to the painful conclusion that he was not worthy of the girl, could not ever be unless he conquered what had conquered him in countless battles—that dominating passion of his. Being a strong man in the main, he determined on a fight to the finish. But it occurred to him that it would be best to do his battling well away from home and friends and lady love. Wherefore he simply disappeared. His ample funds permitted him to go where he pleased. He had made up his mind not to return until he was the victor in the struggle, the absolute, undoubted victor.

At first he did not prove particularly successful. His better self's antagonist showed itself the stronger again and again. Then there came to him the idea that to be engaged in an occupation which of its very nature called for sobriety, for abstemiousness, should certainly help him to win—by working on his sense of duty. It was his adoption of this idea which induced him to apply for the job left vacant through the death, due to consumption, of a Hindu sideshow "artist," styled Rassillah Dass, the King of the Cobras. Just how he learned of the job and managed to obtain it I don't remember. At any rate, he took the dead snake charmer's place.

"You know," said he, "a man can't have steady nerves and, consequently, steady nerve enough to handle snakes in a properly nonchalant manner and at the same time drink a lot. Steady nerve and lots of drink will not stay in the same dwelling house. Well, having taken the snake handling job, I had to make good at it, of course. And to make good I was bound to be a duly sober person. So I cut out the alcoholics. It wasn't the easiest thing in the world. But—well, I've been Rassillahdassing for all of four months, and I haven't touched the stuff even once in all that time. Yes, and the craving has left me entirely. For keeps, I think. No, I don't think—I'm sure I'll never let drink master me again."

"Good! Fine!" I cried. The way in which his eyes spoke convinced me not only of his sincerity but also of the justice of his new faith in himself.

"But," I resumed, "isn't this—er—profession of yours an extremely dangerous one? By gad, old man, I saw some of the nasty devils bite you! And I've always been given to understand that the bite of a cobra means death!"

The pseudo Hindu smiled.

"There is no limit to the credulity of the public. Even a comparatively intelligent individual like yourself, let us say, delights in being humbugged whenever he becomes a part of a public. Does it not stand to reason that if my cobras' bite was deadly indeed I shouldn't be perfectly well and sound now, since I've been cobra bitten ever so many times? Why, my cobras couldn't hurt a baby. Their fangs have been removed. With the exception of the Hopi Indian snake priests—and they're said to possess a sure secret antidote against the poison—not a human on earth would handle cobras, or rattlers, or moccasins, or puff adders whose fangs were in working order, unless that human wished to commit suicide in an especially agonizing style. No, sir, the job is safety itself."

During the short pause which followed, his fine gray eyes first lost the expression of good natured raillery they had held while he explained his serpentine subjects' compulsory harmlessness, then shone with a radiance that unmistakably spoke of love at its truest and tenderest, and finally asked a question.

This question I answered at once, before he put it into words. For I knew exactly what it was.

"Old fellow," said I, "she is in good health and unmarried still, and she loves you more than ever."

"Ah! How do you know?"

"Because she herself told me so."

"She herself told you so? Why? When?"

"Not long ago, barely a week. Because I asked her to become my wife and she refused me."

"That is the truth? Not a cruel joke? No, I don't mean that! But—it's the truth and not mistaken kindness on your part?"

"It is the truth—upon my word of honor," I assured him, and I did not lie.

My companion seized my hand and wrung it, too hard for my comfort.

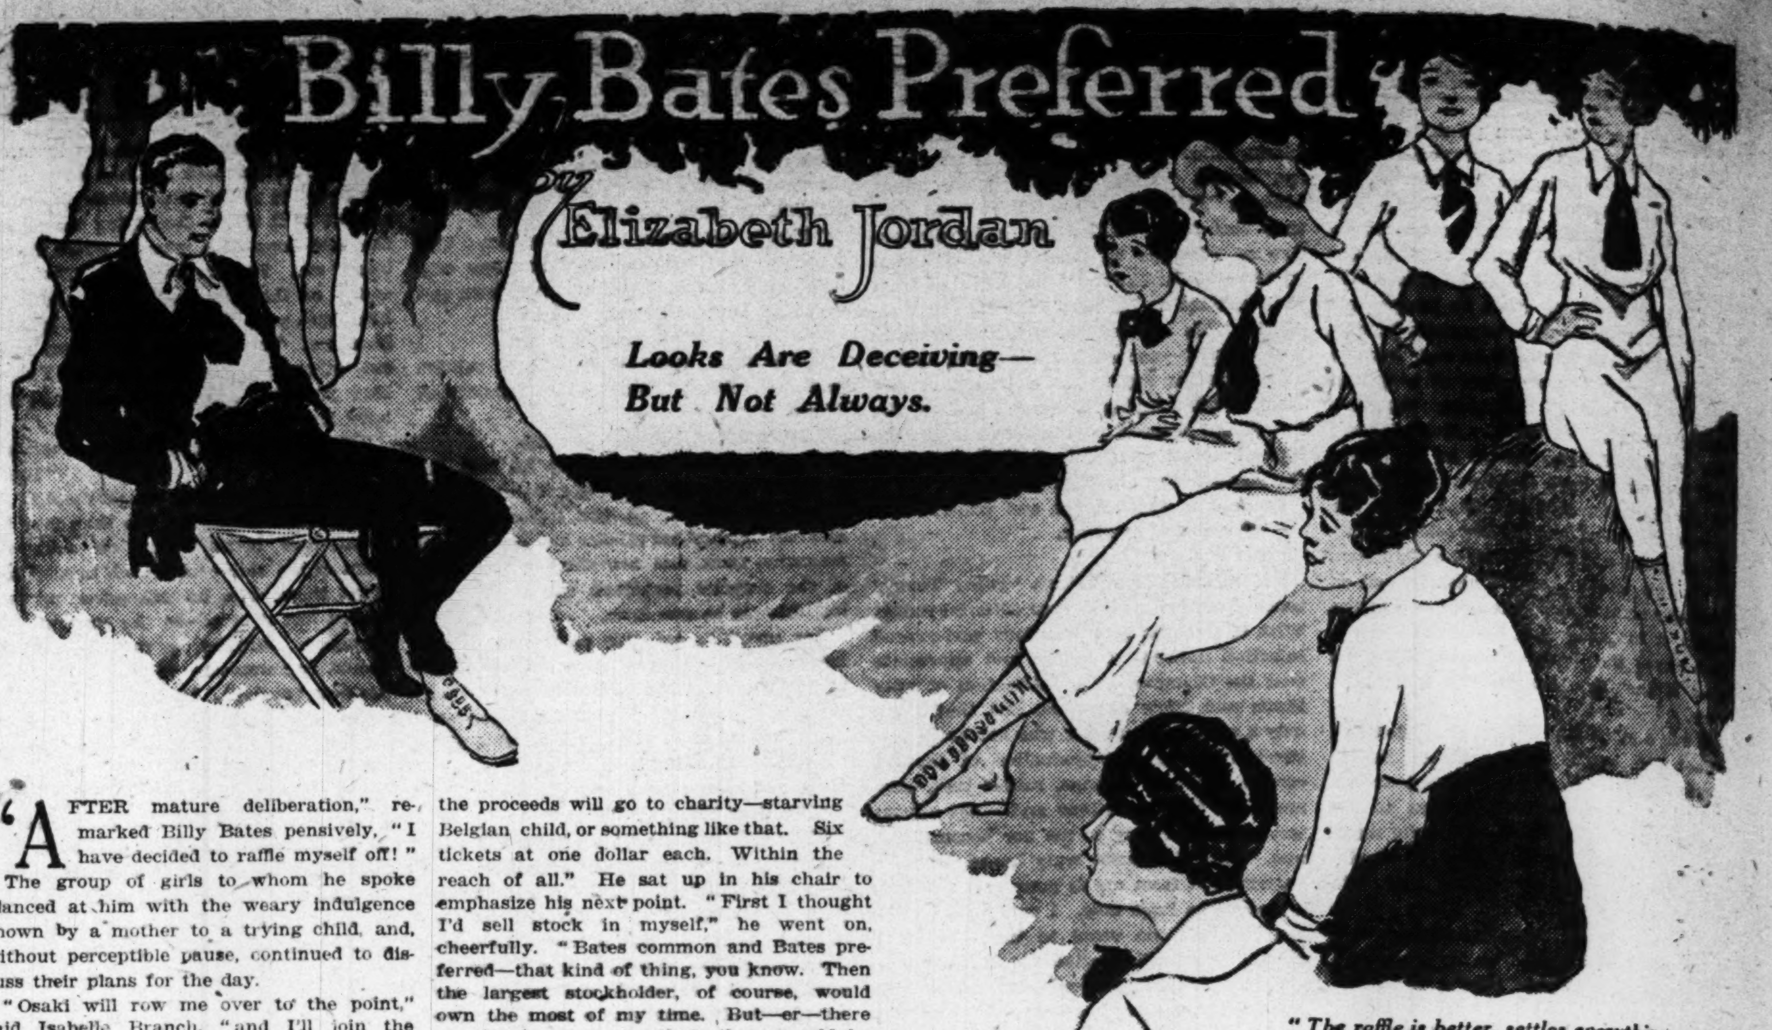
"God bless you!" said he. "The day after tomorrow I'll be myself once more instead of Rassillah Dass. Not tomorrow. Because tomorrow is the last day of the fair and I can't leave my boss in the lurch. But the day after I'm going home, old man. I'm going—home."

Quite early the next morning business caused me to depart from the town of the fair. It was some twenty-four hours later that I read of the death, due to snake bite, of Rassillah Dass.

To quote the paper:

"Rassillah Dass had been bitten by his cobras time and time again without evil results, for the reason that the serpents' fangs had been drawn. He would not now be with the dead if he had taken due care to inspect the cobras' mouths at regular intervals. Followers of his peculiar profession should not forget that all venomous snakes have sets of supplementary fangs which develop and replace the extracted ones within a certain time after their removal.

"The Rassillah Dass incident reveals an aspect which Mr. Thomas Hardy would no doubt call one of "life's little ironies," since Rassillah Dass—who was not a real Hindu, but a white man, name unknown—received the fatal snake bite during the last minute of the last hour of the last day of the term of his engagement as "The King of the Cobras." He had given his employer notice of his unalterable determination to leave his employ and the snake handling business in general forever as soon as that particular day's work was done."



Billy Bates Preferred

By Elizabeth Jordan

Looks Are Deceiving— But Not Always.

"The raffle is better, settles everything."

"AFTER mature deliberation," remarked Billy Bates pensively, "I have decided to raffle myself off!"

The group of girls to whom he spoke glanced at him with the weary indulgence shown by a mother to a trying child, and, without perceptible pause, continued to discuss their plans for the day.

"Osaki will row me over to the point," said Isabelle Branch, "and I'll join the Winthrops there, and 'do' the Indian Trail. I'll be back for luncheon."

"Kittie and I are going off in the Petrel," explained Harriet Beardslee. "We——"

"And I," repeated Billy Bates, raising his voice a trifle, "am going to raffle myself off, as I was remarking when I was rudely interrupted. And I'm going to do it now."

The girls turned to him, regarding him with a doubt that deepened into a faint interest.

"But why, and, as it were, wherefore?" demanded Miss Beardslee. "What's the idea?"

Young Mr. Bates stretched himself out more comfortably in the reclining chair he occupied on the camp veranda and clasped his hands behind his head. He was sure of his audience now, and very much at his ease.

"Because," he explained affably, "it's the only way to meet the embarrassing situation in which I find myself."

"Meaning—?" interrogated Kittie Noyes, who had looked puzzled.

"Meaning just this," continued young Mr. Bates. "Here I am, the only unattached man in camp, among six charming girls. What is my natural impulse? To spend the happy hours with all of you. But how the deuce can I do it when every one of you has a different taste? I long to hike with Isabella along the Indian Trail, but my heart also pants to be with Harriet and Kittie in the motorboat, and with the others, wherever they're going. It's a frightful situation. I'm feeling the nervous strain of it, so I intend to settle the thing once and for all."

Miss Beardslee, who had been standing with one foot advanced in the direction of the anchored Petrel, withdrew it, and sat down on the top step of the rustic porch.

"It sounds very interesting," she drawled, with an edge on her voice, however, which would have carried a warning to the youth. "How are you going to do it?"

"I've told you twice," Billy spoke without resentment, but a trifle wearily, as one who addresses a slow moving mind. "The girl who wins the raffle has me for the week I'm here. She has an escort for all occasions, and I'm saved the mental and emotional strain of deciding every morning what girl I'll spend the day with. Great scheme, isn't it?" he finished, with a cherubic smile which made him look about 4 years old.

The girls glanced at one another, flushing; a message flashed from eye to eye.

"Well, of all the conceited, insufferable ——" began Kitty Noyes hotly.

"The trouble with girls," murmured Mr. Bates, addressing space, "is that they're ruled by their emotions. Try to appeal to their reason and they're furious."

Harriet checked Kittie's retort with a warning gesture. "No one pays any attention to anything Billy says," she reminded her friend. "What he does is different. As the nephew of our hostess, he is, in a way, our host! If he wants to plan a new game, let him do it. I rather like it. Then one of us will have charge of him, and the rest of us will have him off our minds." She turned to Billy. "But," she added, "suppose none of the girls cares to take a chance. What then?"

For a moment the young man looked dashed. Then his brow cleared. "O, but you'll have to," he said airily. "You see, the proceeds will go to charity—starving Belgian child, or something like that. Six tickets at one dollar each. Within the reach of all." He sat up in his chair to emphasize his next point. "First I thought I'd sell stock in myself," he went on, cheerfully. "Bates common and Bates preferred—that kind of thing, you know. Then the largest stockholder, of course, would own the most of my time. But—er—there are disadvantages to that—there would be jealousies and rival claims. The raffle is better. Settles everything."

Miss Beardslee rose, and with a nod signaled her friends to follow her. "We'll talk it over," she said. "It won't take more than five minutes. Then," with a glance at Mr. Bates, "we'll let you know whether we care to invest."

It was more than five minutes before the girls returned, and to the young man in the reclining chair the interval seemed even longer. Moreover, the expression on their faces when they finally appeared was not especially reassuring. Billy, though a law unto himself and a thoroughly spoiled youth, was no fool, and the glint in the eyes of several of the girls did not escape him when he rose to hear their report. Most of them, moreover, were giggling. Miss Beardslee alone was serious and purposeful of mien. She wore the air of one assisting at a ceremony.

"It's all right," she announced briefly. "We agree, but we want you to sell seven tickets instead of six. The seventh is for Helen Wickersham, who is coming tonight for a week's visit. She must be in this, too."

"O, of course. Just as you please."

Mr. Bates was fumbling in his pocket for his notebook. When he found it he proceeded to tear out a page, which he divided into seven strips. On one he wrote two words, and showed them to the girls. "Bates preferred," they read in chorus, and again they giggled.

Mr. Bates folded the strips with great solemnity, dropped them into the crown of his Panama hat, shook them violently, and offered the hat to his audience. Miss Beardslee was the first to draw.

"I'll take two chances," she explained as she did so, "one for Helen."

When the others had drawn there was a moment of suspense. "Now open them," commanded Mr. Bates.

A suggestion of interest was in his languid voice, and a little stir of expectancy was perceptible among the girls as each unfolded her paper. With an odd smile Miss Beardslee held up one of the two slips she had drawn.

"Helen's!" she murmured. "She has won!" Then she burst into helpless laughter. "And, O, Billy," she added when she could speak, "you are in for it."

Mr. Bates turned an anxious eye upon her. "I don't know Miss Wickersham," he admitted, uncomfortably, "but she's a good sort, isn't she?—and you all like her, don't you? You've done nothing but talk about her since I came!"

"Of course we like her. But she's deep, Billy," Kittie Noyes warned him. "You'll have to watch her!" And they all laughed again.

An expression of almost fatuous content overspread the ingenuous boyish countenance of Mr. Bates. "O, if that's all!" he exclaimed, with such artless relief that another gale of laughter swept over the girls.

Upon his own invitation Billy accompanied Miss Noyes and Miss Beardslee on their motor boat excursion, cheerfully explaining that he did so because two pretty heads were better than one, and during the boat's humming progress over the sun touched sea he succeeded in extracting from them some interesting information concerning Miss Wickersham. It seemed that they knew her well; indeed, had been her classmates in a New York school for two years. Her home was in Alabama, and this would be her first experience of camping in the Maine woods. How old was she? About 23. Pretty? Y-e-s. Small, dark, brown eyes, brown hair. It seemed clear that as usual young Mr. Bates had fallen on his feet, and he plumed himself so openly on the coming of the figure draped romantically in the veil of the unknown that his two companions exchanged a glance of heartfelt understanding.

He was impatient to meet Miss Wickersham, and distinctly annoyed, as well as disappointed, when Harriet, now the appointed mistress of ceremonies, declared that the introduction must not take place until the next morning.

"She gets in late," she explained, "and she'll be tired and want to go to bed. But tomorrow morning we'll meet here on the veranda before breakfast and turn the prize package over to her with due pomp. Would you mind," she added, wistfully, "if we did you up in ribbons?"

Billy decided lightheartedly that he did not mind, and his serenity remained undisturbed when Harriet explained that they had to do something to make the gift acceptable. In the evening he went for a moonlight sail with Kittie and the Sheldon twins, and was many miles away from camp when the exhausted Miss Wickersham arrived and was tenderly escorted to her room, from which waves of laughter rolled at intervalls for the next hour.

Billy was up early the next morning, and as he dressed he observed with satisfaction that the day was glorious. On the canvas walls of his tent lay the shadows of the surrounding pines, and beyond the drawn flap at the entrance he saw and heard the sea singing to the sun. He was a satisfying young figure in white as he bounded across the narrow stretch of woods that separated his sleeping quarters from the dining tent, and when Harriet hurried down the path to meet him, carrying several bolts of brilliant colored ribbons, he greeted her with a smile as jocund as the morning, and lent himself cheerfully to the decorative scheme she at once began to carry out. He was festooned like a Christmas tree when she finally led him in triumph to the veranda where the girls were waiting.

In the center of the animated group they made he caught a glimpse of a stranger, and he was wholly on his guard as he approached. What he was not prepared for was the perfect naturalness of the girls, the ease of Harriet's presentation, and the extraordinary appearance of the little figure before which he found himself bowing. Helen Wickersham was all her friends had claimed for her—small and brown, and, y-e-s, pretty. She was no doubt intelligent. But her clothes, her carriage, her manner, and the general effect she presented were wholly different from anything Mr. Bates was accustomed to and what he loftily called "our set." As he would have put it, she looked "disgustingly thrown together."

Her wavy brown hair was pulled back from her forehead and fastened on the top of her head in a relentless little "pug." A brown flannel shirtwaist, bulging in the back, eluded by two inches a safety pin that sought to confine it to a shabby brown tweed skirt which dragged on one side and pulled up on the other. Serviceable gray stockings ended in a pair of large tan walking shoes with extension soles and worn rubber heels. Every girl at the Bateses' camp wore serviceable shoes and rough tweed outing clothes, but, compared with their trim effect, with the perfection of colors, pins, and belts, Miss Wickersham looked like a bedraggled little brown hen among a group of peacocks. Not that the effect was exaggeratedly bad. Met on the road, she might have seemed a self-respecting country schoolma'am with a mind above the trivialities of dress.

Her mind seemed to be above other trivialities as well, for when Harriet presented the bedizened Mr. Bates with a laughing explanation she seemed neither amused nor impressed. Indeed, Billy was quite sure she did not wholly realize the situation, and with a wild grasp at his vanishing self-confidence he buoyantly addressed her.

"What shall we do today, Miss Wickersham?" he asked. "What sort of thing do you like best—riding, swimming, sailing, rowing? It's for you to say, you know."

Miss Wickersham regarded him with a pair of brown eyes whose expression was kind yet incredibly remote. "Why, I don't know," she said, vaguely. "I—haven't thought about it." She was not self-conscious, but it seemed clear that she was shy.

Billy watched carefully. "Then let me do the thinking," he suggested. "We'll go for a sail, and we'll start as soon as breakfast is over. The wind's just right.

Miss Wickersham looked around the little circle with the same vague uncertainty in her brown eyes. "Are we all going?" she asked doubtfully.

"Great Scott, no! That isn't the idea," Billy broke in airily upon the sentence Kittie had begun. "They all have different tastes. Sailing makes most of 'em sick."

"It makes me sick, too," murmured Miss Wickersham.

Billy was disappointed—and showed it. With a good boat to manage, and a splendid breeze, he could have had a glorious morning, with or without a companion.

"Row, then?" he asked.

"Mercy, no!" with a shudder. "That's worse.

"H-m-m! Swim?"

"I don't swim."

Harriet came to the rescue. "We'll go in to breakfast," she declared. "After that you can decide what to do. We've made all our plans," she added graciously.

She led the way into the big dining tent, and Billy followed, feeling rather foolish; but he dutifully seated himself beside Miss Wickersham and attended to her wants with care. The figure he presented in his fresh white flannels and colored rosettes and streamers was such a contrast to the girl beside him that the others seemed unable to keep their eyes from the pair. Miss Wickersham was increasingly shy at the breakfast table and had to be "drawn out," but Billy was relieved to observe that she had a good appetite. At least she was not "delicate." ever she announced her determination to unpack.

"Then Billy can wait on the veranda until you're ready for him," suggested Harriet.

Miss Wickersham signified that this arrangement would be satisfactory to her, and Mr. Bates agreed to it perforce, but the look he gave Miss Beardslee as she started off an hour later should have disturbed that young lady's subsequent dreams.

He made himself comfortable, however, in the hammock with a book, and he was so lost in the interest of the story that he failed to hear the happy band of his friends returning at lunch time. At the table Miss Wickersham apologized palely. The unpacking had taken her longer than she expected. If she had unpacked her wardrobe, she had put it carefully away, for she was still clad in the nondescript garments of the early morning. After luncheon she declared that she was tired and suggested that, as Mr. Bates seemed fond of reading, he might read aloud to her. Her taste in literature, it appeared, differed from his, and she regarded with distaste the light novel he suggested. Instead she offered him his choice between Haeckel's "Riddle of the Universe" and Rodin's "L'Art" in the original French, and after one awestruck glance at the latter he opened the "Riddle" and read until his throat ached. Subconsciously he experienced a horrible fear that Miss Wickersham was a "highbrow," but this lightened somewhat when he discovered that she slept peacefully through the reading, though she always stirred restlessly if he stopped.

That night there was a dance at the next camp, and Miss Wickersham permitted Mr. Bates to escort her there. She appeared dressed for the festivity in a badly made white frock, a worse made blue ribbon belt, and a sprawling blue bow pinned against the side of the unrelenting "pug." After one glance at the ensemble Billy decided that he liked her better in the brown things. It appeared that she did not dance, but she evidently expected Mr. Bates to sit out all the dances with her, and after one effort to escape he did so, not caring to subject himself to another rebuff such as the one Miss Beardslee gave him when he asked her for a waltz. She had looked at him with eyes brim full of horror and incredulity

"And take you from Helen?" she gasped. "Why, Billy!"

Billy returned to Helen murmuring something for Harriet's benefit as he did so. At the end of the evening he mentally counted and classified the remarks his charge had made to him. There were five in all—two about the weather, and the others covering such miscellaneous interests as the fox trot, which she thought ungraceful; the supper, which, to Billy's anguish, she declined; and —this in explanation of a slight yawn—the soporific quality of the pines. Altogether she was a rather heavy and drowsy young person, shy, unsophisticated, as out of place in the gay scene as a "bouncing Bet" in a vase of orchids.

Mr. Bates, on the other hand, talked steadily, until, as he later expressed it, his tongue ached. He outlined in detail the joys of camp life, described the surrounding region for a hundred miles, made elaborate plans for the coming days, monologued on athletics, and praised the progress of the moving picture drama, throwing in for good measure a story or two as revealed by the films. He made a gallant showing, and a hint of appreciation touched his companion's eyes once or twice as they rested upon him.

As he jumped into bed that night he smiled to himself in the darkness. The situation was becoming extremely interesting. They were not going to get a rise out of him. As for that girl, he'd give her the time of her life. He'd show her.

"Can you walk?" he asked her the next morning.

She did not seem to know, and gazed at Isabella for inspiration.

"Because we're going to walk," continued Billy lightly. "You and I are going to do the Indian trail. Be ready right after breakfast, please. I'll have Osaki put us up half a ton of luncheon."

She was ready on time and appeared still wearing the brown skirt and bulging flannel blouse, with an added horror in the form of a mustard colored blazer that set Billy's teeth on edge. But she could walk—he soon discovered that; and today she seemed to know him a little better and to have lost some of her shyness. Once she spoke impulsively, and then, seeming to regret it, sank into a depressed silence, followed by a resolute effort to find out how much he knew about trees. Discovering that he knew nothing except that they were pleasant things to sit under, she told him all she knew, which took some time. It seemed that she loved to be among them, preferably alone. But not even this admission, for which she hurriedly apologized, nor the relentless "pug," nor the prosaic shoes, could check the exhilaration that swept over Billy as they ate their luncheon together under the dim arches of the cathedral woods. Resolutely dismissing the subject of trees, he began to talk of life, of what it meant to a fellow just starting out—with ambitions. Of what girls could do to help him, especially the right kind of a girl—most of all, The Girl.

Miss Wickersham seemed interested. There was a more human look in her brown eyes. It appeared that society girls were mostly dolls—Billy had observed this. What a fellow needed was the home type of girl, the girl whose thoughts were not on clothes and parties. Could she, Miss Wickersham, cook? Billy asked the question with pathetic hopefulness, and Miss Wickersham seemed dazed. When she admitted that she could not he turned away as if he had received a blow, and the lady regarded the back of his norfolk jacket with a puzzled frown. There was something about Billy she did not understand.

For three days he swept her out of camp immediately after breakfast and kept her all day long upon the sea or in the woods. They ate their luncheons beside driftwood fires, and in the evenings they sat out on the rocks watching the moon, which posed for them esthetically in a fleckless sky. The third night they studied it until it was the only light in camp save one, and again Billy discoursed of life. Cooking it appeared, was not important, after all. He dismissed it with the assurance of one who had recently eaten an excellent dinner. There were other things—inspiration, for example, and being understood! To be able to look past externals and know what a man or woman really was! To read the human heart and soul! For example, Billy was sure he could read her heart. He was equally sure she could read his. Hers was an unopened flower, waiting for the sun. Miss Wickersham gazed on the path of the moonlight, leading far out to sea, and coughed restlessly. Billy Bates was setting a pace she could not follow.

The interested Miss Beardslee was waiting for her when she returned to camp, and after a somewhat lingering good night to her escort Miss Wickersham entered the big living room and turned fiercely upon her friend.

"I'm going to stop this nonsense," she said. "It's silly. And he's—he's rather wonderful."

"Wonderful! Billy?" It would have chastened Billy to hear those two words as Harriet Beardslee uttered them.

"Yes, wonderful. He—well, he has found me, the real me, and I haven't made it easy."

"What?"

Helen nodded. "He has," she decared. Her voice softened. "He has," she repeated, dreamily. Miss Beardslee shook off the spell that seemed settling upon them both. "You mean he's been making love to you," she said with frank scorn. "Billy would do that to a wooden image. It doesn't mean a thing!"

"O, Harriet!"

"Do you want it to?"

"N-no. Of course not!"

"Well, then, play the game to the finish, as you promised. He is fooling you, and he'll have the laugh on his side yet if you don't watch out."

Any one but the irrepressible Billy Bates would have thrown up the sponge during the next two days, and it must be admitted that even Billy had moments of depression. One of these came when, after ten minutes of impassioned love making on the sand, he discovered that Miss Wickersham had reverted to her former distressing habit of going to sleep. He stared at her incredulously. Was she pretending? If she was she was doing it remarkably well. Nothing could have been more unstudied than her ungraceful pose and—he looked again and sighed; yes, her mouth was slightly open!

When she deigned to keep awake and to talk she expressed views that wounded Billy's sensibilities. Her interest in life was on a far higher plane than his, and as to men— It seemed that her ideal man was the brawny son of toil, the diamond in the rough, such as the cowboy of fiction. She admitted regretfully, when pressed to do so, that she had never met one in real life, but intimated that she still had hopes. She considered the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers the finest body of men in the world, with the possible exception of New York's mounted police. She liked big men. (Billy was of medium height.) She liked men who wore flannel shirts. (Billy dressed with unusual care.) In short, she was for brawn and simple hearts. It had taken two days to draw these convictions from her, and at the end of that time, when Billy began to talk, she had gone to sleep!

It was on the same rocks two nights later, with that night rover the moon still chaperoning them and the love song of the sea in their ears, that Billy asked Miss Wickersham to marry him. For a long moment she stared at him without speaking. Then at the look in his eyes a big sob burst from her.

"But you don't really love me!" she cried. "You can't. You only love what you think I am."

The next minute she had gone, leaving Billy staring after her. Five minutes later she had hurled herself into Miss Beardslee's tent and was sobbing violently in the arms of that dazed young person.

"I won't go on with it another minute," she cried. "I won't! I won't! I don't care what I promised. I'm going to pack tonight and go away on the 5 o'clock boat in the morning. You've got to explain everything and—and—t-take all the b-blame!"

Harriet grasped her shoulders and shook her. "Good heavens!" she cried in exasperation, "the blame for what? It's all a silly joke. Don't you realize that?"

"But he—he loves me," sobbed Miss Wickersham. "I mean he loves what he thinks I am. When he finds I'm different it will b-break his heart."

Miss Beardslee laughed, then hastened to apologize. "Billy with a broken heart is something I just can't see," she admitted. "But did he really ask you to marry him?" she added, incredulously. "Really?"

Miss Wickersham's face flamed into a white anger. "Yes, he did, really," she said, "and he meant it. I could tell by—by the look in his eyes." Her voice trembled. "But it isn't really me he loves," she repeated, miserably. "It's the girl he thinks I am. When he knows the truth he'll hate me. O-h-h-h!"

Under the force of that final wail Harriet's eyes widened. "Helen Wickersham!" she gasped. "You don't mean that in these few days you—you——" The thing was too incredible. She stopped.

"Yes, I do," flared her friend. In the next instant her resentment died. "But that's all the good it will do me," she added, dully. "He won't look at me when he knows the kind of girl I really am!"

Miss Beardslee's lips set. "You leave this to me," she said, and walked out of the tent. She found Billy high on the rocks where Helen had left him. He volplaned down to meet her, with the shining eyes of a little boy.

"Harriet!" he jerked out, breathlessly. "Isn't it wonderful! She will take me, won't she? She's only a little frightened, isn't she? I was too sudden. I ought to have known better. Girls often rush off like that, don't they? But it can't mean that she won't—that she doesn't——"

Harriet drew a deep breath. "Billy," she said, imploringly, "tell me the truth. Are you in earnest?"

His eyes answered and she hurried on.

"What is it you see in Helen? She's so different from all your friends.

"That's it!" Billy's words leaped at her. "That's what I see. A fellow likes to play with society girls. But when he marries——"

Harriet felt herself skidding, and wondered wildly where she would bring up. "But she's bound to change, and—and—take her proper place," she urged. "You want her to be different, don't you, and develop——"

Billy shook his yellow head. "Not on your life!" he declared. "I don't want a single thing about her changed. I couldn't stand it. I want," he ended sentimentally, "I want the little brown wren I've been looking for all my life." At something he saw in Harriet's face he turned away hastily, as if to hide his emotion. "Send her here to me, Harriet," he urged in a choked voice. "That's a dear. Make her come back. Tell her I must have my answer tonight."

With reluctant steps Miss Beardslee returned to her tent. Of all the hideous mixups! Never again, she decided, would she take part in playing a practical joke. When she reached the tent Helen was still there, and she turned her out into the night with a friendly push on her shoulder.

"He's waiting for you," she said, somberly. "I—I—guess you two can fix it up together. If you can't, I'll try again."

Billy was still gazing out over the sea when Miss Wickersham reached his side, and he turned on her a face transfigured by the moolight. Without a word he took her in his arms and held her there, and after a long interval she gulpingly began her confession, her wet cheek still against his.

"O, Billy," she cried, "I'm—such—a fraud! You won't—love—me—when—you—know."

Billy drew away, took her face between his hands, and looked into her wet brown eyes. "What do you mean?" he asked.

"You love me because you think I'm quiet and—and don't care for clothes or—or for society, but—but—I do. I do! I've been deceiving you, Billy, and I'm—utterly—wretched! I—I dance, and I run a motor, and—I—do all sorts of things. I'm not a bit quiet or domestic."

"Anything else?" asked Billy in a strange voice.

"Yes. I—I wear good clothes, too!" she wailed.

Billy laughed. Then he kissed her. "I know you do," he said, comfortably. "I've seen you in them. I've seen you in the other kind, too! In short, I've seen you do 'The Country Mouse' before!"

"Wh—what!" This time it was she who drew back to stare at him.

He nodded. "Yes; I was in the audience when you did it in New York at the Belgian benefit. I recognized the 'makeup' the minute I saw you in it the morning we met here."

"Then you knew—all along—that I was——"

"Masquerading? Of course. It's been lots of fun! And what a rise I took out of poor Harriet just now! It was simply great!" Billy chuckled.

Miss Wickersham turned pale. "You mean——" she faltered.

"I mean," said Billy Bates, fervently, "that I adore you. I've been in love with you ever since I saw you in the play. And this raffle of mine was just a little schame to get you all to myself this week. I knew the girls would swallow the bait, but I didn't think they'd gulp down the hook, too!"

And he kissed her again.

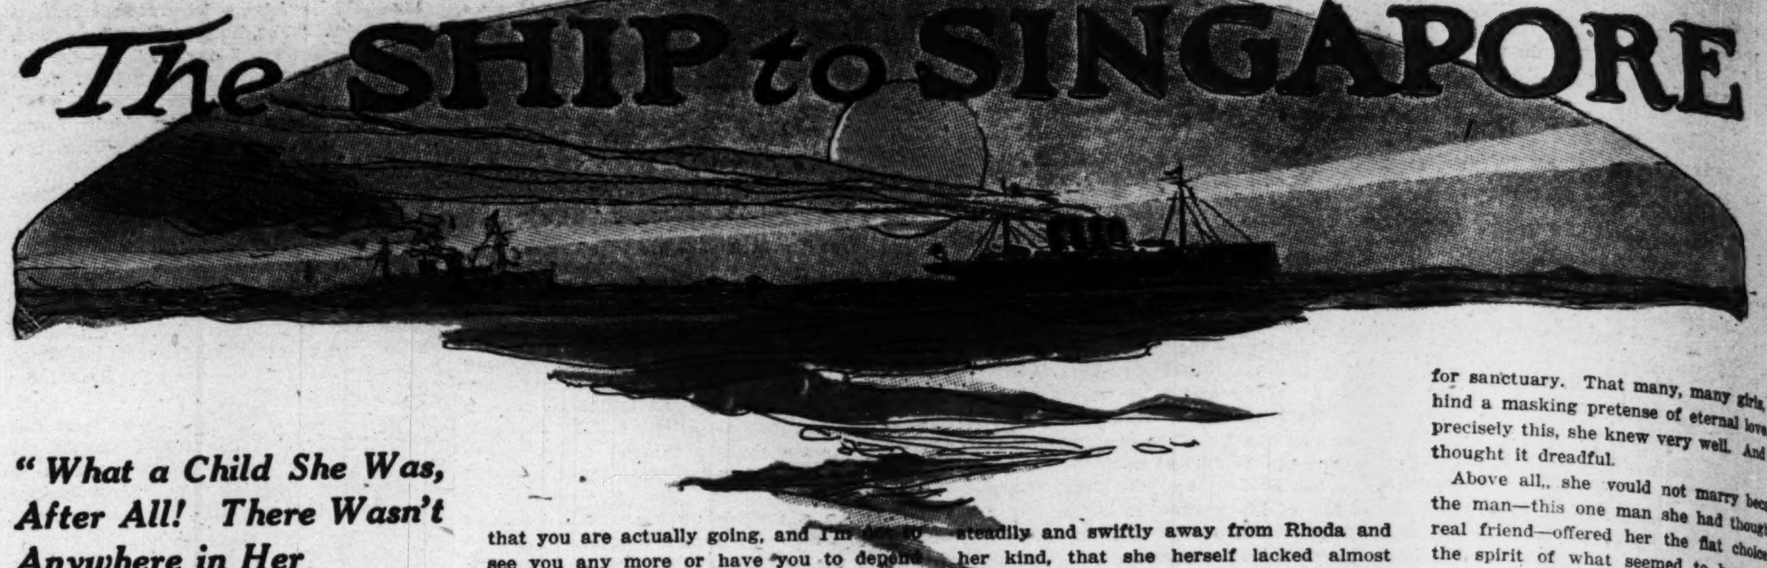
"Indeed, Billy was quite sure she did not wholly realize the situation."

The SHIP to SINGAPORE



"What a Child She Was, After All! There Wasn't Anywhere in Her Adorable Little Head a Glimmer of Light as to What It Must Mean to a Responsible Business Man to Drop Everything and Disappear for a Fortnight."

"I SHALL never marry," said Miss Austin. And she said it rather sadly.

Henry Carpenter, in the next steamer chair, continued to gaze soberly out over the calm surface of the China sea.

"Then," he replied, a few moments later, "I shall leave the ship at Hongkong."

"Oh!" the soft exclamation escaped the girl. "But that will be tomorrow."

He nodded. "Tomorrow. I had to come this far. I had to ask the question. You have been honest with me. And you know your own mind."

The girl bit her lip. If there was one thing above all others in the world that she did not know, it was her own mind. Unexpected complexities lay in that quarter.

"I like you—bushels," she murmured.

He nodded again. "I know you do. But it would have to be more than that."

Tears came to her eyes. Which was absurd enough. She turned her head and looked aft past the long rows of drowsy, white clad persons in steamer chairs to where the second cabin deck house was rising and falling with the gentle swell. She had come to be fond of this man. He was steady. You could count on him. Why couldn't she bring herself to feel that wonderful impulse toward him that people call love? Everything would be so simple then. He was considerate, gentle, intelligent; he would make a wonderful companion.

The deck steward brought tea. They sipped for a while.

She found herself wishing wildly that this man would be more determined. Even vehemence from him would be a relief. Why didn't he make her marry him! He would be what the observant world would regard as an ideal husband for such as she. But there was a touch of bitterness in this thought. She became conscious that he was looking at her with a gentle gravity, and made an effort to bring her racing mind under control.

"I don't want you to leave the ship at Hongkong," she said, under her breath.

"I'm sorry," said he. "I'd like to be your friend. But I've gone too far. I couldn't go on giving you a little of my life. I must give you everything now—or nothing."

It was rather wonderful that he should want her as much as that. It seemed to her that she didn't deserve it. And he put it so simply, with such reserve.

"You see," he went on, almost apologetically, "I may appear steady enough——"

"You do," she murmured.

"But an experience like this really tears one up dreadfully."

She rested a light hand on his arm. "I know. I couldn't have understood a week ago. But now——"

"I would go on to Singapore," he continued; "I would try to be your friend, just your friend—if I could trust myself, if I thought I could keep my balance. But it wouldn't do for me to make a failure of it."

"I don't know what to say," she broke out. "I seem to have lost the power to think. When it comes right down to the thought that you are actually going, and I'm not to see you any more or have you to depend on—well, I just don't want you to go! I seem to need you. Maybe I do love you. How can I say? I don't know what love is—what it ought to be. Oh, why do these questions have to come up! Why do we have to be torn and disturbed this way? I used to enjoy everything—now I don't enjoy anything. And I didn't want this. I only wanted to be let alone."

"That," he observed, with a slow shake of his head, "is probably the one thing none of us can ever hope for."

"To be let alone?"

"We are all a part of the tangle of life."

"It is a tangle!" she breathed.

"Listen," she said, a little later. "I'm not going to let you go at Hongkong. If you'll only come on as far as Singapore, I'll promise to make up my mind. There—there's nothing to prevent it." She sighed. "Nothing—nothing else."

Over his lean face flitted an odd, momentary smile. It was what would perhaps be called a wry smile. What a child she was, after all! And what on earth were you to do with her? There wasn't anywhere in her adorable little head a glimmer of light as to what it must mean to a responsible business man to drop everything and disappear for a fortnight.

He shook his head. "No, Edith, I don't see how that would make the decision any easier. No—I will drop off at Hongkong."

"But," she protested, "that's—we're almost there now! Why, tomorrow you will be gone!"

He inclined his head. Edith bit her lip again.

Then two expatriates from Yokohama stopped before them and talked with some enthusiasm of the sights of Canton. It was nearly an hour later before Edith could slip away to her cabin—ostensibly to dress for dinner, but really to sit on her berth, cuddle Wing in her lap, and gaze moodily out the open port.

She had slipped out of her dress and into her kimono—the kimono that had been admired by Rhoda Eavsby, the little missionary of Shansi who had loved beautiful things. Edith looked soberly down at it, and herself fingered the Kioto embroidery as the devoted missionary had fingered it. Tears came to her eyes.

Outside the port the oily tropical ocean slid endlessly by. Now and then, as the ship rolled gently down and the horizon moved deliberately upward, she could see the little black flying fish skimming over the surface.

No, she did not want Henry Carpenter to leave the ship at Hongkong. Until now she had never been for long far from friends, or at least relatives. This man was the last tie that bound her to the world of reality, and now he was permitting her to plunge on into a new, bewildering life—all alone.

The alternative was to surrender her life to his in marriage. The tears came again. She held Wing so tightly that he wriggled a protest. It wasn't fair of Henry Carpenter to put the choice to her in that way. Why, it was exactly what Bob Carver had done—the thing she had run away from? Come to think of it, it was what men always do!

She thought again of Rhoda Eavsby. Rhoda had forsworn marriage to devote her life to serving her less fortunate fellows. There was something to be said for that choice. It was hard; it was rough; you had to surrender all that is pleasant and easy in life; but it did surely bring a fine sense of independence.

Thinking of this, Edith found herself caught up in quite a little glow of enthusiasm. She almost decided to become a missionary. That the ship was bearing her steadily and swiftly away from Rhoda and her kind, that she herself lacked almost utterly the equipment in general education and special training, appeared for the moment, merely rather vague and unimportant details.

But the vague and unimportant details grew clearer as the moments passed. Soon they were asserting themselves with considerable force. The single small detail that Rhoda could read, write, and speak Chinese gradually magnified itself in her mind. Why, that one little accomplishment meant years upon years of study.

Once or twice before in her young life, when contemplating revolt from the shackles of family life, Edith had considered breaking out into the great rough world and "doing something." And now, as on those former occasions, it was the consciousness of her own utter lack of solid equipment that baffled her. You had to be trained for years before you could do anything.

Edith drew no conclusions from this fact. She did not dwell upon the plight of the American girl in general—trained only to be charming at the expense of somebody else. She only felt uncomfortable and confused, and more than a thought resentful.

But on this occasion there was a new factor in the situation, a factor of which she was quite conscious. Heretofore, in dwelling on these problems, firm in the untried courage of youth, it had not so much as occurred to her to doubt her own triumphant progress. But now something had happened. Vivid pictures rose before her mind's eye. She saw herself again at the shop on the Nanking road, surrendering her camel and receiving in exchange the bag of gold. She saw herself in a carriage, with a young man who wore bicycle clips and a derby hat. She lived through that odd little scene at the restaurant on Bubbling Well road where the young man had read his verses to her with a flush on his cheek and a light in his eye. The rest of it came rushing up then to the surface of her thoughts—the ride in the sampan; that dreamlike scene of death; wild kisses on her lips, on her own young lips.

She fought these memories back. They bewildered her. But she could not altogether conquer the new misgivings that were these days eating at the foundation of all that had been solid in her habitual attitude toward herself.

Henry Carpenter was really solid. She had clung to him; but he was leaving her now.

Her uncle and aunt, even, were solid. They seemed to have arrived, at least, at a sort of working understanding with life. You didn't feel, in thinking of them, that they were upset and bewildered about it. For a moment, at this stage, she even lost confidence in her judgment in running away from them.

Her ticket on this ship read to Naples. That was nearly a month away—a month of tropical seas and palm shaded ports—and nothing to do but rest in steamer chairs and think about yourself. It had not occurred to her before to fear this journey—not until now that Henry Carpenter had definitely decided to leave her. She thought that it would be better if she had something to do right away. She was afraid of inactivity and languor, and of what she might think and feel.

With a sudden determination she put Wing aside, got up, and got about dressing for dinner. If the time had at last come when she could not trust herself with her own thoughts, very well—she would seek refuge in activity. The choice was hers, right now, to marry; and to marry, as the phrase runs, "well." But she would not marry in weakness. She would not marry for sanctuary. That many, many girls, behind a masking pretense of eternal love, do precisely this, she knew very well. And she thought it dreadful.

Above all, she would not marry because the man—this one man she had thought a real friend—offered her the flat choice, in the spirit of what seemed to her, at the moment, almost a threat. No, she would meet him squarely. She would confront him, steady of eye, firm of speech, mistress of herself. In the morning the ship would dock at Hongkong; they would go ashore—very likely he would ask her to a parting luncheon—but he would stand firm, and so would she.

When Miss Austin entered the ship's dining room, more than an hour later, a hundred pairs of eyes followed her along the aisle to her seat at the captain's table. For her head was high. There was color in her cheek. She wore a gown of dull blue chiffon cloth made over white silk, embroidered heavily in gold at the bottom of the narrow skirt, and with a touch of gold at the shoulders. On her pretty feet were gold satin slippers and silk stockings to match. Bound about her fluffy hair was a broad gold band. And she carried, carelessly on her arm, a wonderful old mandarin coat, about which, evidently, the costume had been built. It was of a dull gray-blue silk, this coat, embroidered heavily in self-tones with touches of pink and white, and with great daring swirls of gold over embroidery. The lining was white silk.

She passed Henry Carpenter, who smiled in friendly but grave fashion, with a jerky little bow that had in it more evidence of pride than she dreamed.

After dinner they had coffee on deck, he and she. It was harder to be natural than she had foreseen, he was so extremely sober. But natural she was determined to appear; and accordingly she chatted about nothing at all with an ease bordering on recklessness. They talked and walked with others. It was well on in the evening before they found themselves standing, apart from the smoking, bridge playing ship's company, at the forward end of the promenade deck. Edith leaned on the rail and watched the creamy shine of the foam that rolled away from the bow in rhythmical rushes.

After a time he nodded toward the forecastle.

She hesitated and glanced inquiringly at him. Her pride, that had supported her so splendidly during and after dinner, was weaker now. Like all her other emotions during this queer phase of her life, when she was no longer a girl and yet not quite a woman, it had risen upon her only to pass by, like a wave.

She wondered why he asked her to do this. The forecastle was a secluded spot—a lover's nook, indeed. But she would not refuse.

He was glancing down at her costume rather uncertainly. "But you are not exactly dressed for climbing around," said he.

"Nonsense," said she. And started for the ladder so promptly that he had to step quickly to be at her elbow in time to lend a hand.

They descended, passed the closed hatch that was covered with sprawling, half clad steerage passengers, climbed the forecastle ladder, and made their way forward around donkey engines and over heaps of chains. He found a seat for her against a coil of clean yellow rope, where she could lean back and watch the dim, flat sea and the sky that blazed with millions of stars.

"Where is the Southern Cross?" she asked.

He pointed it out. But he had next to nothing to say. Gradually it became clear to her that he had not brought her here for the purpose of talking to her. She puzzled much. Probably he merely wished to construct a final memory of a pleasant hour with her. Whatever was in his thoughts, his long silences nettled her. She was sure he had not weakened.

I think I understand, Edith," he replied. more gently than she had yet heard him speak. "I think we had better go back now. It is pretty late."

He let her get up alone. And in stepping over the ropes and chairs and descending the ladder he did not so much as touch her arm. She was deep in the mysteries of life and failed to observe the fact.

He gave her a steady smile when they said good-night. He had to take her hand then, for she thrust it out. After which he mounted to the deserted boat deck, beneath which lay no hot and irritable sleepers, and tramped around and around a long time, from late to early until his Chinese silver cigar case was empty.

The little luncheon took place that next day at Hongkong. In a coolish hotel on a hill.

Then he returned with her to the ship, and chatted until she went below to dress. He said good-by at the gangway, while the launch waited below, and was still standing there when she last looked back from the door.

He was taking it coolly enough—merely wishing her a pleasant voyage. There was nothing in his manner to suggest the very responsible business man who had slipped out for ten minutes after ordering luncheon and sent sixty-two gold dollars' worth of cablegrams. Nothing whatever. She did not even know of the cablegrams. She wondered a little as she descended the stairs. And she spoke rather sharply to Wing.

She dressed quickly, and returned to the deck. The ship was just under weigh. The launch had gone—she could see it now, half way to the wharf. But she could not make him out in the handkerchief waving group at the stern. Probably he had settled himself comfortably forward where he could catch what air was stirring and smoke in peace. The thought nettled her.

But the spectacle depressed her. She suddenly discovered that the older inhabitants (by a few days) of the ship were long time friends, and that these interlopers were hostile and unwelcome. She climbed the ladder-like stairway to the boat deck, where were others, like herself, indignantly avoiding the invasion of Huns and Vandals below. She walked slowly past these, farther aft, by the funnels and the line of tarpaulin covered boats.

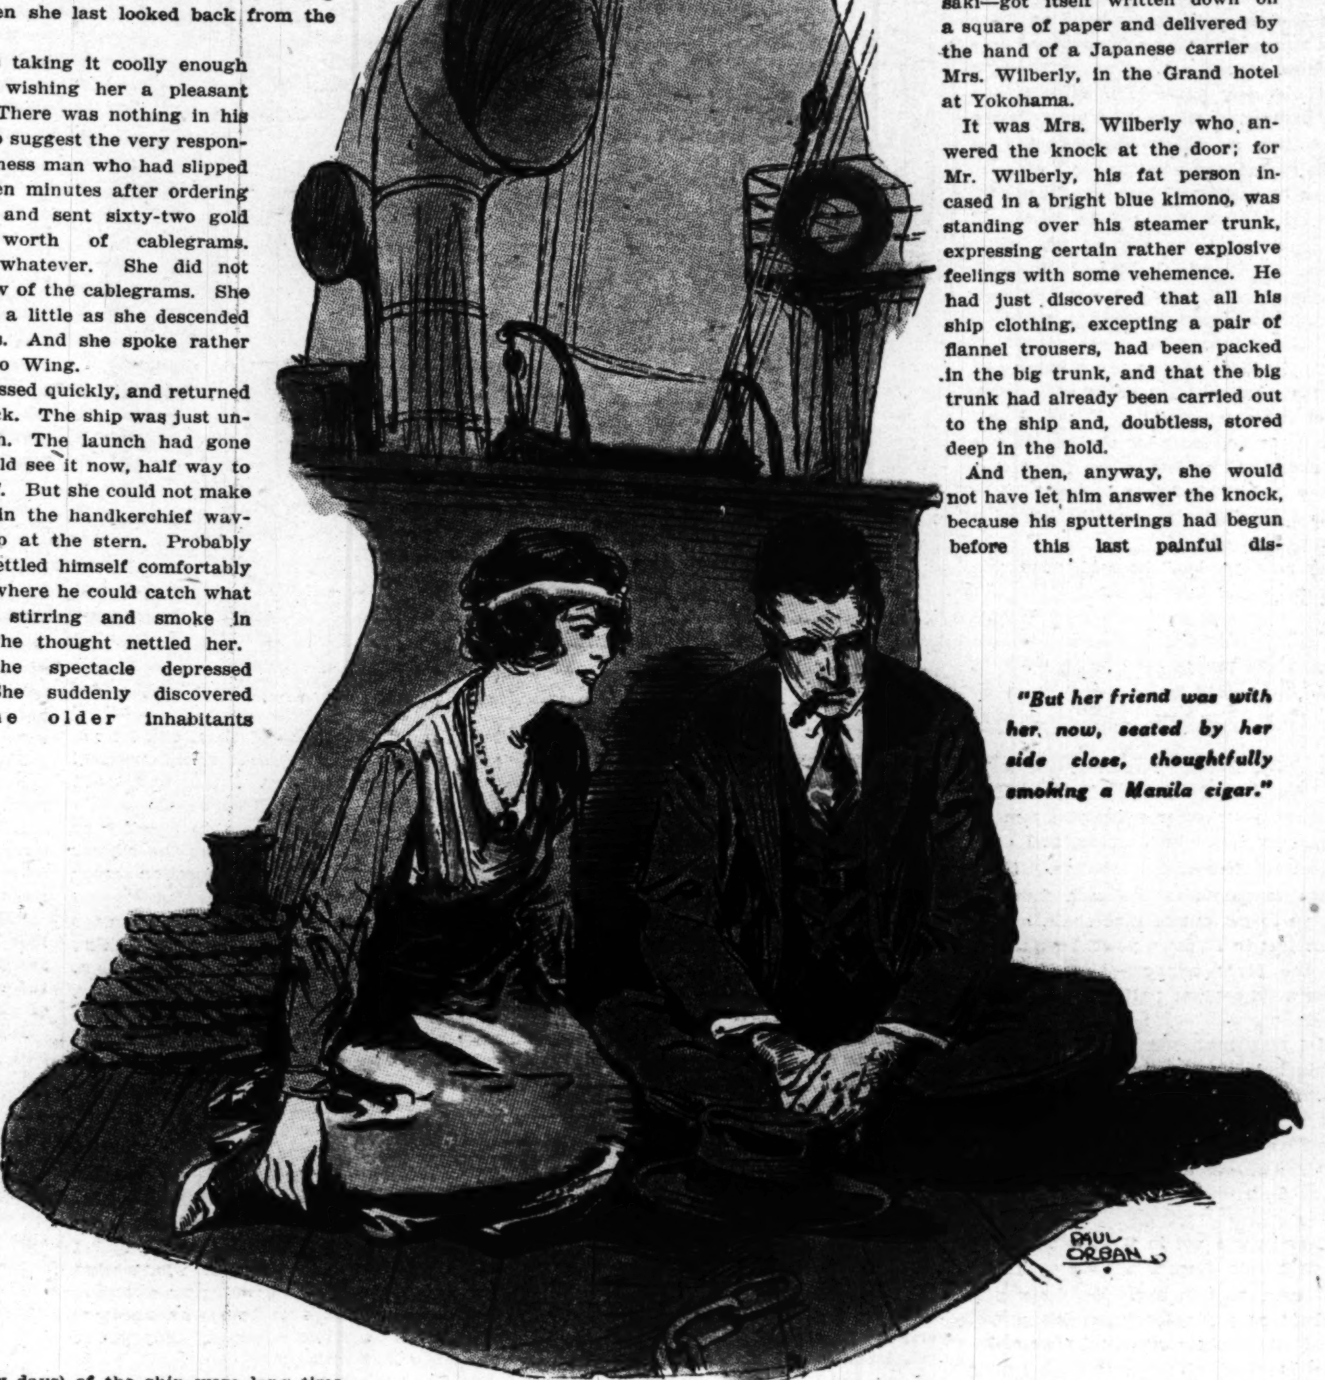
She rounded the corner of the wireless office, and came upon the open space behind it. A sailor person was chalking out a shuffleboard pattern on the deck. There was no one else back here.

Or was there? Yes—glancing around the corner, she saw the end of a steamer chair and a pair of feet—a man's feet, in fresh white canvas shoes. Moving a step farther, she saw that the feet were attached to a pair of long legs. She took another step.

Then, for one brief instant, her breath left her. She stood motionless and speechless, and a little pale.

Slowly the color returned to her cheeks, and deepened. Her eyes lighted with relief that ran on into something not unlike sheer happiness. For the canvas shoes and the long legs, encased in fresh white, neatly pressed duck, were the peculiar and personal property of one Henry Carpenter. He had a book in his lap. He wore a white coat of military cut, with high collar that was buttoned in front with lumps of silver bearing the stamp of Siamese legal tender. And a white cotton hat was on his head.

She had never seen anything quite so comfortable, quite so solid—never anything that looked so good—as this sight.



"But her friend was with her, now, seated by her side close, thoughtfully smoking a Manila cigar."

It seemed to her that she must control herself. It simply would not do to become all excited this way. What would he think? And what on earth was she to think herself! She was caught in the wild impulse to talk eagerly about every impersonal subject on earth, anything that would cover her confusion. But what she really did was to stand quite motionless and say nothing at all.

Slowly he became aware of her presence. Then he rose.

"Surprised?" he asked, smiling.

"Well—naturally!" said she.

"I know. I didn't mean to stage manage it like this." His face sobered. "I'll spare you the explanations, Edith. It's only that, on thinking it over, I realized that I had refused to be your friend. That wouldn't do, of course. So I'm going on to Singapore. And the easiest way to do it seemed to be to quit talking and just go. So, if you like, we'll consider the necessary little scene as having occurred. . . . Want to sit here with me, or would you rather walk by yourself?"

"I think," said she, "that I'll—sit down."

Her thoughts were still racing. She wondered if she would ever again be able to bring them under control. She was aware that he was speaking—pausing—speaking. Now she was flushing again. This was dreadful. She must do something—at least say something.

He paused again. The pause ran on into a silence. No subject that her ungoverned thoughts touched on seemed germane.

Finally, in despair, she looked straight at him—color high, eyes dancing, obviously a very young, very beautiful, very confused person.

"Listen!" she said breathlessly. "I meant to ask you—what on earth is cutch anyway?"

It was three days later that a message—flying by wireless to Singapore and by cable through Hongkong, Shanghai, and Nagasaki—got itself written down on a square of paper and delivered by the hand of a Japanese carrier to Mrs. Wilberly, in the Grand hotel at Yokohama.

It was Mrs. Wilberly who answered the knock at the door; for Mr. Wilberly, his fat person incased in a bright blue kimono, was standing over his steamer trunk, expressing certain rather explosive feelings with some vehemence. He had just discovered that all his ship clothing, excepting a pair of flannel trousers, had been packed in the big trunk, and that the big trunk had already been carried out to the ship and, doubtless, stored deep in the hold.

And then, anyway, she would not have let him answer the knock, because his sputterings had begun before this last painful discovery. She had said, as she so often did, that his mistake had lain in his failure to take the very next ship out of Shanghai after Edith Austin, and catch her.

And he had said that you couldn't spot a German mail ship a three day handicap and catch up with her this side of Naples, Italy. Not unless you had a faster boat. Which you didn't have. That, in short, as a practical business man, he knew the thing couldn't be done. And that she knew it, too.

"Well, what is it?" said he now, as she tore open the envelope.

She did not reply. Instead, she sank down on the nearest chair and looked at him with a blank face.

"Well?" said he. "Well? Well?"

Mrs. Wilberly swallowed. "Frank," she got out, "Edith marries Henry Carpenter tomorrow at Singapore!"

Mr. Wilberly sat right down on the sharp side of the steamer trunk. For a moment his face worked.

"Thank God!" he said.

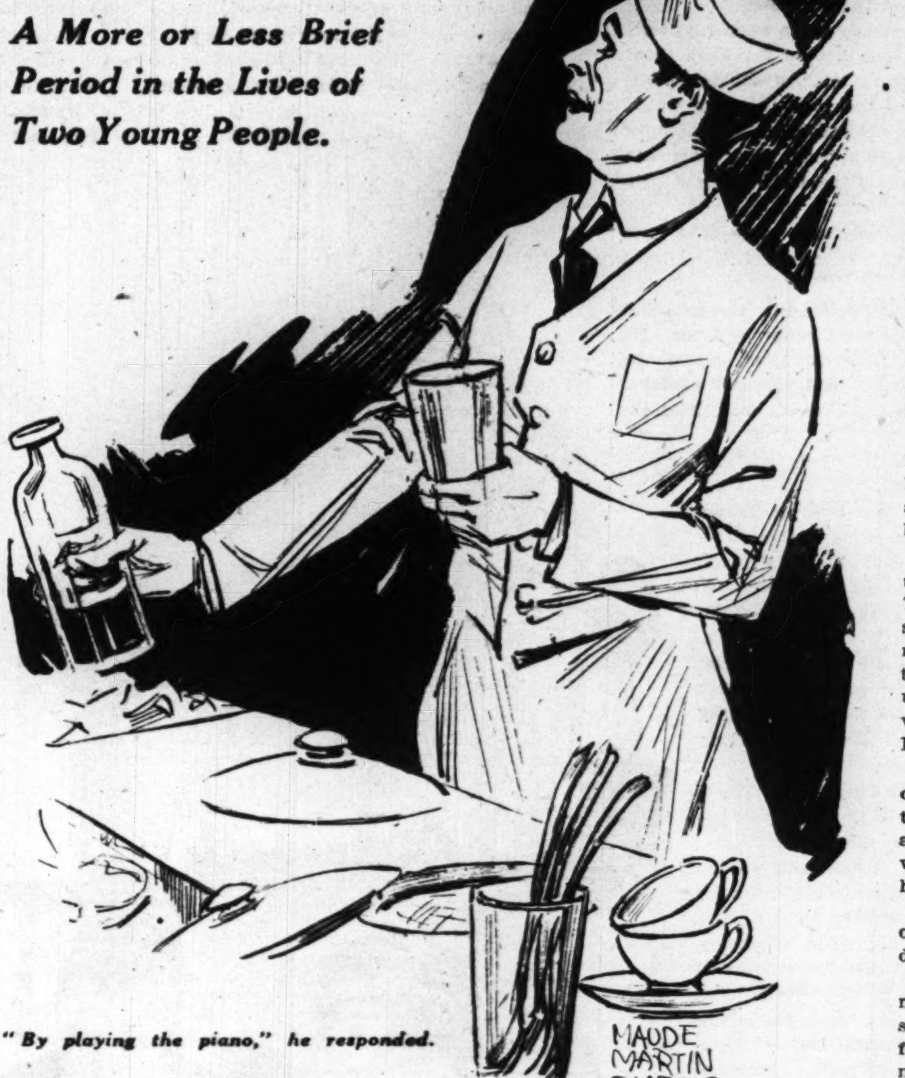
A Month of Sundaes

by Berton Braley



"By playing the piano," he responded.

A More or Less Brief Period in the Lives of Two Young People.

"MAPLE NUT SUNDAE" Aileen Norton ordered as she seated herself on one of the high chairs which the National Drug company provided for soda fountain patrons.

The soda slinger, who was bending over to wash some glasses, glanced up.

"Are you provided with the passport issued by the bursar?" he asked with a smile, placing a washed glass under the spigot, while with his left hand he put another glass where it would be handy. When the first glass was filled he shoved it swiftly to the patron who had asked for water, and brought back with the same hand an emptied ice cream dish which he dropped into the washing pan.

"I don't exactly follow you," Miss Norton replied, answering the young man's smile with another, as every human being at whom he smiled was wont to do; "what do you mean by 'passport from the bursar'?"

"I mean, 'got a check?'" he explained. "This is one of these pay as you enter fountains, you know. I don't think much of the system, but who am I, an humble cog in the machinery, to tamper with the works? You will have to have a check. But meantime I will be mixing you a maple nut sundae that shall make the chef of the gods blush for his ambrosia."

Aileen descended from her chair to get the needed check and on her return found that a fat man had climbed into her seat. Just then the soda slinger noticed the intrusion of the corpulent one.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "but this young woman had that chair."

"Why didn't she stay in it?" grumbled the patron.

"Because she had to get a check."

"Well, she should have had a check in the first place. I'm here. First come, first served."

"Very good, Eddie," remarked the soda slinger, "but I'm the judge of who's first. You can get your order when you remove your generous hulk—bulk, mass, and density from that chair and not before. So if you came to patronize the soda fountain you'll have to get out of that chair, and if you came just to sit down you'll have to get out of the chair anyhow—because it is meant for soda counter patrons. Suit yourself."

The fat man muttered things and grew very pink, but gave up the chair and Miss Norton resumed it.

."Isn't it awful the persons one meets in the city?" queried the soda slinger casually. "The crowds are so mixed."

The fat man choked on his mint phosphate.

Miss Norton was not in the habit of conversing with soda slingers, but she could not help listening to this one. He flung gay quips about as a juggler tosses his props, he jollied the cashier across the aisle, he discussed baseball with the bronzed young chap who sat next to Miss Norton, he commented to Miss Norton upon the weather in an engaging way and managed to give her a laughing compliment into the bargain, and all the time his hands were doing marvelous things with glasses, ice cream cups, spigots, sirups, bottles, malted milk mixtures, ice, fruit, jars, and phosphate flasks.

Miss Norton could not restrain her enthusiasm. When she had finished her sundae she still sat watching him fascinatedly and at last she said:

"Mr. Soda Man, you are certainly a wiz. How did you learn to handle things so wonderfully?"

"By playing the piano," he responded with his infectious grin. "It makes the hands strong, the muscles supple, it teaches you certainty of touch and a sort of sangfroid, nonchalance, and aplomb which one can get in no other way. Try it for stiffness of the knees, rheumatism, sleepiness, and general lassitude."

"Don't be so facetious," said Miss Norton. "Tell me seriously, how did you grow so expert?"

"Why," answered the soda slinger, "I've been reading some of this efficiency dope on lost motion and so forth and when I started in to pull the spigots I just naturally applied it. Any job that's worth holding at all is worth studying a bit. Besides, being just naturally lazy it struck me that the less work I made of the job the better."

"You seem to be rather—er—above the average behind the counter," suggested Miss Norton.

"O, say not so," he retorted with deliberate affectation. "I just know you're one of these here smooth city gells who goes around flattering us poor country boys until we spends all our money for clothes and cigars and falls behind with our Y. M. C. A. dues."

Miss Norton flushed pink with sudden anger, and then realizing the tone of patronage that had been in her voice she flushed pinker with exasperation at herself for that attitude. And, still pink, she gave up her chair to the girl behind her and left the store.

But she came back the next evening, not wholly because she found the sundaes superior.

Business, at the hour she chose, was not rushing, and the soda slinger, washing glasses, looked up as she passed him the pink check, and greeted her with a broad grin.

"Ah," he said, "our oasis of comfort and coolth tempts you again from the hot sands outside. We take great pleasure in assuaging the thirst of the weary traveler after the long ride with the caravan. Will you have a drink sent to your camel, or—but no, I take it your camel still has three days to go ere liquid refreshment becomes desirable in his eyes.

"Shall it be a maple nut sundae that cools your fevered brow—laves your parched lips, I mean—or shall I brew you a long singing drink flavored with all the sirups of the sweet south and the spices of the slumbrous east, made fair and seemly to the eyes with frosted glass and whipped cream and gratefully chill to the lips with ice cracked fine as purest snow. Shall it be—"

"A maple nut sundae, please," said Miss Norton, demurely, "with whipped cream on top."

"'Tis well," replied the sprightly youth, "thought I wot that I would you had wotted how blithesomely I was talking on and on into the infinite vistas of time, and let me spring some more of that fluent poetical phrasing I was emitting. I talk well, don't you think so?"

"You ought to, you seem to practice so much," Miss Norton replied, as the slinger slid a wonderfully wrought concoction across the marble to her.

"Surely you do not intimate that I am too loquacious," deplored the mixer. "Nothing can be crueler and more unjust than that, unless you were to accuse me of flippancy, freshness, and familiarity. I, who am mute as a mewt, bashful as a bivalve, who preserve a silence as of the tomb until I am properly introduced to a young lady, and then proceed to intimacy only after seven years of calling once a week and talking to the enchanting damsel through the speaking tube in the lower hall."

Miss Norton laughed.

"O, what's the use?" she inquired. "You have a positive gift for familiarity, and I like it. Talk to me some more. That's what I really come for. I'm studying elocution and how to be at ease before an audience and you are a noble example. Only you're not efficient in speech."

"And why is this thus?" inquired the soda slinger, with a look of thrilled and passionate interest that made it very difficult for Miss Norton to keep her face straight.

"Because," she explained, "while in doing your work you make one motion do the work of two, in your talk you let four words do the work of one."

"Ah," said he, "but consider how intrinsically beautiful those three extra words are. How they lend color, life, character, richness to the plain weave of unembellished speech. Your criticism is not based upon right values. You are as one who would say—'Ah, that picture is very beautiful, but it spoils the canvas for a tent.' Dear lady, it was not intended for a tent.

"Anyway," and his tone changed, "there's an awful lot of bunk about efficiency. Enough of it is plenty. But efficiency men don't see that. Maybe if they had a sense of humor they would. Here's what I mean—their dope is all right, but they forget to make allowances for human nature. For example, take the soda check business. Some efficiency man fixed that up. He saw that now and then a soda slinger gave one of his friends a glass or short checked him. And he saw that about one out of five hundred people walked away without paying their bill. And he said, 'My gawd, think of the loss and the waste.' So he put in a system that just revels in checks and balances, a system that treats everybody who wants to buy a soda as a crook, that makes you go back and get a new check if you change your mind, and that generally exasperates the customer a dollar's worth for every cent it saves the store. Believe me, if I had the power I would cut out this soda check stuff and I'd advertise in every paper in the burg:

"'Come to the National Drug store for your soda—pay after you've got it.' And then they'd be five deep around the counter all the time instead of just two deep in rush hours.

"But the big boss can't see it that way—he's been listening to efficiency men until he thinks a soda check was created the day after Eve and that St. Peter demands 'em before you can enter heaven."

He paused and chuckled gaily. "But after all, I should toss on a bed of pain for it. They're not my stores. And permit me to say, my dear Miss—well never mind—permit me to say in this connection, that although pulchritude at this fountain is not unusual, unusual pulchritude like yours is very unusual. It is one of the easiest things I know to look upon you."

"O, Mr. 'Who Cares'—" Miss Norton came back at him, "I'm sure you're one of those bold men who steal young girls' hearts away with their smooth talk and swell city ways." And with that she got down from her chair and departed.

But she found herself forming the habit of visiting this particular fountain almost daily.

"A most amusing and original young man," she told herself. "He surely is worth study just as a human document. His slangy freshness, his easy, yet engaging, familiarity make him delightfully unexpected and entertaining. Of course, he's scarcely my kind—but I wish some of the boys I knew had some of his ginger."

She discovered, the third time she sat across the counter from him, that he had a most enticing lock of hair that didn't ever stay in place. And about the fourth time she found that her fingers were itching to smooth down that lock. And the sixth time she couldn't avoid speaking about it.

"Here's a drug store crammed full of hair brushes and combs and things," she remarked, "and yet there's a lock of hair on the crown of your head that is always out of place."

His hand went up to the offending curl and patted it lightly. "Do you know," he said in a high falsetto voice, "I've tried cement and I've tried glue and I've tried wall paper paste and I've tried white of egg, but I simply can't do a thing with it. It's horribly annoying, horribly. But there's one consolation, it does give me a hint of distinction, a touch of individuality, don't you think? And it is so necessary in these days to have a style all one's own."

Miss Norton didn't take this with her usual tolerance. She had spoken lightly herself, but she had half expected to be taken seriously. Just why she wanted him to be serious about that lock of hair she didn't know. Psychologists and psycho-analysts would probably have told her it was because her subconscious self was rapidly taking a distinctly serious interest in the soda slinger, but she would have pooh-poohed the learned doctors who told her so.

It wasn't until the evening that Miss Norton approached the fountain with her neat pink check all ready and found the fluent mixer missing that she began to realize things that had been happening to her.

A strange face met her gaze across the counter and strange hands—clumsy, inept hands, she thought—compared to his, mixed her strawberry sundae. It wasn't maple nut sundae this time because—well, because she didn't want any one but him to mix a maple nut sundae for her. And by the same token Miss Norton, with a queer but not unpleasant shock, realized that she hadn't been coming to this fountain merely because of the quality of the soda or the quaint but practical philosophy of the mixer.

She ate her sundae listlessly. It seemed insipid and tasteless. She pondered whether she would ask the present mixer what had become of the other one and decided against it. Then she decided for it. Then she didn't know. And when she started to ask him she became suddenly conscious of some one slipping into the chair next hers and found, on turning, that it was the soda slinger—in a surprisingly well fitting summer suit of mohair, a rakish panama, and a Japanese silk shirt of soft gray.

"My night off," he observed explanatorily, "but I blew down here thinking you might look in." He paused, took her purse from her, and in a matter of course way dropped a 10 cent piece in it. Then he tossed the other soda mixer his own 10 cent check.

"This is on me," he explained, "but on account of this fool soda check system I couldn't do it without returning your money. Another argument for abolishing it. It affords me great pleasure to be able for the first time to act the host without cost to yourself."

Miss Norton murmured some sort of inarticulate protest, to which he paid no attention. Her unfinished sundae became magically desirable and she attacked it with interest, while the off duty mixer absorbed a grape highball.

And when they finished Mr. "Who Cares" rose and said: "If you haven't anything particular on for this evening I'd like to take you up the river on the Mandalay. It's a bully boat and there's dancing aboard. I suttinly does love to dance."

Miss Norton's first impulse was to say yes. Her second was to say no. For the second impulse brought to mind the fact that many of her friends might be on the boat, that they would come to get dances and be introduced, and that they might recognize her escort as the soda slinger at the National's Blank street store—a good looking, well knit, graceful, nattily dressed slinger, with a mobile mouth that flexed in an engaging smile, a tongue that was fluent and witty and eyes that twinkled and glowed, but a soda slinger none the less. And her third impulse was one of such impatience with her own snobbishness that she forgot all the conventions which forbade her accepting the young man's invitation and said, "Sure, I'll go."

Thus, after only a week or so of the acquaintance all the home magazines quite properly warn young ladies against, Aileen Norton danced aboard the Mandalay with Teddy Gould, the soda slinger, and sat in the shadows of the deck with Teddy Gould and began calling Teddy Gould the soda slinger by his first name within the first hour aboard the boat, and let him hold her hand—this was the fault of a gorgeous moon—and had a most reprehensibly good time.

And when Teddy finally persuaded her to let him take her home in a taxi she entered it in some fear and trembling, expecting that he would attempt to make love to her as all such acquaintances do—in the stories. And when he didn't do anything more than squeeze her hand a few times and tell her, not fluently, but rather bashfully, what a wonderful time he had had, she was immensely relieved, greatly pleased at his genuine respect—and just a wee bit disappointed.

For that's a queer fact about girls; when they are armed to resist and resent love making, when it might make them quite sincerely and furiously angry if attempted; they're apt to feel that the evening has been just a little incomplete when the young man doesn't even essay it.

There was a shade of difference in the way these two met when next Aileen Norton sat across the marble counter from the soda slinger. For some reason Aileen blushed when Gould greeted her, and for the same reason he mixed her a sundae a trifle less swiftly and expertly than usual and had nothing to say while he did it. It was Miss Norton—it is almost always the girl—who first recovered.

"Tetanus," she said, "is a terrible thing. I knew a girl who had it, once, and she died of apoplexy."

The soda mixer looked interested and curious, but still said nothing.

"You see," explained Miss Norton, "she couldn't talk on account of the tetanus, and she died of apoplexy because she couldn't talk."

Gould seemed engrossed in the washing of glasses and did not glance up as he replied:

"One of my earliest and most sacred memories is of that day when I lay in my humble little cradle, shaking my rattle thoughtfully, and heard my grandfather laugh himself almost sick over that same remark which his father made to him."

He stood the clean glasses in their proper places and grinned his old grin at Miss Norton.

"To put the facts in the case as briefly, succinctly, and tersely as possible, my lack of ready quips, quirks, and gay badinage this morning is due to a combination of rapture at your presence, overwhelming realization of your heart rending, loveliness, and [illegible] memories of a golden evening of pure joy."

"A kaleidoscopic recollection, evidently," commented Miss Norton. "You sound as though you had been at a futurist art exhibit."

"You know where I was," Gould replied, "and I don't object at all to letting you in on one of the innermost secrets of my heart, which is that I shall be doggedly plodding through a weariness of days until I may have the inestimable privilege of taking you somewhere again."

Here an influx of customers with their pink soda checks interrupted the conversation for a few minutes, and Miss Norton watched with interested eyes—for his skill was always a new delight to her—how the soda slinger waited on two or three people at once, drawing fizzy things from the fountain, juggling with sirups and ice cream, reaching under the counter for paper wrapped sandwiches, and attending to the malted milk buzzer, all swiftly, effortlessly, and with competent serenity.

And when he glanced her way with a smile in his eyes she felt a pleasant warmth about her heart in spite of the sundae whose chilled sweetness was sliding down her throat.

"I don't like to flatter you," Miss Norton said, when he had a moment to spare, "but you certainly are John E. Ficiency around a soda fountain. And the way you send folks back smiling to the cashier for another check amounts to diplomatic genius."

"Hist," he said, "not so loud. You have discovered me disguise. I am not what I seem, a humble soda slinger slinging soda swiftly and soundlessly over a shining slab, I am the secret secretary of the Siamese embassy, sleuthing sinuously on the trail of hidden diplomatic mysteries that, when disclosed, will shake Christendom, heathendom, Mohammeddom, and deafanddumb. And since that makes my social position secure, I need have no further hesitation in asking you to go with me tomorrow afternoon to the Dishwashers' and Boilermakers' Thé Dansant, hat check 25 cents, and gentlemen will kindly remove their cigars while dancing."

Miss Norton responded to his grin with a faint smile, and inquired:

"Are you really asking me to a dancing tea or are you merely jollying?"

"I wish I could say that I am asking you to a tea," said the soda clerk, "but at Thé Dansant time I shall be here, mingling many flavors into drinks and digestion destroyers, and mitigating the severity of the soda check rules by my pleasing speech and engaging personality. The check business is supposed to lighten our work—but my thumbs get sore tearing up the slips and putting them in the ballot box."

"Very well, then," Miss Norton said, on an impulse, "if you won't invite me to a Thé Dansant I'll invite you to a regular party. It's a ball at Mrs. Arnold Fitzgerald's house next week Friday and each of the girls is to bring her own choice of a man. I'm going to bring a new one—you, if you'll come."

Then she flushed red under the look of mingled surprise, consternation, and delight he shot at her.

"At Mrs. Fitzgerald's?" he repeated. "O, I say, I wouldn't do in that sort of a crowd. I can get past the gate at the Grand Central palace without being arrested as a gunman, but if the Fitzgeralds are the class you travel in—cut me out of your itinerary, little lady. It would take me fifteen minutes to queer myself and you with that kind of bunch. Just forget you ever knew me, sister, except the other side of the counter. I wouldn't have had the supreme nerve to take you out last night if I'd known you weren't just an ordinary everyday girl such as I've always known."

It was not a warm afternoon and the patrons at the counter had ebbed away. The other soda slinger was at the further end of the fountain and if he saw Miss Norton's hand reach across and give Gould's a swift pat he gave no sign.

"Nix on the humble stuff, kid," she said. "I'm no dollar princess. And believe me, I've never yet been in the crowd where anybody as keen and wise as you didn't get by. Have you a dress suit?"

The clerk nodded.

"I used to be some Beau Brummel in my own home town," he explained.

"Then put it on Friday night and come call for me at 9 o'clock and if you dare to fail me, or to act scared and 'hickey' just because you're going to meet a lot of society dames, I'll never speak to you again."

She hopped down from the seat and almost ran out. But her drop into the slangiest of slang and her tone had been a tonic to Gould. His natural assurance came back so completely that when quitting time came he went to the bar of the Ritz and pretended he was a millionaire.

. . . .

"But who is this young man you are inviting tonight?" demanded Aileen's mother, as she helped her daughter into a wonderful creation of pale blue chiffon. "I've heard of lots of Goulds, but not of him."

"He's no relation to George or Howard," her daughter informed her, with a smile, "though he has a good deal to do with handling checks."

She thought of Teddy stuffing the glass box full of pink slips and inwardly chuckled.

"Works in a bank, I suppose," the mother sniffed. "A twelve dollar a week clerk. You do insist on traveling around with the most impecunious——"

"No, mother, he's not a bank clerk," her daughter corrected her, "he's a very active operator in glass and silver, and he handles other things, too. And he belongs to a very old family," Miss Norton added—speaking truthfully, for the human family is very old.

In this way Mrs. Norton, much mollified, was led to build up for Teddy Gould an ancestry and financial importance commensurate with what she thought any suitor of her daughter should possess. That her daughter didn't dissipate the impression or smudge the picture is only natural.

Teddy Gould's outward semblance was not damaging to Mrs. Norton's illusion. He looked well in his evening clothes and he had the manner of one accustomed to them. As he was—for he had served on many a floor committee in the lively little town of his origin.

"If Aileen hadn't told me she had no sisters I'd refuse to believe you were her mother," was Teddy's first remark upon meeting Mrs. Norton, and that lady, who was a perfect forty-six and knew very well youth had long departed from her, nevertheless bridled at the welcome flattery. For it is pleasant to be accused of youth even when you know the indictment is faulty.

With this propitious start Teddy Gould proceeded through an evening of success. He danced beautifully, and he had the subtle wisdom not to give all his attention to the debutantes and Aileen. When Mrs. Norton introduced him to the dowagers he made it a point to "feed them the debutante stuff, too," as he told Aileen.

"And they fall for it," he chuckled. "Every one of them I've met I've slipped compliments on their gowns and told them how young they looked and asked the very fat ones to dance, and told them to quit flirting with other men across the way and pay entire attention to me—and, honest, I never knew before that the chatter I pass across the counter goes so good in the ballroom.

"Also," he said, "I never knew before how difficult it is to look away from you. Whenever I've lost sight of you tonight something or other happened to the lights—they didn't work right and the place seemed sort of gray and dreary. I always did fancy your appearance," he went on, "in anything you happened to wear down to the drug store, but when you doll up in pieces of blue sky touched all over with star dust, like you are tonight, I lose every bit of my cool, calm, and critical poise, and forget I'm only a soda clerk and—"

"And?" Miss Norton breathed, leaning forward. They were in a little niche apart from the ballroom and quite out of sight of any one.

"And—" he began, his arms reaching out for her, "and—finish this one-step with you," he completed the sentence, as she swayed into his arms and found herself drawn out to the ballroom floor.

But she was not going to let Gould away from the subject that easily.

"I don't believe you care a bit," she averred, as they danced; "if you did you wouldn't be so—so afraid of me."

Then she gasped because of the sudden tightening of his arm about her. And for the first time she realized that this young man was not only slender, lithe, and efficient in his movements, but that his shoulders bulked big under his sleeves and his hands were sinewy for all their sensitiveness and grace.

"I am afraid of you," he said, softly; "I'm afraid of you because you're so sweet and lovely and wonderful. I'm afraid that I'll make love to you—and a clerk at a soda fountain who gets eighteen dollars a week hasn't any business making love to a girl who wears dresses like the one you have on," he finished, practically.

"Not even," she whispered, "if she wants him to? I know I'm acting in a very bold, unrefined, and unladylike manner," she concluded, "but I don't care. I want to hear the rest of what you started to say in the alcove."

Perhaps she would have heard the rest of it, only that the music stopped when they were in front of Mrs. Norton's chair, and that estimable lady seized Mr. Gould by the arm and said:

"Here, father, is the young man I've been talking about. Mr. Gould, this is Mr. Norton."

Teddy did not know that he had been the subject of a dissertation upon the part of Mrs. Norton on the old proverb that "blood will tell." He could not know that she had been pointing out to her husband how only birth and breeding could produce a young man so possessed of wit, manner, poise, and courteous deference to his elders as Mr. Gould. So, when the head of the Norton family gazed at him very sharply as they shook hands it had no special significance to him. He thought probably Mr. Norton always looked at people like that. But when the older man asked:

"Haven't I seen you before somewhere?" Teddy was nonplussed for a second. Then nodded. "Perhaps, at the Ritz; I sometimes stop in at the bar there."

Mr. Norton snorted. He was not a society leader, he hadn't much patience with his wife for wanting to be one. He had come to the ball because she insisted he must look in for a time, and he wanted more than anything else to go home and to bed.

"Naw," he said, "not at the Ritz. Never waste my time there. Too busy. I've seen you somewhere else," he glanced over the soda slinger again. "Lunch counter?" he mumbled to himself. "No. Restaurant? No. Soda fountain—that's it! You mix sodas in one of the National drug stores, don't you? Store on Blank street? Yep, I remember. Darn good mixer, too. How are yuh?"

"Blood and breeding!" he snapped at his wife. "Huh! Prize exhibit at your show ain't a thoroughbred, but an outside entry."

"A soda clerk!" shrieked Mrs. Norton; "one of those creatures who stand behind a counter in a white apron—and my daughter—O heavens!"

"What's that about your daughter? She soft on this young fellow? Well, that won't do. Won't do," the choleric old gentleman exclaimed. "Soda clerks don't make enough money. We pay 'em as well as anybody, but—can't be done," he finished.

"Just a minute," said Teddy Gould. "Let's not get all het up and excited and worried about things until we find out where we are at. And one of the first means of discovering that is for me to ask you," he turned to the older man, "what have you to do with the National stores?"

"I own most of 'em, that's all, that's all," said the head of the house of Norton.

"I didn't know you were that Norton," said Teddy Gould; "your daughter never told me. And I must have been too busy the day you noticed me to notice you. But I'm darn glad to meet you, Mr. Norton, and if you've got about fifteen minutes time I have a business proposition to make to you. It has to do with the National drug stores and it'll be worth your while to listen to it. If your wife and daughter will excuse us," he gently disengaged the arm Aileen was loyally clinging to, "let's go into the library and talk it over."

And, as though certain of the acceptance of his invitation he turned and walked toward the library. After a second's hesitation A. N. Norton, the millionaire owner of the National drug stores, with a grim and appreciative smile, followed him.

. . . .

"Now," said Teddy Gould, half an hour afterwards, as he joined Miss Aileen Norton again, "if you'll come into the alcove I'll finish what I started to say to you."

And though her mother protested, Aileen came, to have Teddy, after a quick glance about the alcove and a peek around the corner into the ballroom, take her in his arms and kiss her. Also to have Teddy whisper into her ear over and over again, "I love you, I love you, I love you."

And it was some minutes before she was sane enough to ask:

"But what happened? Is it all right? What did you say to father?"

"Father is a business man," said Teddy, "and business, though you may not think it, is my middle name. I sat father down and handed him a large black cigar out of the host's supply, and then I told father a lot of things that the efficiency experts don't know. I proved to father that his soda check system saved him five thousand dollars a year in one way and lost him fifty thousand in good will and satisfaction of his patrons. I told him how I could save him another five or ten thousand by teaching his soda clerks how to use their hands and heads together. And then he began asking me questions about the fountain and how it was built and that sort of stuff—and pretty quick I had him gasping for air. Because soda fountains are where I live, Aileen dear. And strange as it may seem, I love 'em. I like to pull the spigots and turn the faucets, I like to mix drinks and decoctions that send the tired business man forth saved from apoplexy. It's fun—and I've played and worked around soda fountains until I know 'em all from plain aqua tap to the onyx chandeliers. I told him as much as I could in a reasonable space of time and promised him I could improve his equipment 15 per cent, too, if he'd give me a crack at it."

"And he's going to?" said the girl, happily.

"Beginning Monday," announced Teddy Gould, "I'm to be soda slinger in chief and high commander of the white aproned brigade for the National Drug company, salary fifty per to begin with, and after three months I get a share in the savings I effect.

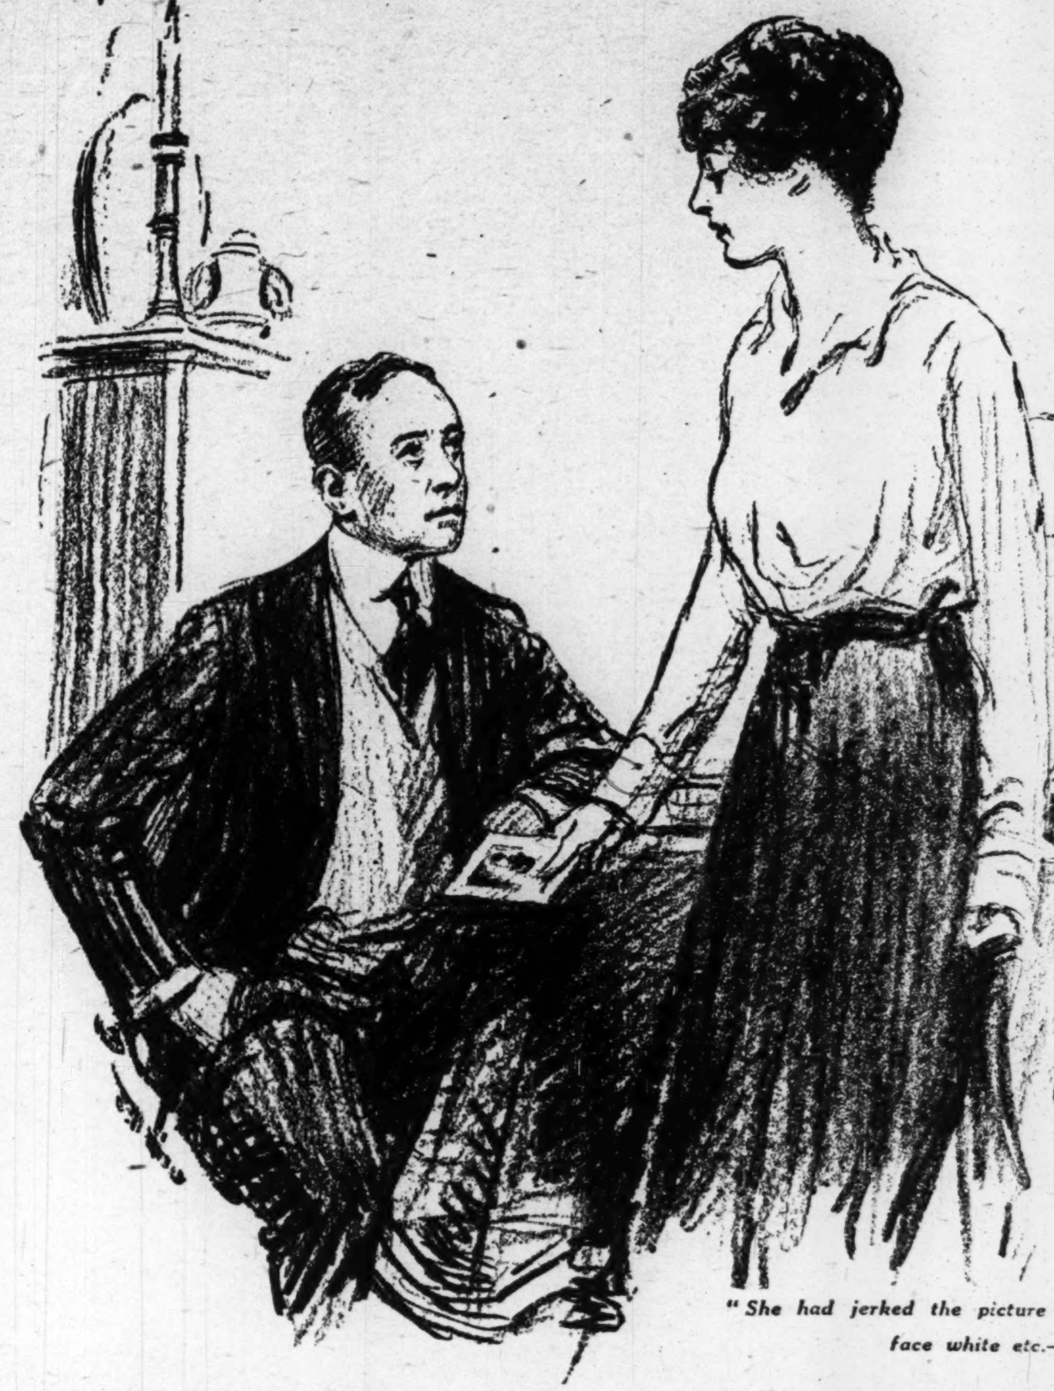
"And thus happily ends the chapter," continued Teddy Gould, hugging Aileen ecstatically, "the heroine in the hero's arms, the hero on the road to fortune and fame, father ready to bless them both, and mother preparing to get ready to bless them, also; this all within the short space, time, period, or era, of a trifle over four weeks, thirty days, or—"

"A month of sundaes," Miss Norton finished for him.

THE THING THAT HADN'T FADED

by ONEY FRED SWEET

Time Had Brought Changes, Yet There Was One Thing——



"She had jerked the picture from his hand, her face white etc.——"

THEY had looked forward to Sunday and the chance to take lunch and stay all day in the park. For weeks it had seemed as if the backward spring, in its efforts to defeat growing things, had been in league with tornadoes and earthquakes and war to make the world pay penance for its ways. But now a real summer Sunday had come, the foliage of the park almost stifling with its perfume and delicate hothouse freshness, due to a Saturday night thunderstorm.

Ed McMillan was trying to teach the baby how to walk, and his wife was calling to the 3 year old girl to be careful about getting too near the water of the lagoon. It was hours since they had packed their lunch and dressed the children and locked the doors and hurried away from home. The afternoon sun, given a high blue sky at last, was pinking necks and blurring eyes and shining noses and causing clothing to feel sticky. When the breeze came just right it carried with it the music of a pavilioned band—the cornets prominent.

"How many times do I have to tell you to keep away from that water, Ella?" Mrs. McMillan was cautioning. "Look at your dress that was white this morning. Have I got to——" And then Mrs. McMillan had stopped short.

Ed glanced up from the baby's walking attempts. A canoe had silently emerged from around a clump of overhanging trees. In one end was a girl wearing a yellow coat. Handling the paddles was a youth in sailor uniform.

Ed saw that the boy had evidently but recently enlisted. He could not have been more than 19. He wore the white cap, with its turned up sides, jauntily. He was the replica of the youth in the uniform of Uncle Sam on the magazine pages nowadays advertising razors and fountain pens.

And then, as the canoe glided nearer, Ed McMillan's attention to its occupants was shifted toward his wife.

Something had come over her!

Three year old Ella, censorship removed, was paddling in the warmed waters of the lagoon. Ed McMillan, noticing the queer expression that had come into his wife's face, let the baby wabble free from his grasp and stumble. The woman's eyes were wistful as she looked toward the canoe. The man waited for her to turn toward him. When she did so their eyes met just for the instant, and then she looked toward the ground as she bit her lower lip.

Registration day had brought Ed McMillan to the sudden conclusion—he was getting old. The government had asked for men under 31—unmarried men, men with the dash and fire of youth in them, men who could adjust themselves, men who had not grown settled and flabby and started to go back. And up until that sudden realization no one could have told him that he was not still a kid in muscles and "pep" and spirit. Time had gone so fast with the babies being born and the job to hang on to and the problems of responsibility to meet.

He looked again at the youth in the canoe. The youth was talking to the girl in the yellow coat, but what he was saying escaped Ed McMillan. They were inconsequential words, so far as outsiders were concerned. A sudden breeze wafted the band music plainer. The band was playing a selection that had in it the glory of a march—excitement, thrill, the fullness of life. And then the canoe, with its girl in the yellow coat and its youth who looked like the model for an enlistment poster, drifted away.

Ed McMillan reached for the baby. "Tum on, 'et's try adain," he coaxed, but his voice was husky and the effort at enthusiasm hollow. "Let's go home," he finished.

There was a wait for the street car, the crowding to get on with the children and the baby cart, the stops, and the shovings, and the strain of the long ride home. The baby cried in its father's arms, and twice Mrs. McMillan had to slap Ella's hand for some sort of disobedience.

The flat had taken on the atmosphere of having been vacated for the day. It seemed so stuffy after the out of doors. The things about it in which Ed McMillan had taken so much pride leered commonplace. Mrs. McMillan was in another room trying to get the baby to sleep, always a tiresome and drawn out task. The day away from the grind of the office was about over. Ed McMillan caught a glimpse of himself in the built-in buffet mirror. He leaned down to inspect the vision closely and critically.

He knew he had been getting bald, but he wasn't aware his hair was quite so thin on top. He had intended going to the dentist, but the kids had needed so many things not counted on. And the lack luster to his eyes and the lines about his mouth—they had come partly from a salary that hadn't advanced and the prices of necessities that had.

Then he recalled the youth in the canoe. No wonder his wife had made the quick comparison. No wonder she had shifted her gaze. No wonder she had had little to say all the way home. He couldn't blame her. No wonder she had suddenly realized what a humdrum, drab, and unromantic nothing her husband was. And up until just lately he had kidded himself into thinking that he was just as young and dashing and up to the minute as the day they had first met.

He was rummaging among some old photographs in a basket on the table when she came tiptoeing back from putting the baby to sleep. He had come across a faded snap shot that showed the two of them out with "the gang," taken at a time when they had first started to go together and years before he had saved enough to marry. Had the fellows actually had their hair cut that way in those days? And the shape of that collar!—at that time he had thought it "a bear." And the cut of that vest and the point to those shoes! And yesterday—just yesterday it was—he had been youth and "class." He started to laugh. He——

She had jerked the picture from his hand, her face white and her lips tightening with anger—tightening with anger yet quivering. And, with the photograph in her possession, she went over and flung herself, face downward, on the davenport—the davenport that they opened into a bed when company came.

He didn't go to her. He waited where he sat, saying nothing. Finally he cleared his throat.

"They might take me, at that," he began. "I was too young for the Spanish-American, and now, with real history being made, I'm—well, I thought I was pretty well tied up. But I'm not in such bad shape physically. I haven't had much executive experience at the office, but maybe it's because I never did take very much to that inside stuff. Remember how I used to like to play ball—the time I pitched that 'no hit' game and you walked home from the grounds with me? But it's been you and the kids I've been thinking of. They might take me, at that."

Ella, out in the kitchen, had bumped herself and set up a howl, but this time, among the thousand times, no one went to comfort her.

"I saw that look on your face when that canoe came along," he continued. "I noticed how you were quiet all the way home. I know what an old, wornout dub I seemed compared with that fellow in the white cap with the sides turned up. I don't blame you. I might——"

The figure on the davenport stirred—sat up.

"And that's why you've acted the way you have?" the woman gasped, a smile outbattling a tear. "You thought I'd started to compare you with that fellow in the sailor uniform?"

She leaned forward, one hand on a knee, the other at her waist.

"You old mutt!" she sniffed. "Don't I know what you've gone through the last five years? Don't I know how you've plugged away at that office? Don't I know the fight you've made to meet the bills with everything going up? Don't I know how you've kept from making a holler. The band may not play for you, Ed, and the uniform you wear may be baggy at the knees and the cuffs frayed where I've pressed 'em, but you're my hero just as much as you ever was when we had our day of being good and young together. And, Ed, we were young—just as young and up to the minute as any of 'em, wasn't we? It ain't as if we'd never been that way once. If the country needs you later on I'd want you to go, and I know just how you'd go, too. You wouldn't slack any more on that job than you have on doing your best to take care of me and the kids. Maybe you wouldn't be an officer, but you'd give the best you had; but I don't get the idea of your figuring on it just now. And you thought I was comparing you with that fellow with the white cap turned up on the sides?"

He had drawn her cheek down to his.

"Look at me, Ed," she went on. "Look at me in that photograph you was sizing up when I come in. Look at the difference. A man don't seem to know when he's going back, but a woman is conscious of every step—every time a new crow's foot comes. She knows just the minute her skirts don't hang just right and she can't give her hats the proper tilt. She knows just what the babies coming along have taken from her. A woman can fight it a little if she's got a lot of time, but I ain't had the time. Remember that cold winter that Ella fussed and wouldn't go to sleep, no matter what I tried—the winter we thought we was going to lose her? Remember how I couldn't even get out to a movie with you 'cause we didn't have any one to take care of 'em? But I had them and I had you, Ed. You'll always be the same to me. There's some things in this world that don't change. And, you big cheese, worrying because you thought I was comparing you with that fellow in the white cap with the sides turned up!"

He drew his cheek away.

"But you acted queer toward me," he insisted, a new-old light in his eyes that were full of question. "You acted queer there when that canoe came along and all the way home."

"Why not?" she smiled wistfully. "I thought you was comparing me with that young girl in the yellow coat."

WHO IS NUMBER ONE?

by Anna Katharine Green

Aimee.

SYNOPSIS.

Aimée Villon, a beautiful young heiress, has come to live as the ward of Graham Hale, an inventor who has invaluable plans for the construction of submarines. Hugo Wald, Miss Villon's tutor, asks Hale to keep Miss Villon's securities in Hale's vault, an enormous and complicated depository, supposed to be impregnable. For eighteen years Hale has received on the same day each year a cryptic warning from "The Twisted Thread," an organization which had perpetrated a number of crimes which had utterly baffled the police. The day Miss Villon is installed in the house another warning comes. Tommy Hale, Graham Hale's son, in making his way to the vault in the dark sees his father struggling with two masked men. He gives fight, but he and his father are worsted. The vault is rifled of the securities and submarine plans, and later the Hales discover the robbers attempting to carry away Miss Villon. They recover her. They pursue the criminals in an armored car on which a machine gun is mounted. When the criminals commandeer a freight engine and box car the pursuers hitch the armored car to the box car and give the outlaws a hand to hand battle, in which Tommy is wounded and the criminals escape.

Tommy, going to inspect the submarine Sea Crawler, finds it has been taken to sea by the Twisted Thread gang. On another submarine he pursues the Crawler. Aimée is kidnaped and taken to a strange house, where she is subjected to the insults of Ralph Green. She succeeds in driving him from her and barricading herself in the room. Green returns later, and failing in his efforts to force the door, calls to her to open, else it will be the worse for her.

EPISODE FIVE.

THE HALLS OF HAZARD.

AIMEE turned from the window of the garret in which she was imprisoned at the sound of the threatening voice of the man his fellows called Ralph Green.

"Open!" he snarled. "Let me in or you'll be sorry——"

She was silent. She crouched by her barricade, every nerve tense, waiting.

"All right!" he snarled again. "I'll get in, just the same, and I'll make you pay for the extra trouble you've given me!"

A crashing blow shook the door. It was old and flimsy; it would not long resist his assault, she knew. Indeed, a panel splintered at once. Others followed it.

The door gave way completely. But the barricade, with Aimée reënforcing it with all the strength of her slender body, served her a little better, checking Greene's advance for a few moments. But he was through at last, advancing toward her. She retreated.

Desperately she swung the chair leg. He started back, with a cry of pain, at a blow on the head. But she had not the brute strength to stun him with so light a weapon; he renewed his attack, stung to a new fury by her resistance.

He closed upon her again, and now Aimée had a new blow from fortune. She slipped; as she tried to recover herself her one weapon, frail as it was, slipped from her grasp. Most girls would have given up the fight. But not Aimée. She freed herself by a desperate effort; as he lunged toward her she flung herself straight at his knees, seeking to tackle him, as she had seen football players do. He was surprised by her attack, by her sudden snatching of the offensive. For just a moment he checked his bull-like rush, and her impact, slight as it was, brought him down. And now fate, which had been fighting against Aimée, turned to her aid. As Green went down his head struck heavily against the corner of the bureau that had formed part of the barricade, and he crumpled up and lay still, only his stertorous breathing proving that he was still alive.

Aimée rose and shrank away from the man she had felled. She was incredulous; she thought he might be shamming, seeking to play a trick upon her. But he lay still; he made no move when, timidly, more frightened now than she had been while in the heat of her struggle with him, she slipped past the wrecked barricade and over the shattered fragments of the smashed door. Her one thought was to get away from him—to escape from the room. Even if his companions caught her she would be safe from him, at least.

But in the hall she saw a chance to escape. A scuttle led to the roof; there was a ladder. It was all she could do—it took all her waning strength—to get the ladder into place. But the hope of freedom gave her a new energy; just as footsteps sounded on the stairs below she succeeded. She reached the roof as a burst of shouts below warned her that she had been detected and that her flight was known. But she was on the roof—the clean, free air was all about her!

She raced toward the edge of the roof; hesitated no more than a second over a ten foot drop to the roof of the next building. The hue and cry rose behind her; she risked a backward look and saw two men scrambling over the parapet of the roof of the building she had just left.

On she ran then, sometimes dropping from one roof to the next, sometimes scrambling madly up to one higher. She did not gain ground, but neither did her pursuers. Then, at last, she came to what looked like an impassé. A gap too wide to step across yawned between her and the next house.

That shout nerved her to a mighty effort. Better to be hurt, better, almost, to be killed, than to fall again into their hands! She leaped; desperately she caught at the iron railing of a fire escape and drew herself to safety. Behind her her two pursuers broke into amazed imprecations. But they did not follow—they dared not. She was safe—she was free.

Heedless of her torn clothes, her wild and unkempt appearance, she made her way to the street. She hailed the first automobile that passed—begged its driver to take her to Graham Hale's home in the suburbs. Amazed, he consented.

She ran up the steps when the car stopped before Graham Hale's house, a wild, ragged little figure. She brushed past the amazed and delighted servant who opened the door, flinging him only a word by way of greeting. In the library, through the open doors, she could see Graham Hale, sitting at the table.

"Aimée!" he cried joyfully. "You're safe! You got away from them? Thank God!"

"Yes, I'm all right!" she said. "How did you and Tommy escape? And where is he?"

"He's gone to rescue you at Varick street!" said Hale. "The police found a note you must have dropped from the window!" He stopped. Fear showed in his eyes. "It was from you? It wasn't another trap set by The Twisted Thread?"

"No, it was from me," said Aimée. "But I'd given up hope that any one would ever find it who would know what to do with it!"

Swiftly she told him what she had seen from her window—her despair when the child had picked up her note and used it to clothe her doll.

"The policeman you saw must have found it later," said Hale. "And he recognized your name. A general alarm has been out for you and every policeman in the city has tried to find you. Tommy has gone now to join the detectives and police in a raid on that house——"

"Look; there's his car coming up the drive, but he isn't in it!" said Aimée.

They ran out together. Thompson, the chauffeur, explained his return.

"We'd gone about a mile, sir," he said to Graham Hale, "when both rear tires went flat. There was a taxi just passing us, empty, and Mr. Tommy jumped into it and went on. He told me to come back after I'd changed the tires—said he couldn't wait for me to do it."

"O, I see——" said Hale.

"But there was something queer about them tires, sir," said Thompson. "They wasn't punctured. See, I brought them up to show you how it was done."

He laid the deflated tire before them. And the cut was plainly visible. It was the triple T of The Twisted Thread.

Tommy Hale, half mad with fear and anxiety, acted at once upon the message that came to him from police headquarters after the policeman Aimée had seen had, at last, found her note.

"We're sending two detectives around at once," the official who telephoned to him said. "And more will follow. If you want to go to the address given in the note you will find out whatever our men discover. Report to Capt. Price."

Tommy's car was ready and waiting, and he started immediately. But, as Thompson had told Aimée and Graham Hale, the flat tires caused him to abandon his own machine and hail the taxicab which was so opportunely at hand. He stepped into it unsuspiciously and found himself at once engaged in a desperate struggle with a man who had been crouching down so that Tommy did not see him until he was in the car.

Too late Tommy saw how he had been tricked. The driver of the cab, only too obviously, was one of the gang; Tommy's glimpse of his satiric grin as he turned to watch the struggle going on behind him was ample proof of that.

Tommy fought well, but he was no match for him within the cab, who was, moreover, aided by the surprise. Struggle as he might, Tommy was forced to yield at last; fierce hands, choking him, subdued him. He was bound, hand and foot, long before the car reached the thickly settled district where a fight in a passing car might have attracted the attention of police or citizens. And so, trussed like a fowl, with a handkerchief stuffed in his mouth to keep him quiet, Tommy was borne to the house from which Aimée had so recently escaped. He had not even the knowledge that she was safe to comfort him. For all he knew she was still a prisoner.

He could offer no resistance when he was taken from the cab and hurried into the old warehouse. The street was, for the moment, deserted; no one saw what was going on. And Tommy heard, with a sinking heart, the shout of delight that came from the gangsters as he was brought in.

"You got him?" cried the leader. "Good work! Ralph messed things up with the girl. She got away."

Tommy's heart leaped then. If she were safe it didn't matter what became of him!

"She got away?" said the man who had captured Tommy, with an imprecation. "How did that happen?"

The leader shrugged his shoulders.

"I suppose Ralph was the same sort of fool he always has been," he said. "He thinks he's a lady killer, the mutt! She put one over on him, anyway—knocked him out, somehow; tripped him, he said, so that his head struck something when he went down. Then she got to the roof just ahead of Bill and Harry and got away from them finally by jumping across to a fire escape. They wouldn't follow her. Some nerve that girl's got! You've got to hand it to her. But she's got to be put out of the way. I shall send word to Number One that she's more dangerous to the success of our plans than any of them."

Tommy's captor nodded.

"Right," he said. "Well, Number One ought to be pleased with the work we've done! We've got the gold; we got the Sea Crawler, and now we've got young Hale back. How are we going to get rid of him?"

"Time enough for that," said the leader impatiently. "He won't get away again—I'll guarantee that. Here—you chaps—take him down cellar with the other prisoners."

Even as he spoke there came a thunderous, ominous knocking at the door that opened into the street. And harsh voices demanded entrance.

Tommy's heart leaped. The police! He was sure of it. But the gangsters did not seem greatly concerned.

Tommy was carried down a flight of steps into a dark, damp cellar. He was carried through a room in which he saw the crew of the Sea Crawler, trussed and helpless like himself, and then, seemingly as an afterthought, back into another small room.

"We'll keep him," said one of those who carried him. "They might fool us and find those other birds—but they don't know young Hale's here. And he's the one we want chiefly, anyhow."

Above there was a good deal of noise. Heavy voices were heard, and the tramp of men in heavy boots. The detectives, he guessed, were making a search. In the spot where he lay he could see the steps that led down to the cellar from the street floor. And now two men came down them, silently, craftily. They stood at either side of the foot of the stairs, waiting; in their hands they carried slungshots. He guessed their purpose, but he could do nothing. Fascinated, he listened and watched. He saw two feet appear on the topmost step; in a moment two strangers, plainly the detectives, were in plain sight. Behind them came members of the gang.

Swiftly and surely the two men who lay in ambush launched their attack. The detectives, taken utterly by surprise, never had a chance. Swift blows stunned them, they were borne down by the overwhelming rush of the men behind.

Laughing, the gangsters, flushed with their triumph, went back. One stopped to sneer at Tommy and to touch his ribs with his foot.

"Swell chance you've got this time, my buck!" he said. "We've got you where we want you now!"

Meanwhile Graham Hale and Aimée were racing toward the house in Varick street as swiftly as Graham Hale's most powerful limousine could carry them. They were a prey to the keenest anxiety, but they were supported by the thought that at least The Twisted Thread was cornered now, that the police, with power and force enough to take care of any organization of criminals, no matter how powerful it might be, was at work.

No outward sign of disorder greeted them when they reached the house. If police reenforcements were coming, they had not yet arrived. A single policeman, the one Aimée had seen from her window, was on post, fat, placid, good natured. He stood over a grating, and just as Hale and Aimée, puzzled, uncertain, got out of their car and went toward him he started and stared down at the grating. Then he bent down and tugged at it, and as he got it loose the head and shoulders of a man who had evidently been in a fight appeared. The policeman helped him up and cried out in surprise.

Graham Hale got an explanation in a moment. O'Brien and Driscoll were the detectives who had been caught by The Twisted Thread. But for once the gang had been too sure. Already O'Brien was telephoning for more men; the crew of the Sea Crawler, freed by the officers and guided through an entrance that had been opened into the new subway ditch, came up to help.

There was no delay. O'Brien and Driscoll, their guns out, backed by the men from the Sea Crawler, who, weak as they were from hunger and long confinement in a cramped position, were eager to get back at their captors, began an immediate assault upon the door. And Aimée, despite Graham Hale's plea that she should go back to the limousine and wait, was ready, automatic pistol in hand, to follow them and do her part.

The door gave way before the assault that was made upon it with a beam requisitioned from the subway work. But though the officers were careful this time, no stream of bullets poured from the darkness within, as they had half expected. Silence, emptiness, greeted them, when they went in. O'Brien stood, listening; a sound upstairs made him cry out.

"Is there a way out by the roof, miss?" he asked.

"Yes—oh, yes!" she cried.

"Then it's there they are, boys—I hear them!" he said. "Come on!"

He leaped up the stairs. Already, outside, the clang of an arriving patrol wagon could be heard. There was a rush up the stairs. But Aimée, guided by a sure instinct, went down. As she descended the cellar stairs a man rushed past her, almost knocking her down. She recognized him as one of the gangsters, and, though he saw her, he did not stop to molest her. Blind terror seemed to be driving him. And he was gone before Aimée could turn to fire at him.

She went on. And suddenly she was thrown down by a shock that shook the house. Plaster was flying all about her; she guessed that a blast in the subway, more violent than usual, was the explanation. She picked herself up and went on. And before her she saw Tommy. He lay still, blood flowing from a cut on his forehead. She ran to him and knelt down. At once she saw what had happened. A piece of the ceiling, loosened by the blast, had struck him. She took his head in her lap and stanched the blood with her handkerchief. Desperately she worked to loosen his bonds and all the time she called his name.

"Tommy! Tommy, dear; it's Aimée! Speak to me!" she cried.

He stirred faintly.

And then, just as she thought he was about to answer, there came a new shock, a new explosion, infinitely greater and more terrifying than the first. The floor rose below them; the walls collapsed; plaster, bits of wood, heavy objects of all sorts flew about them. Aimée screamed and tried to cover Tommy's helpless, inert body with her own. Something struck her shoulder; she felt a fearful pressure upon her feet. Then, for a moment, she fainted.

When she recovered her senses she could not move. She was pinned down by some heavy object—a beam, she thought—that had fallen across her feet. The air was clearer now; the dust and debris of the explosion were settling. Above the ceiling was gone. Through the wreckage the light from the outside came in.

And then she screamed in sudden horror. Above them a beam—a huge, massive beam—was tottering. It was about to fall. It must crush them if it did. And she could not move. Her scream seemed to rouse Tommy. His eyes opened, and he looked up to see the wavering beam, slipping, the single crosspiece that supported it being pushed out of place——

THE TEENIE WEENIES

ATTEND A PEACE DANCE. BY WM. DONAHEY.

THERE was great joy in the Teenie Weenie camp when it was announced that peace has been declared between Queen Mooie, ruler of the wild men, and the General.

When the Lady of Fashion was told that she was free to leave for the Teenie Weenie army, that little lady did a very peculiar thing. She burst into tears, saying, "Oh, dear, it's lovely to be able to see my dear friends again, but—but I haven't anything to wear except this dress, which I have worn ever since I was captured, and—and it's awfully out of style."

The Teenie Weenies, however, made the little lady forget all about the style, for they gave her such a royal welcome she never thought of her dress again.

As much as the Teenie Weenies wished to get back home they were forced to stay on the island for several days, for the Sailor was still too sick to move, and besides the General had to attend a Sabo peace ceremony. The Sabos, like all wild men, had wonderful dances for all occasions, and the Dance of Peace and Plenty was the one they danced whenever peace was made with their enemies.

"You must attend this dance," the Poet told the General, "for it's the way the wild men have of showing you they want to be friendly."

On the appointed day the General set off for the dance with a number of soldiers, and as they drew near the village they were met by a body of wild men who had been sent out as a guard of honor to escort the General into the village. He was led to a spot beneath a big bush where the Queen sat cross-legged on a wonderfully soft piece of cloth which had been thrown on the ground. Over her head hung another cloth which was fastened at the four corners to long poles held in the hands of four wild men.

The General made a low bow at the suggestion of the Poet, who knew the Sabo language and had come along as interpreter, and then sat down beside the Queen. The Queen and the General talked for some minutes through the Poet, and presently the Queen signaled for the dance to start.

Instantly a number of voices broke into a loud song from behind a house near by and presently the dancers came hopping and prancing into the cleared spot before the Queen. First came a warrior with a long spear and when he danced directly in front of the Queen he broke the spear in two over his knee. Next came a man with a queer seed pod over his head and in one hand he carried a whip with which he struck the warrior every now and then. In the other hand he carried a dried seed pod with which he rattled loudly in time with the song. The next dancer wore a frog's head and hopped in time with the music, much after the fashion of a frog. Several girls followed the frog man, carrying plates of smoked frog ham and rice cakes.

"The first man in the dance," explained the Poet to the General, "is the Spirit of War. He broke the spear to show you that the war was over and the next man rattled the seed pod and struck him with the whip to scare him away, which means that the wild men are through with war and wish to get rid of the War Spirit. The frog man represents the frog meat which the wild men eat, and his funny dance means that good times are coming, for you see the pretty girls follow with plates of rice cakes and meat."

The dancers performed for several minutes and then the man with the whip and rattle chased the Spirit of War over the hill out of sight, which meant that the Spirit of War was gone for good.

After the dance the Teenie Weenies were served with hot rice cakes and delicious roast frog ham, after which they returned to their camp.

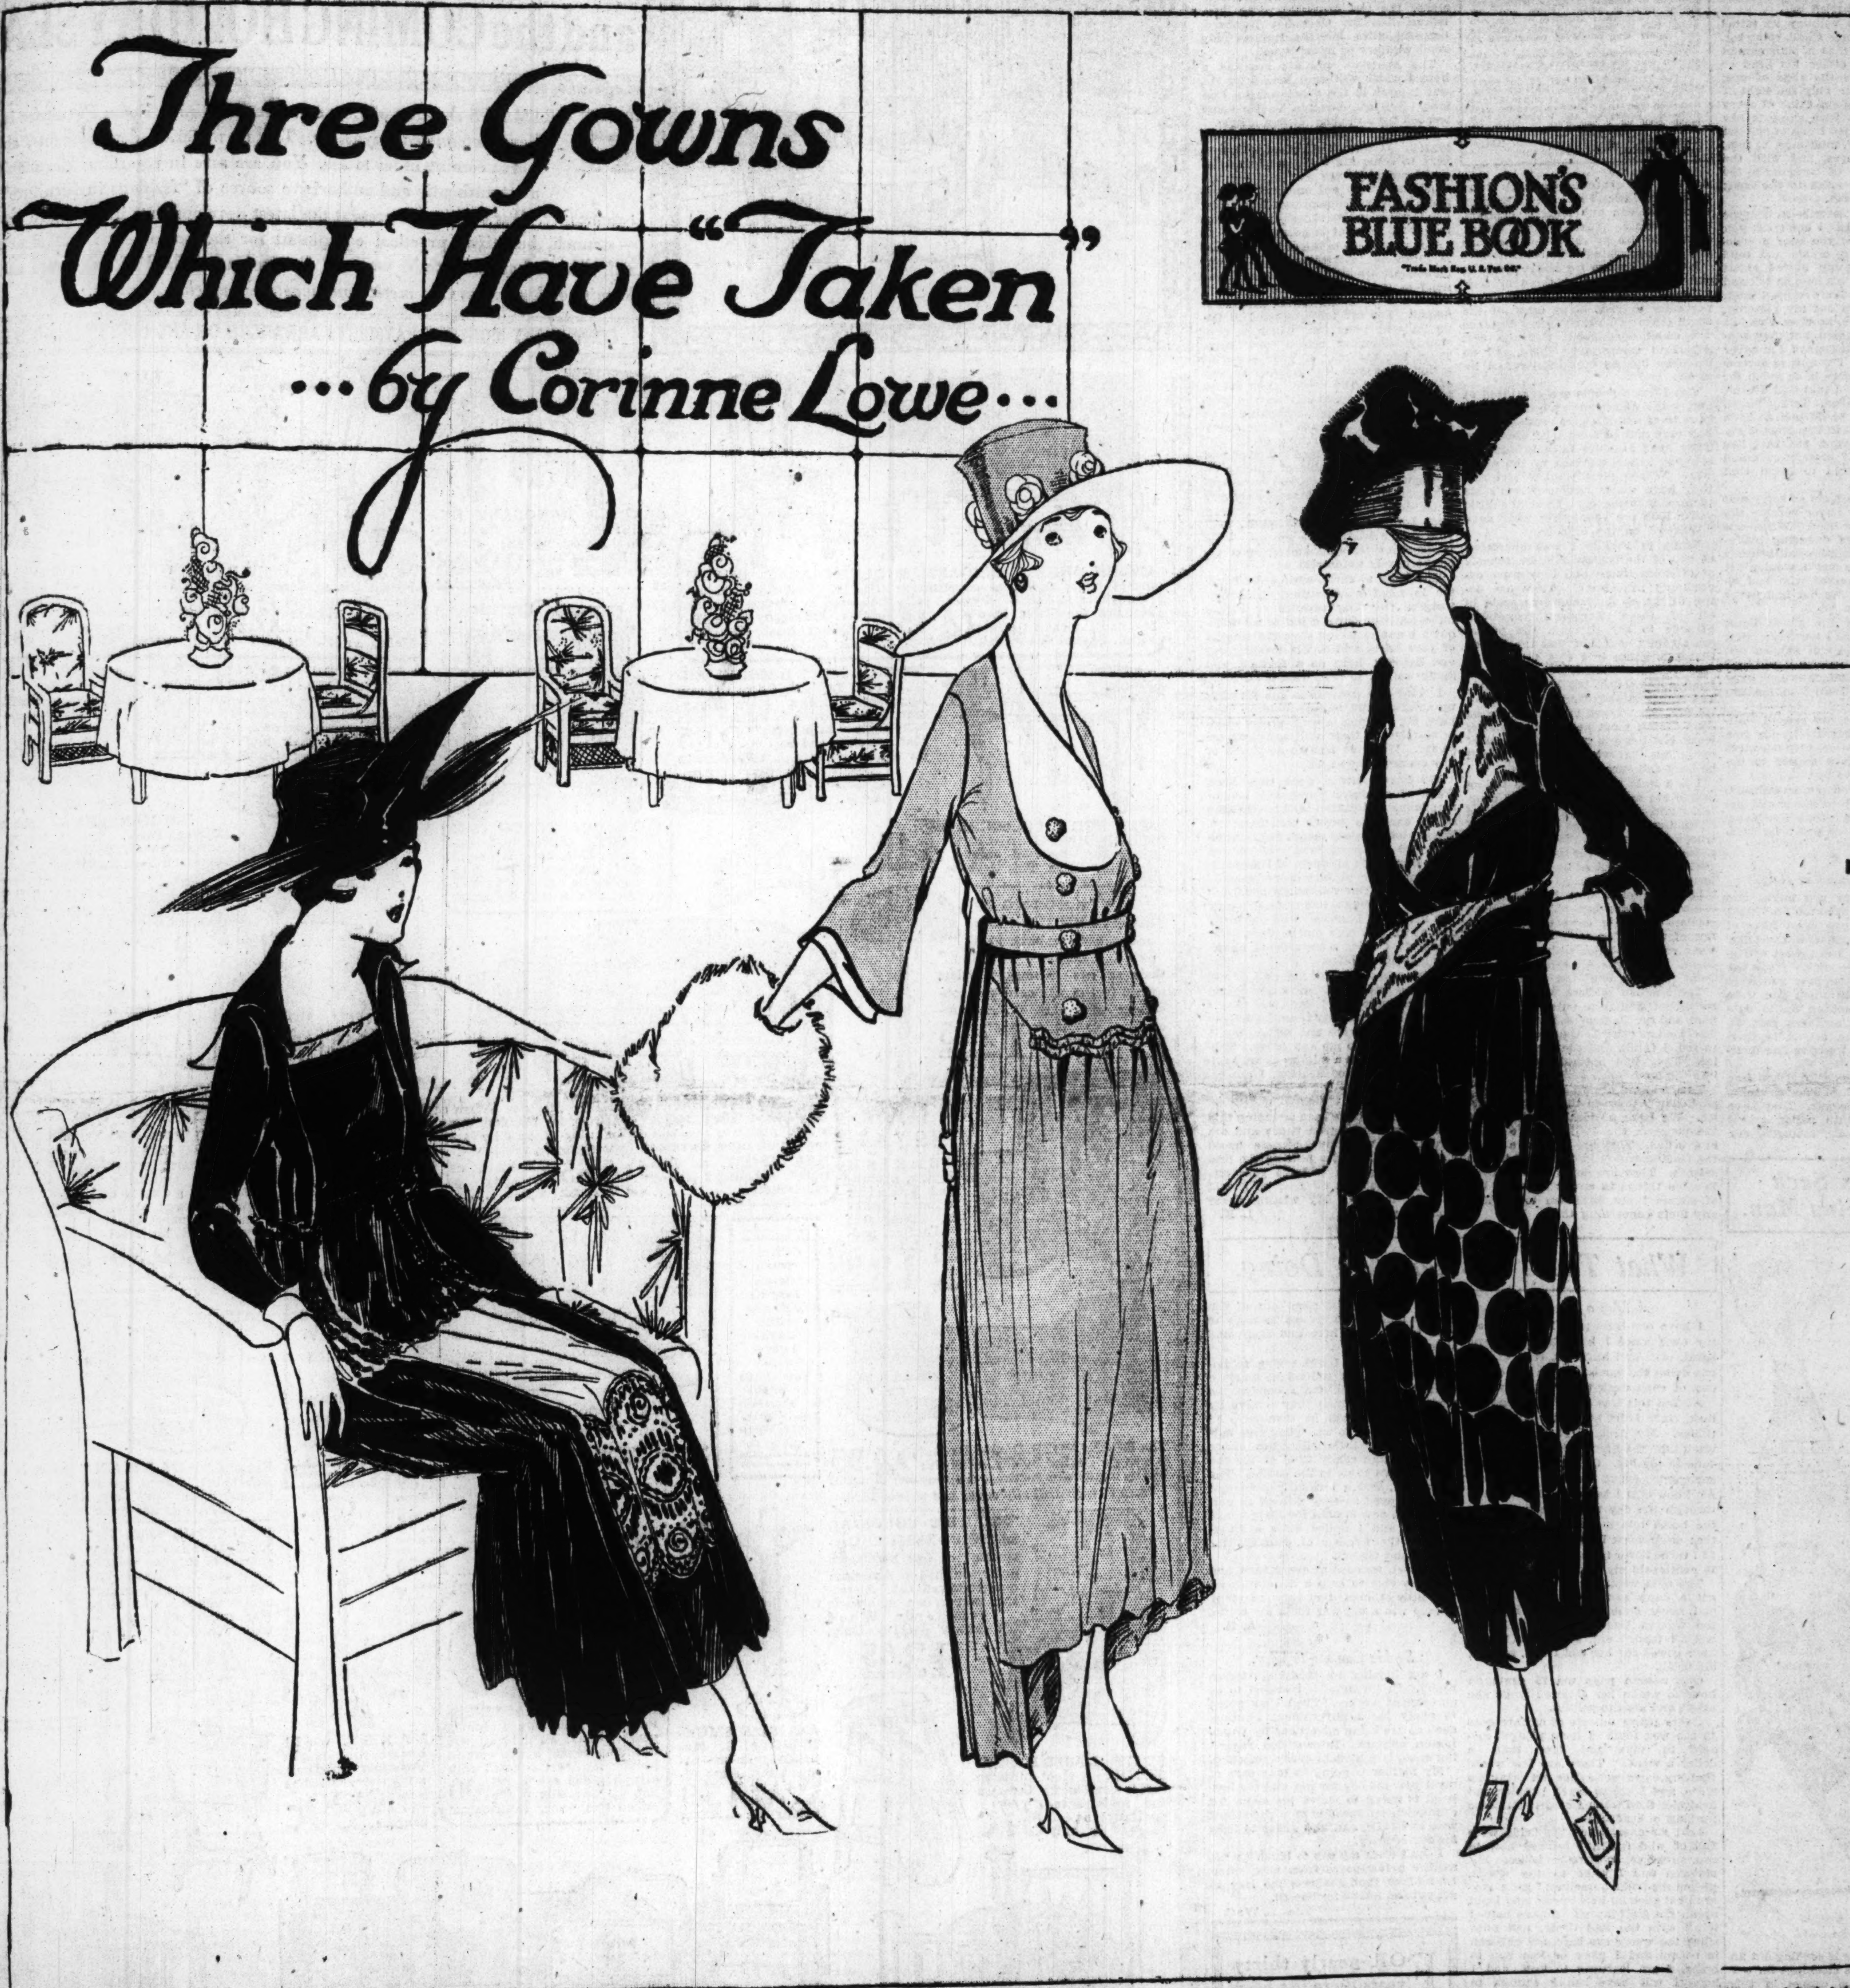
Three Gowns "Which Have "Taken"

...by Corinne Lowe...

FASHION'S BLUE BOOK
"Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Off."



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Gowniculture is about as uncertain as horticulture. Many styles blossom at the spring and fall openings which never mature. Take, for example, the bustle. This creation of two American designers came out strong. The manufacturers pushed it. In spite of this we see the 1890 touch confined chiefly to medium priced merchandise. Even then the bustle is unripened. A tight bodice and just a mere draping in the back—this is the attenuated phantom of the '80s and '90s.

There, too, are the long coats of the Paris suits. By and by we may see these coming out strong. As yet, however—not so! The smartest women one finds today are wearing severely tailored suits with small hats, draped with the modish scroll veil. If they do not select this costume one finds them in velvet frocks simply made and accompanied by great bustling coats of fur or fur and—— Even more artless is the little blue serge with its filet collar and cuffs which is apt to skulk under the most pretentious wrap.

It is interesting, then, to see, now that we are approaching the holiday season, just exactly what styles have "taken" in the velvet and satin frocks. As leader in this group we nominate Jenny's "Ma Cherie," which is shown in the center of the drawing. Jenny is bound always to have one model which is preëminent in the season's fashion. Last spring, for instance, who could count the numbers of that three piece costume of hers with the blue serge skirt, the long bodice of polka dotted blue foulard, and the long straight serge coat? They piled up as majestic a count as the balls we lose on the golf links. And this fall in similar fashion "Ma Cherie" has been copied and recopied.

Yet, even though we see it so often, "Ma Cherie" cannot be dull. It possesses an everlasting charm. Of black velvet with trimming of rhinestone buttons, with gilet of white satin which passes to the back and crosses in the form of a sash, and with three-quarter sleeves the bell shape of which is followed by a small inside fold of white satin, it is no wonder that "Ma Cherie" has lived up so ably to its name.

A more dressy model which has been echoed constantly this fall is Bernard's "Sapphire," worn by the figure at the left. This is of black satin and the dress receives its name from the panel of sapphire blue velvet which makes it so truly beautiful. This is embroidered in blue and gold beads—imagine the loveliness of gold on that Cornish sea blue—and is finished by a border of the black satin. The same jeweled touches of blue velvet appear on the long, tight sleeves, at the throat, and as a lining of the collar. The girdle is black jet.

AGE cannot wither nor custom stale the Jenny model known as "Ma Cherie," shown in the center of the page. Of black velvet, with white gilet pulled backward into a sash, with rhinestone buttons and three-quarter bell sleeves, this is a gown which has been copied and recopied this year. The one to the left is a Bernard model to which touches of sapphire velvet on black satin and a dash of blue and gold beads give a jeweled beauty of color. The lady to the right—observe how Premet has given her an orphan lapel and girdle trimming of gray moire silk, ever so smart against the black satin foundation!

The last of the group is Premet's "Lafayette," another black satin frock which is more wearable than the one just described. Black and gray is a favored combination this year, and this frock receives its cachet from the gray moire silk which forms the single lapel and which lines the girdle as it folds over at the right side. The orphan lapel, the opposing tempo of the girdle—this shows how passionately attached we are this year to the one sided effect. The spotlight is indeed languid this year. It cannot possibly fall on two sides at the same time. Another noteworthy feature is the treatment of the three-quarter sleeve. As a rule these sleeves are bell shaped. Here the smart cuff tells you another way to go about it. Light gray satin peeps out from this cuff and forms the V at the neck.

All through November New York has been crowded with women here to attend the various war bazaars and the horse show. As a result the month has been much more brilliant than usual and more fashionable costumes have been filmed than when the style screen is dependent on our own civic exertions.

Among gowns noted in a group of out of town people was one which played up the zouave jacket. As several of our importers insist that the zouave motif will be a strong one in the orchestration of early spring modes, this costume was especially notable. Pictorial it was, too, the skirt plain style and its uneven hem finished with a gold cord repeating the note of the material, which was green and gold brocade bengaline. The jaunty little jacket of black velvet was distinctly zouave in style and, trimmed with an ermine collar, showed long sleeves of georgette with velvet cuffs.

Another striking costume was a combination of taupe georgette and serge. The bodice, which was of georgette, had long sleeves inset from shoulder to wrist with squares of the serge piped in coral satin. This charming decoration was repeated again on the low, square neck and at the hem of the skirt. The finishing touch was a girdle of solid coral beads which was folded over and fell to the hem of the skirt in coral tassels. A moleskin coat and a hat of coral velvet with turned back helmet front and one silk pompon of self-color completed this lovely outfit.

Gray seems to have many faithful followers and lately our pencil has been busy with the note: "For theater wear gray chiffon over lame lace—no trimming except a bunch of orchids." A word here about wearing colors. The other day a noted designer was talking to us and he said, among other interesting things, "Don't be afraid of wearing me colors." What he meant was that if you are the possessor of a sallow, dark skin don't try to dress yourself in something different. Play up to your skin. Neutralize it by wearing a greenish bronze tint. Similarly with gray. This same designer told of the little woman with the mouse colored hair and the bleached blue eyes and a pale skin whom he dressed—yes, in gray! "All I did was to put a touch of soft rose in the brim lining of her hat," said he. "That touch, combined with the gray, brought out all the shy tints of her complexion and hair."

All that glistens is apt to be gold these days. However, millinery gold has its various phases. Now it would seem that the gold brocade hat has given place to one of plain gold or silver cloth. Among such models is one with a gold crown from which spring layers of black tulle edged with jet beads. This brim makes of it an evening hat. Yet, lo! By the simple expedient of turning back the tulle folds of the brim, by catching them up to the crown with jet pins, here was a really, truly afternoon hat.

What Are You Doing to Help Win the War?

Letters from soldiers overseas that are of general interest will be gladly printed in this department.

What are you doing to help win the war? If you are one of the thousands of women who have responded to the call to the colors, is the rifle you shoulder loaded with practical ideas on how to save wheat, meat, milk, fats, sugar, and fuel, and are you handling it as the soldier handles his, with the idea of winning the war? Have you practical ideas on dress conservation, on health conservation, and the health of those under your direction? Perhaps you have faced the problem of earning a living while your soldier man is away. Have you any touching, appealing anecdote of him you would like to share with other mothers and sisters and wives of other men in khaki?

This department is an exchange for the women who are helping to win the war. Will you enlist?

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on what you are doing to help win the war. If other things occur to you than those suggested send them in. Remember the suggestion you make may be a big "bit." Write on one side of the paper only. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Tribune."

Happy as a Lark.

FRANCE, Oct. 27.

Dear, Dear Wife: Well, here I am again. Still well and—nobody will believe—happy as a lark. I wish I could tell you all I've seen and done, but that is not permitted, and I have not the ability to describe the conditions under which we carried on.

Just think of a country so pitted with shell holes, some small, some big, so close together that a man cannot lie down without either his head or feet reaching over the edge of one; think of night, with only the light of the stars and the moon; think of every hole full of water, with slimy, gooey mud every place; then think of one out in it all, mud, mud, mud head to foot, clear about the eyes, and with the duty between two of carrying a 200 pound weight five miles to the front line, and you have me.

But that doesn't describe it, because I left out the shells. I can't tell you what they are like; you hear a whistle, an awful bang, crash, and mud and shrapnel is being hurled about you. Or else there is a long shriek and a crash in the air; it's overhead stuff. I've had the pieces cut my clothing, splash water on me, so close I've felt the heat as they passed, but they cannot hurt me. Isn't it funny? I'm never frightened because I'm always serenely confident that there is so much for me to do in the world that God doesn't wish I should be killed. Life is short. There is so much to do and so little time in which to do it; I've wasted my months and my years, but that has increased the debt I already owe, and so I must be spared to begin that which I would do.

So often out here I am so sorry and so ashamed that I never became the man I should have been. When one sees the poor boys enduring everything, struggling, fighting, all because wrong exists in the world, wouldn't it make any one ashamed who had always seen that wrong but had never raised his voice against it.

Then, too, when the shells burst near I laugh, because I trust God, that I know nothing bad can happen me, and if they kill me perhaps it will lend but a fraction of an ounce to each blow which 10,000,000 others like me are preparing to deliver.

America, America, we are all waiting, sure and confident. If any one soldier from my own country does less than his best he is a traitor to the ideals of all who love her.

The mud is still on me, sweetheart, so I must wash, try to dig it out, get some dry socks, and then five days' rest. Bless you, bless you, dear little wife.

American Aviators in Italy.

I thought perhaps you might like to hear some news from me first hand, although I know you must hear of everything I write home to the folks.

I am in southern Italy, west of Naples and about —— miles from the Adriatic. I do not suppose you were in this part of Italy when you were over here. It is not as up to date and modern as the northern part, although our aviation school is thoroughly modern and we have fine quarters, food, etc.

This writing paper is furnished free to us by the Y. M. C. A. They are doing excellent work in the war. They have supplied us free with paper, magazines, books, baseballs, footballs, etc.

At the big cantonments they have reading rooms and maintain a canteen where you can buy tobacco, cigarets, and chocolate. Their stations are reserved for use by Americans and are greatly appreciated by the soldiers.

I was in France for about a month and was quartered at three or four different places and as well had an opportunity to visit many other of the small cities. In nearly every instance our small detachment was the first American troops ever there and so we were objects of curiosity and interest.

The French people are overjoyed at seeing the Americans and seem greatly relieved—as if a great responsibility had been shifted from their shoulders. They have absolute faith in America stepping in and cleaning up the whole war. Wilson is a popular idol and they have many souvenirs with his picture or name on. Even the little sailor hats the youngsters wear have "Wilson" on the hatband.

While in France I was quartered at two of the largest aviation schools at different times, and they were exceedingly interesting. They are doing things on a tremendous scale in all of these European countries. Strange to say, though, the people are all fully confident that the United States is going into this thing on a still larger scale, in the same way we build automobiles, big buildings, etc., and simply swamp Germany. I think we are, too. There is so much to be done that it must necessarily be slow work, but there is no doubt in any of our minds that when we strike it will be hard and sure.

I like Italy immensely. The Italian people are exceedingly kind and courteous and, furthermore, we enjoy the distinction of being the first American troops ever in Italy. When we go to a town on leave the people stop in their tracks to look at us. The "Americano" is distinguished from every other type of soldier by the broad brimmed service hat. The European soldiers all wear caps except for a few of the Italian mountaineers, who wear rakish fedoras with feathers in them. Of course all soldiers on the front wear tin hats, the steel cosque.

The English soldiers wear a khaki somewhat similar to ours, the French blue, and the Italians an invisible gray. The Italian color is the most difficult to see, I think, and the best for service. They just naturally fade away into the landscape.

Their officers are all high class men, particularly those in the aviation service. We have no idea in America of the progress the Italians have made in aviation. They are without a doubt the leading nation in the world in this science. They are doing almost unbelievable things in motor building, but of course I am forbidden to disclose any facts concerning this.

We are mighty glad to be down here for our training, because conditions are ideal. We are in a fine place for the winter and we are excellently treated. A great deal of the Austrian-Italian fighting takes place in the form of air raids. If you will look at a map you will see that the Adriatic and a mountainous boundary is all that separates the two countries. The Austrians, like the Germans, bombard peaceful cities, but the Italians only bomb military or naval bases.

The Austrian acts are creating a hatred which will exist long after the war is over in the hearts of the Italians. You can imagine Venice being bombed from the air. It is a shame.

I was in one Austrian raid on Italy myself. It was at night and I stood next to some big "Archies," anti-aircraft guns. It was exciting, but the whole affair did not amount to much and I heard no damage was done. You don't begin to be afraid, you are so interested in what is going on.

Our work here in the aviation school is intensely interesting. All of our instructors are high class men. Flying itself is great. You would like it, I know. You never think about the height. You are too interested in the magnificent panorama which is constantly changing before your eyes. Then, too, the roar of your powerful motor gives you the greatest feeling of security in the world. You get to listen to it unconsciously as you play with your controls, correcting and guiding your machine instinctively without thinking anything of it.

In teaching us to land our pilot had the disconcerting habit of cutting off the motor in midair as you were sailing serenely along. Immediately you must nose the machine over into a glide before it stalls, and guide, with your motor dead, to the ground. This is excellent training and it soon becomes purely automatic.

The glide to earth with a dead motor is most exhilarating. You can imagine traveling seventy or eighty miles an hour down a hill of air without a bump or sound save the singing of your wires and finally leveling out and lighting, light as a feather, and finally rolling to rest, with it all over.

I think the Americans are showing up as good stuff in this aviation business, for our men are all pretty evenly matched in their skill and progress so far. We have had no accidents of any consequence at all.

We have quite a good time here. Some of us have purchased Italian mandolins and guitars and are getting so we can play pretty well together. We get lots of sleep (about ten hours a day) and plenty of food. Of courses wine here, as in all parts of Europe, is as common or in fact more common than water. Our fellows do not drink much of it, though, and it doesn't hurt you if you do, I guess. I do not drink any at all and only smoke very little. At meals I most always drink chocolate instead of coffee.

It is no hardship for me, as I do not like wine and prefer chocolate to tea or coffee anyway. I can't see that I am any better nerved than the fellows who do drink wine and coffee, but I guess it won't do me any harm. Taken all around it is a mighty clean, healthy life, almost too healthy, I am beginning to think, for I have gained about ten pounds.

Well, I see I have been stringing this letter along for eleven pages and am afraid you will have become bored reading it. I'll put a note on the first page advising you to have your stenographer copy it off first so it will be easy to read. My writing never won any prizes.

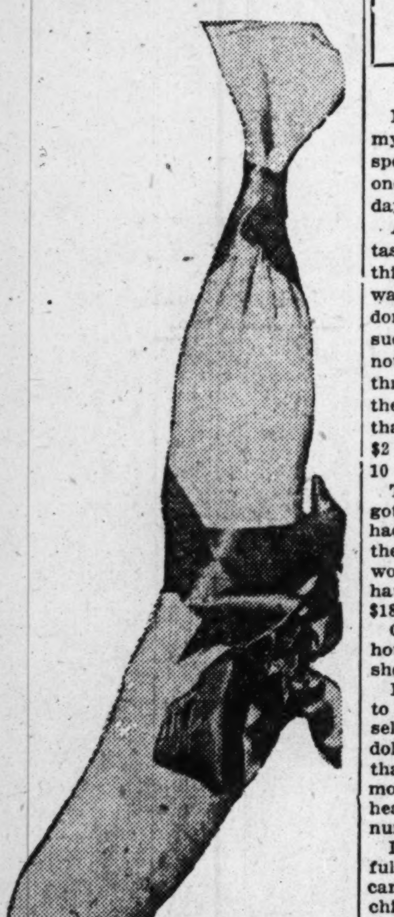
Christmas Sock for Fighting Man.



Now the Red Cross is sending out an appeal for Christmas stockings for our boys in the various camps in this country. The stocking contains the following articles:

One sock [the mate to the one filled].
Shaving cream.
Tooth paste.
Soap.
Wash cloth.
Playing cards.
Pencil.
Three postals.
Candy or chocolate.
Toy or game.
Tobacco and pipe.
Christmas card.

They should be good, warm woolen socks that the man can wear. Put the articles in one sock and tie it at the top with gay red ribbon with your card.

If your Red Cross auxiliary is not collecting these stockings, send yours to the American Red Cross at 64 East Washingotn street, Chicago.

If you cannot fill a sock yourself and will send $1 with your name and address to the American Red Cross at the above address they will send a filled stocking to some soldier for you. They want to send a Christmas stocking to every soldier in all the cantonments in this country.

What These Women Are Doing.

A Day a Week.

I have one little plan I think is all my own, since I have heard no one speak of it and have not read of any one doing the same. I give one entire day of each week to my country.

At first this was a real, sure enough task, since I did not know how to do things. My first effort was over a wash tub—the first washing I had ever done in my life. Of course, there was such a lot about washing that I did not know that I never could have gone through the day had not the maid in the home told me what to do. For that day's work I received $2.10. The $2 I turned over to the Red Cross. The 10 cents paid my carfare home.

The next week I had a nicer job—I got a day's sewing—and although I had never done a stitch in my life, the woman was delighted with the work I turned out, and since then I have sewed for her odd times, making $18 in all.

One woman pays me 25 cents an hour to watch her children while she shops and goes to parties.

Every penny outside of carfare goes to the war fund. I have pledged myself to give not less than a dollar a week. There are few weeks that my day's work does not bring me more, and I am so much happier and healthier than when I used to sit home nursing a headache.

Last summer, when the fields were full of wild fruits, I learned how to can, preserve, and make jellies. My children and I went to the woods, picked the fruits ourselves; I got a government book on how to can, and I put up all the fruit myself. I have halved it all with the Red Cross, and now, since the woods are bare, my children in school and I more or less tied to home, I am learning to knit, and I hope I will have health enough to knit socks to keep our soldiers' feet warm, or, better still, may they soon be home and not need them.

I have no one to send to the front. I never before did a day's work in my life. I cannot tell you how proud I am that I can help some mother's son to keep warm. My work has just begun. I hope soon to be able to do more.

Mrs. M. F. H.

Tiny Bits Make Up Her Bit.

I am a housekeeper and mother of five children. I cannot go to the Red Cross rooms to work, for I have no one to leave with the two babies who are not yet in school. We have not a large income and the calls upon the family budget are many.

However, I have knitted two sweaters and a muffler, enrolled three members of the family in the Red Cross, given modestly to the soldiers' library fund (just enough for one book), and allowed the children to send one Christmas kit. Also I collected "trinkets" from my immediate neighbors for a treasure and trinket fund, with gratifying results for two hours' work.

We are buying Liberty bonds as fast as we can pay for them out of the limited amount which we manage to save by sacrifice here and there and strict self-denial.

Through it all I am trying to impress the need of individual sacrifice upon the children, for I believe the moral training which they receive by this giving up will be invaluable to them as well as to us. They give half of their own little allowance either to the Belgian candy fund or for the boys that we know in the camps. The other half, which I usually permitted them to spend as they pleased in normal times, now is used for their school supplies, and I notice quite a difference in the number of demands for pencils and tablets.

In short, we save at every turn, and are thus able to help a little with all the little things that are required to help win a big war for a big cause.

So He Can Ho to War.

I am helping by studying stenography. In six months I expect to be an efficient worker. Then I am going to apply for a government position, such as are being advertised by Washington officials. Information regarding them is posted in every postoffice.

My mother is going to take care of my 4 year old boy for me, and my husband is going to waive his claim for exemption on account of a dependent wife and child, and he's going to fight for our country.

I don't want my son to blush for his mother a few years from now, when he realizes that she was too lazy to get out and hustle for liberty.

"GOOD-BY, sugar. Hello, Slim!" That's the tune I tried on my waist line after I looked over a table of weights and measures and found myself unpatriotically concealing ammunition that belonged to good old Uncle Sam. "Twenty pounds of fat—that's what I was carrying about with me, and the reason it belonged to Uncle Sam was because it was acquired almost wholly through my love for candy and sweets of every kind."

So related Mrs. Harry T., a young matron, 25, and pretty.

"Early this summer I heard a lecture on sugar conservation that made an impression on me. And having been stirred to some sort of patriotic action by numberless relatives and friends in the army, navy, and Red Cross work, I said when I came out of this lecture to my mother: 'I'm going to give up candy for a year. It seems to me that is little enough for a husky creature like me to do.'

"Mother having mothered me and my wavering resolutions for twenty-five years, just smiled.

"'Don't you believe I can do it, mother?' I urged.

"'No, dear, I don't!' she answered as kindly as she could.

"'Now, I'll just show you I can, mother dear,' I said.

"Mother offered me a bribe. But I was stirred with too decent an emotion to listen to it. I have stuck it out so far and now I know there's just nothing to seeing the whole year through without candy. Mother may suspect, but she'll never hear from me how nearly I came to slipping my hand into the chocolate box on several trying occasions.

"It was shocking the way I used to eat candy. I can understand a man's craving for drink and for smokes. I used to crave candy the same way. I knew it was making me fat. Heaven knows I knew it. I was told it by everybody! But fat was as inefficient an argument to me as a possible red nose is to the habitual drinker.

A month hadn't slipped by before I began to feel an ease about my belt that I hadn't felt for a while back. Before another month had gone I, with the aid of my dressmaker, discovered a waist line shrinkage of an inch and a quarter.

"Maybe I didn't feel happy at this discovery! Then by chance I ran across an article on food values and I learned something I didn't know before. It was that a pound of candy—ordinary candy—contained 1,700 calories and that a pound of chocolates contained 2,770 calories. No wonder my waist shrunk when I gave up candy, for I used to eat a half pound and more in a day, along with three lumps of sugar in my coffee three times a day and lots of ice creams and sodas and stuff like that.

"I discovered that an ordinary lump of sugar contained 100 calories. Also that the average woman requires about 2,500 calories for her daily ration. When I began to do some arithmeticing I began to have a sublime contempt for my appetite.

"I learned from the same excellent authority that active persons between 25 and 55 should cut down on their sugar supply for their own good and that children and young people should not be denied sugar.

"I discovered something else at the end of three months, and it was more waist shrinkage, and a most delicious sense of the fitness of things that only a reduced woman may know. I give you my word my waist measured two and one-half inches less.

"I've got to admit by this time the original patriotic idea came pretty nearly being submerged by the idea of belt tightening. But then I didn't eat the candy and Uncle Sam is that much better off, and here I am feeling twenty pounds lighter, nearly three inches neater around the waist, and looking (so everyone tells me) about five years younger."

Take Mrs. Harry T.'s advice and look over the weight table. If you are harboring fat—excess fat—remember the quickest, easiest, and most patriotic way to get rid of it is at this present moment to reduce your sugar ration. Cut it down a pound or two a week for the next three months, say. Or take just half the amount you have been accustomed to consuming.

You and Uncle Sam will both be gladder for it.

B. N.: SCARS MAY OFTEN BE made less distinct by a daily massage with cold cream, and I have known cases where the marks have been erased entirely. If, however, the scar is deep and of long standing I would advise you to consult a skin specialist, for even in the most obstinate cases electricity has been known to effect wonderful cures. A stamped, addressed envelope will bring the instructions for the care of dry hair to you.

ELEANOR: IF YOU WILL SEND me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall be glad to mail you the directions for the care of dry hair. The directions are in themselves too long to be printed here. Thank you so much for your cheerful letter. Let me hear from you again.

REAL LOVE STORIES

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

THE TRUEST LOVE.

In a small town near the central part of Illinois lives a sweet faced old lady who takes daily walks with her life partner, a white haired man of 86. To watch them no one would suspect that the man is blind.

His step is still firm and he walks along in evident enjoyment of his surroundings, guided carefully by his wife, who describes to him all the interesting things along the way. Nothing escapes her, for she has made observation a habit out of consideration for him. His face wears a serene expression which reflects truly his state of mind, for he is always happy.

Should you ask him the reason he would reply that he is so because of an early love affair which has stood not only the test of time but of misfortune. Fifty-four years ago his present wife left Scotland for America to marry him. The week before she arrived he had an accident through which he lost his sight. When she came he implored her to return home and not bind herself for life to a blind man, but she refused to listen to him, saying that his misfortune endeared him all the more to her. She finally overruled his objections and they were married the following week.

Being an ambitious young man, he had established a fair business, which she took in charge and managed successfully, guided by his advice.

Long after she had mastered all the details she made it a point to consult him on all matters, thereby mitigating his own sense of helplessness by keeping alive his interest and making him feel that he was actually necessary to her.

They have four boys, all of whom are in prosperous circumstances, having profited largely by their mother's training. Even now at the age of 75 she takes an active interest in all affairs pertaining to the business and her family. Their home life is ideal, for the mother has always acted on the principle that true love surmounts all obstacles.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

A WOMAN'S SIGNATURE.

SOME time ago I called attention to a too frequent error made by many married women in their manner of signing their names. Since then, I am happy to be able to say, there has been a notable improvement among my correspondents, but I cannot yet, like Alexander, weep because there are no more worlds to conquer. Letters still come to me, courteously worded, legible, agreeable to look upon—until the end, where the pleasant impression is negatived by the signature, "Mrs. William Brown."

At such a moment I feel a good deal as the teacher did who left Johnny to write "The boy has gone to bed" fifty times as atonement for his perpetual misuse of the past participle, and who, upon returning to her desk, found that Johnny had departed after laying thereon a paper neatly and correctly written, with this note subtended: "Dear Teacher: I have written it fifty times and you are not here and so I have went home."

Probably the most advisable course to pursue is that of laying down a few definite rules and urging that they be followed.

A married woman or a widow signs her own name, "Mary Jones Brown," to all letters, whether they be business or personal. In the telephone book, on her calling cards, and when giving her address she is "Mrs. William Brown." An unmarried woman or girl should sign her name unprefixed by a "Miss." Of course, as in the case of married women, she is "Miss Mary Helen Jones" when giving her address or on her visiting cards. In case the writer wishes to convey her full name and title, she can quite properly write in parentheses under her signature Mrs. (or Miss) So and So.

MRS. BROWN: It is customary for a widow to use her married name, "Mrs. John Brown," on her calling cards. In signing her name, however, she is "Mary Smith Brown."

L. A.: It is quite proper to introduce to a group of acquaintances already seated at a tea table any other friends who join the circle. Not to do so creates an embarrassing situation for all concerned. In this, as in many other questions of etiquette, the golden rule is a safe guide.

May I remind all those who send stamped envelopes for personal replies that the 3 cent stamp act is in effect, and that they must, if they want answers, remember this fact?

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Energetic.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IF you entered life during the week beginning today you are a child of Sagittarius, a fiery speaking sign, indicating a frank, progressive nature, full of love and hope. The Romans dedicated the latter half of November and the early part of December to Diana, goddess of the hunt, and at this time would hold great feasts in her honor.

You are possessed of an unlimited supply of energy, which is so great that you are not content to be constantly achieving yourself, but you seek to carry all those dear to you along to the same success. Your entire life is one constant round of activity, which is often a source of amazement to the more staid people of other planets.

You cannot wait for anything and this trait brings you often to the brink of disaster. With you wrongs must be righted as soon as they are discovered and ideas must take material form as soon as they are born. Surely there are none among you who are dreamers.

Your bold, fearless way of expressing yourself is an asset when directed toward public welfare, but it becomes a menace when used as a means of bringing your friends face to face with their faults. You must learn to use tact and discretion with your speech, remembering also that silence is a great deal better than the truth when the uttering of it can accomplish nothing but pain.

You are possessed of a wonderful gift of intuition and prophecy. Your sense of justice is well developed and you are innately religious. To this sign have belonged some of the greatest philosophers and teachers both in spiritual and material matters that the world has known.

To you marriage is a sacred thing, because faithful in your own affections and lofty in mind, you expect the same of the one to whom you intrust your love. You would be best understood by one of your own sign or by Aries, March 20, April 19. Libra, Sept. 23, Oct. 23 is also a congenial sign. It is difficult for people of other signs to understand the complete dependence of a Sagittarius born on affection.

You will be successful as a clergyman, professor, military officer, engineer, lawyer, musician, or artist.

The flower of Sagittarius is the goldenrod, its birthstone the topaz. Your colors are red, green, and gold, all symbols of cheer and optimism.

A Shade Beside the Mark.

"Dear Miss Blake: What is the proper thing for a girl to say to a young man after he takes her out? Do you think it is all right to say, 'I surely had a grand time this evening, and hope to be in your company again'?

RUBY."

It is all right for you to feel the full force of the expression you ask about, but it is not an elegant way of making known your pleasure. Say instead, "Thank you for the pleasant evening." That's all. Let him express the hope that you will have the pleasure repeated again soon.

Three Little Maids.

"Dear Miss BBlake: We are three girls who have been reading your answers to letters and are much interested. We want you to tell us what writing a letter in red ink means, and do you think it wrong for a boy to kiss a girl?

"L. M. AND N. C."

Writing a letter in red ink means either bad taste or a shortage in dark ink. I do.

Splendid Spirit.

"Dear Miss Blake: Can you send me the names of some soldiers or sailors that have no one to write to them? I am trying to do my bit for Uncle Sam. I have a brother of my own at the front now.

AMERICAN GIRL."

If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I will be only too happy to give you the names you request. You have the spirit of a genuine American girl soldier. I hope that thousands of other girls will become imbued with this same splendid spirit, so that no soldier or sailor will be neglected.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

MAKING CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

NOW is the time to turn our thoughts toward Christmas, and prepare sanely for that holiday. To the business girls who have the time, money, and desire to remember their friends and members of their families with gifts at Christmas, I would reiterate my yearly warning: Don't overtax your strength by sitting up night after night until the wee sma' hours sewing or working on fancy articles for your friends.

Get all your shopping (or most of it) done before the last few days. If you have not started to do your shopping, and you have a long list to take care of, start now. You will get a great deal better service from the store clerks at this time; save yourself getting into crowds; accomplish your purchasing in less time; and waste little of your own or the clerks' physical energy.

I have a letter from a business woman about the folly of overworking oneself at this time. She tells of the penalty she finally paid because she insisted on making with her own hands every gift she presented:

"Dear Miss King: Each year as Christmas approaches and I see the advance signs both in the pages of the magazines and the inviting needlework displays I want so much to tack a sign under each one, "Business girls, beware." Failing in this, won't you do the next best thing and warn your readers of the folly of using their strength and eyesight in the making of Christmas gifts, even for their own families?

"I do not think that any of us after spending our day in an office have any surplus energy to spend on work that is not absolutely necessary. I know that this same warning has been sounded year after year, but if each time only one girl heeded it, your time would be well spent.

"I, too, belonged to that great class of women who imagine that they are the shining exception to every rule and can break the rules of health without 'paying the piper.'

"I have been a business woman twelve years and each one of those twelve had spent the two or three months before Christmas making gifts that I knew would delight my family. The first few years left no visible marks of this extra tax that I was putting on myself, but gradually I found it harder to get back to normal after the holidays, but I did not take the warning until one Dec. 27 found me in a hospital with the prospect of two months away from my work before me. Then only did I realize that my misspent noon hours and evenings that I should have spent resting or in the open air had been the final drop in the bucket of my broken health.

"It wasn't an easy lesson to learn and one that cost me a great deal mentally, physically, and financially, and as for my family and friends, I find that they are every bit as happy over the things that I buy for them as they ever were in the days before I learned my lesson.

"MILDRED K."

If after doing all her Christmas shopping a business girl finds that she has some spare time on her hands, she might at small cost of energy spend that time knitting for the soldiers and sailors. Knitting, especially on the gray and khaki colored wools used for the military men, produces scarcely any strain on the eyes, and is believed by many experienced knitters to have a soothing effect on one's nerves. Of all needlework it is the least tiring.

HOW THEY CAME TO BE STATUES

By William Lightfoot Visscher

LINCOLN, THE MARTYR.

The stories of the statues that have been erected in Chicago parks were originally told by Mr. Visscher to a party of children during a series of automobile trips on which the statues were visited. Mr. Visscher's explanations to the young folks proved of such interest that the substance of his talks, with photographs of the statues, will appear in "The Tribune" from Sunday to Sunday that they may reach a wider and no doubt an equally appreciative audience.

AT almost the beginning of the park, on its south side, we come to the statue of Abraham Lincoln, for whom the park is named. The statue is of what is termed heroic size, which is larger than life size, but smaller than colossal, and is of bronze. It stands upon a vast granite rostrum and was done by the renowned sculptor, Augustus St. Gaudens. It was unveiled Oct. 22, 1887.

In face and form the statue is wonderfully faithful to those characteristics of Mr. Lincoln, and great critics of sculpture have pronounced the work to be as great as any in the world.

The sculptor, St. Gaudens, was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1848. His father was French and his mother Irish. He came to America in his infancy and died in Cornish, N. H., in 1907.

The story of Lincoln's life is one that can never too often be told. Born in Kentucky on the 12th of February, 1809, his parents moved with him to Indiana when he was only 7 years old. His father and mother were both Virginians. His own mother died when he was 9, but his father married again, an oldtime sweetheart, a year after Abe's mother died. She took a deep interest in her stepson and exerted a fine influence over him that helped him much in after life.

Lincoln went to school in the newly and sparsely settled regions where the family lived. Schools were rare, and those few were the crudest. Altogether the boy was not in school more than one year of his whole life. His own mother taught him to read, and his stepmother urged him to study and assisted him all she could. For books he had only the Bible, "Æsop's Fables," "Robinson Crusoe," "Pilgrim's Progress," a life of George Washington, and a small history of the United States. Later he borrowed books from the neighbors and become fond of the poems of Burns and the works of Shakespeare.

When Lincoln became of age he was hired out to a trader named Offutt, in Sangamon county, Illinois. He helped Offutt to build a flatboat and the two of them floated down the Sangamon and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans, where they sold their cargo. They walked the greater part of the way back. During the time that Lincoln worked in the store he studied law, with the help of the village schoolmaster, and when the store finally closed he decided to run for the legislature. Then the Black Hawk war came on and Lincoln volunteered as a soldier. He was elected a captain, but the war ended without his company getting into battle. Abe was defeated for the legislature, but he got all the votes in his precinct.

In 1834 Lincoln was elected to the legislature and was reëlected three times more. Meanwhile he continued his law studies and was admitted to the bar in 1836. He practiced the profession closely and became noted as a great lawyer. In 1846 he was elected to congress.

Lincoln thought that slavery should be disposed of as a question of domestic economy. Because of his belief he became the most powerful opponent of Stephen A. Douglas, United States senator from Illinois and one of the greatest men in the national politics of the day. Their public debates, involving for the most part the question of the rights of citizens of the territories to say whether or not they would have slavery in their regions, were battles between two giants.

The national Republican convention nominated him as candidate for that office and he was elected. Then nearly all of the southern states, where Negro slavery existed, seceded from the union. This caused the war between the north and south, and on the part of Abraham Lincoln it was a war to preserve the union of the states, but the greater element of the party that elected him had also in view the ending of Negro slavery in the United States. The war lasted about four years.

Lincoln was married in 1842 to Mary Todd, a Kentucky girl, and they had four sons. The only one that lived to be a grown man was Robert Todd Lincoln, born in 1843. I met him several times during the civil war, when he was a captain on the staff of Gen. Grant.

When the war was about ended, on the evening of April 14, 1865, President Lincoln, with his family and some friends, attended the performance of a play at Ford's theater in Washington. John Wilkes Booth, an actor, stealthily entered the box where Mr. Lincoln and his party were seated and with a pistol shot the president in the head. The bullet penetrated the brain, and the president was carried to a house across the street from the theater, where he died early the next morning.

There are many statues of Lincoln throughout the country, but this one of St. Gaudens' is declared to be the greatest of all.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

By MARION HARLAND

Books on Fancy Work.

"I SHOULD like some old books and magazines on fancy work, such as cross stitch, crochet, embroidery, etc., and will gladly pay charges. V. R."

We have many women in the Corner who do needlework, and some of them have magazines on such pursuits that they will be glad to send to this correspondent.

Copy of Song.

"I would like to have the song, words and music of 'The Flying Trapeze.' The song was well known some forty or fifty years ago. "J. H. D."

Can some one help J. H. D. out with the words and music or information as to where to get it and write for his address, enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope?

Signature of Doctor's Wife.

"Will you please tell me the proper way for a doctor's wife to sign her name? M. K."

There is no reason why a doctor's wife should write her name at the foot of a letter in any different fashion from the wife of any other professional or business man. She should sign it Mary Wilson or Mary Brown Wilson if she has a middle name she wishes to use, or if she has retained her maiden name for a middle name. When she uses her name on her calling card there is still no reason why she should intimate her husband's profession. Mrs. John Peter Wilson is the correct form in any case. Even when writing a business letter she should still sign her own name and below it put in parenthesis her married name as "Mrs. J. P. Wilson."

Patchwork Pieces to Donate.

"I have to give away a lot of silk, wool, and velvet pieces for patch work, also a bead loom with book of instructions and a lot of colored engravings for framing, nine by fourteen inches in size. Send or call for them, please, on Monday afternoons. C. E. P."

It is refreshing now and then to have an offer of something which is not accompanied by a request for a favor in return. We are always glad to do all we can to fill the wants of the Cornerites, but it is not invariably possible and an offer of help from one who desires only to give is most welcome. In writing for the address of this correspondent—and we foresee there will be an overwhelming demand for it—please do not fail to enclose the clipping and also a stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

Invalid's Chair Needed.

"My mother has been ill for three years from heart trouble and paralysis. She is not able to walk or move at all. I would be so much obliged if you would kindly place this letter in the Helping Hand and see if some one could not be found who would be [illegible] to supply my mother with a wheeled chair. W. L."

This sort of request comes with [illegible] frequency, but we always hope that once more the wish for the chair may be granted. Such wonderful things would be strange if we did not have great faith in its powers.

Poor and Needy.

"I have heard through a friend of the good work the Corner is doing and as I am poor and needy I would appreciate anything you could do for me. I am left with three children. One little girl baby 6 months old is weak and the next to her is a boy just past 3 years old. The third child is a boy of 15 and as he is my only means of support I have a hard time to get along. We would be glad and thankful for anything we could get for the children or for me and if I received anything I could not use I would gladly pass it on to some needy one. MRS. D. R."

As this correspondent does not state just what she would like I am rather at a loss to know if she desires clothing or furniture or bed clothing or what other article. It may be that she wishes reading matter. The only way in which to solve the problem is for those who think they would like to be of service to her to write to me for her address, inclosing the clipping and a stamped, addressed envelope, and then to get in touch with her and ascertain the nature of her necessities.

Youngest Woman Over 50 I Know.

Is there among your acquaintances a woman 50 years young, or 60, or even 80? What is the secret of her eternal youth? What is she doing to beat Father Time? For the benefit of the rest of womankind, who want to grow old young, please tell us about her. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No letters returned. Names will not be disclosed if you request it. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "Chicago Tribune."

Hikes with the Girls.

In our small town there is a woman of 50 who looks 30. The secret of her eternal youth is her association with young people. She is a Camp Fire guardian and takes hikes with her girls and joins them in all their sports. Her girls all like her because she is jolly, and being always in the best of good spirits keeps her young. My advice to old people who would like to look young is to cheer up. L. B.

No Wrinkles at 70.

The youngest looking woman among my friends is 70 years old, or young. She has scarcely a wrinkle in her face. Her remedy is simple and within reach of all. Every morning, without fail, she washes her face in salt and water. M. E.

[ADVERTISEMENT.]

How to Conquer Wrinkles and Reduce Enlarged Pores

Women can now have perfect complexions. After years of study a specialist has at last perfected a real complexion beautifier. This discovery is so superior to cold cream, so beautifying, so marvelous in its virtues, that it at once became the most popular complexion preparation sold in New York. You should hear the wonderful things women say about it. No wonder they are grateful when they can write such letters as this: "Neglect of my skin had given me enlarged pores, wrinkles and a sallow, lifeless complexion. I tried many kinds of face creams and lotions, massaging most religiously. I even went to beauty parlors and spent much more than I could afford. But, I still had my shameful complexion. Discouraged? I had to give up in despair! I felt that I must always shun my mirror. I was afraid my days of happiness were over. While in this frame of mind a friend, who had struggled for years with the same trouble, told me the secret of the wonderful improvement in her complexion. I hardly believed anything could make such a remarkable transformation. However, I realized that the unlovely woman always loses in competition with her more attractive sisters. So, I was willing to make one more attempt to regain my lost attractiveness. I followed the advice of my friend. In a very short time my wrinkles and enlarged pores were reduced as if by magic. This treatment cleared my skin, lightened my complexion and gave natural color to my cheeks. It also keeps my hands youthfully soft and white. Indeed, my friends do not flatter when they say I look many years younger than my age. And now I want every woman to have the same glorious chance for happiness. The method is so simple. All I do is to wash with warm water and a face cloth (without soap), and while my face is still moist I anoint my skin with Creamed La-may. I do this as often as I would otherwise wash my face. I apply it over my entire face and neck, not neglecting under my chin, where women show their age so plainly. My friends who use La-may (French, Creme L'Ame) and see how wonderfully it beautifies their complexions, appreciate my joy and understand why I am so enthusiastic." Also follow these instructions for blackheads and irritations. Remember, the big stores everywhere sell enough La-may for a month for only thirty-five cents. If you honestly value the charm of a lovely complexion you will start your treatment tonight. Then your sleep will truly be a real beauty slumber.

Everybody Must Help to Conserve Man Power

Early Christmas Shopping Becomes a Practical Necessity and a Patriotic Duty.

There is a serious shortage of labor. As Christmas approaches, it will be felt more and more. The man-power that serves you at Christmas time must be reduced to its minimum. The government—YOUR government and OUR government—demands it. The man-power that waits upon you in this store, the man-power that packs and ties your holiday purchases, the man-power that drives the delivery wagons and automobiles to your door, all must be equalized between now and Christmas.

Our government asks everybody to lend a helping hand. Every man, woman and child is drafted for this dutiful service. You can relieve the last-minute tension by doing your Christmas shopping now. So do it, please—or do it as a duty. SHOP EARLY. Do your thinking in advance. Make out your lists now. You'll be doing something "big" for your government. You'll make this a happier Christmas for yourself, for your family, for your friends, and the men who want to serve you.

Remember—that for shopping in a hurry and shopping without worry, an hour in the early morning is worth two in the afternoon. Make it early in the season and early in the day.

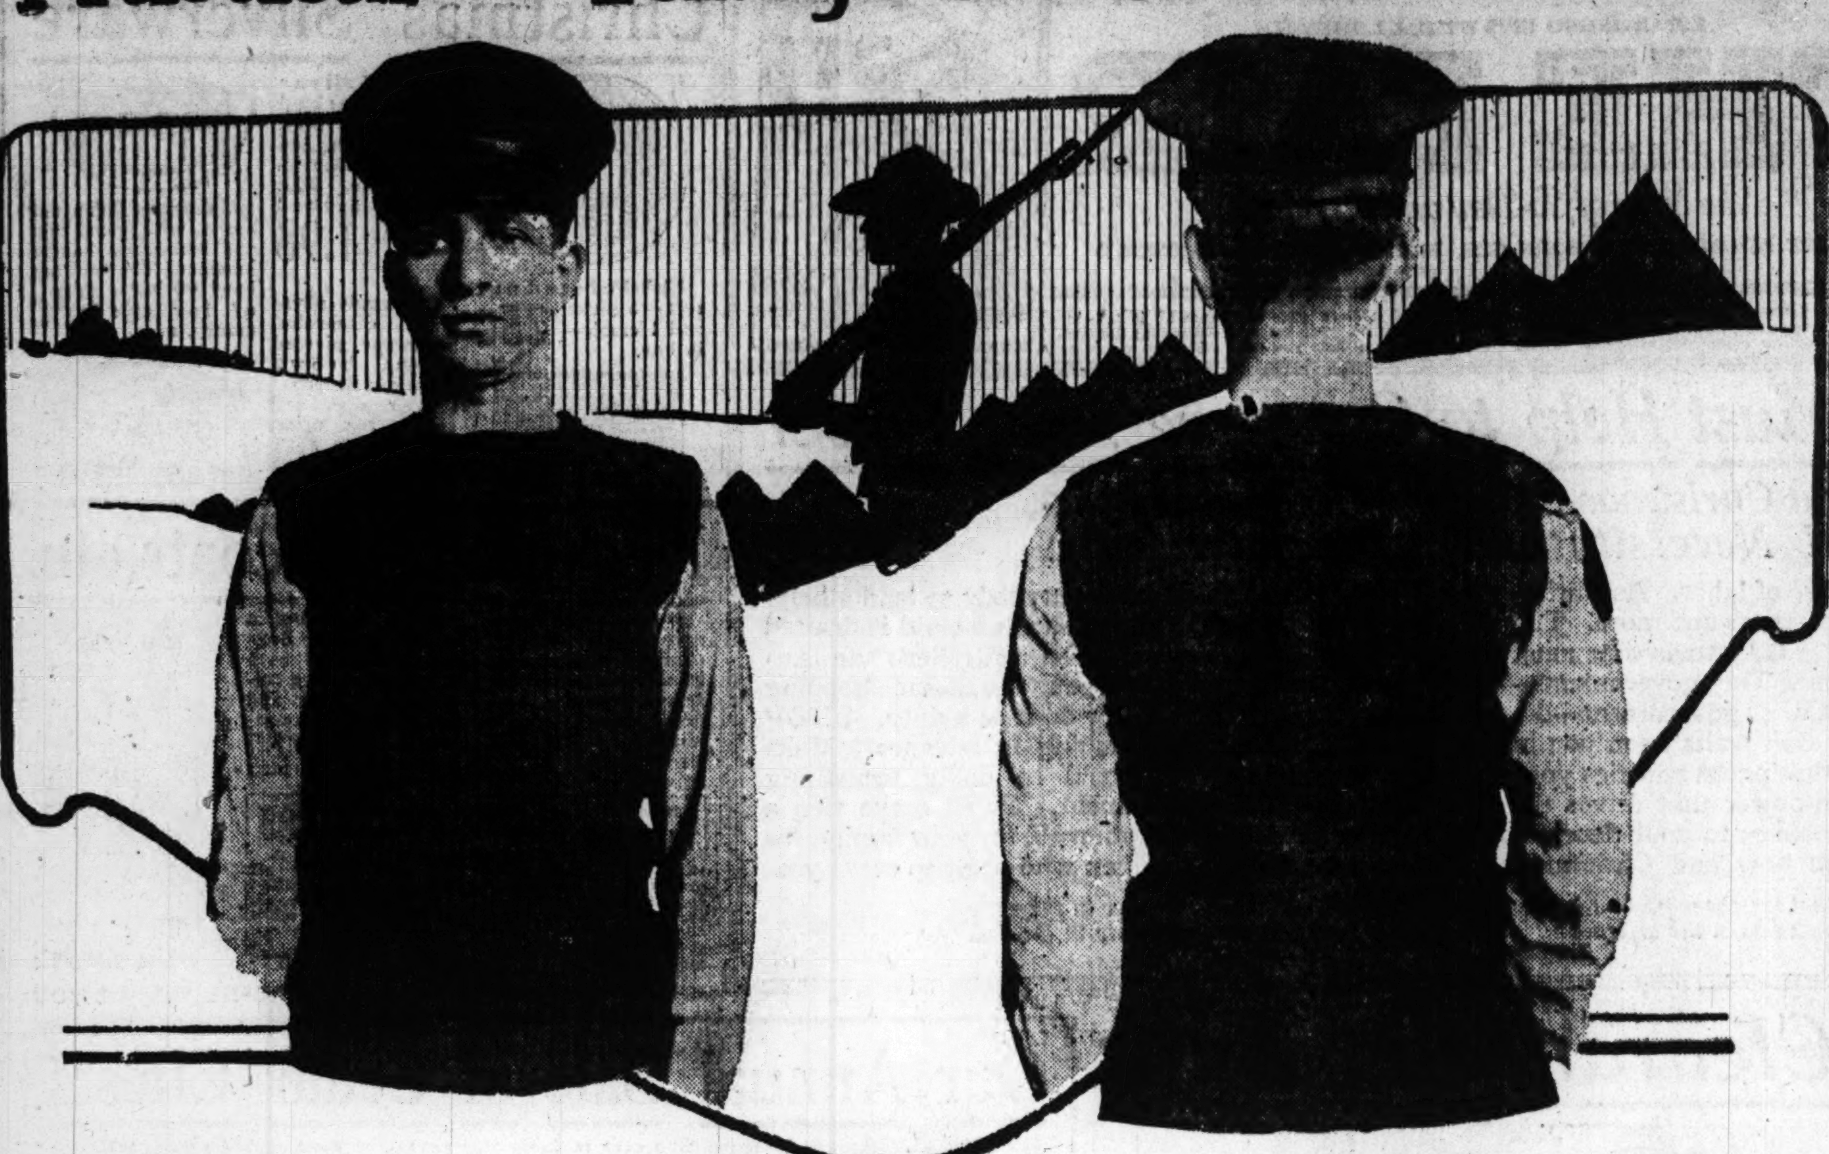
Practical and Fancy Needle-Work

By CLOTILDE



This week the directions for a man's heavy sleeveless sweater are given. These directions are furnished by the Red Cross and will be found simple and satisfactory to those who wish to make a heavier jacket than the one for which directions were printed on July 29.

Cast on 80 stitches; knit 2, purl 2 for 4 inches, and then add one stitch after every fifth stitch, until there are 96 stitches on the needle. From this point slip 1, knit 1 on the right side, purling every stitch on the wrong side for 17 inches, then knit 2, purl 2 for 2 inches, before binding off the middle 24 stitches for neck. Carry ribbing over shoulder piece, allowing 12 rows; add 2 inches of ribbing for back, slip 1, knit 1 for 17 inches, and then bind off every fifth stitch, reducing the number of stitches to original 80, before adding final 4 inches or ribbing.

Finish off with double binding. Sew up sides, leaving 8 inches for armholes. Finish off neck and armholes with two rows of single crochet.

The materials required for this sweater are one pair of No. 5 amber needles and about 3 hanks of khaki colored, gray, or black wool. It may require more wool than this, however, as the hanks vary much in size and weight.

MIDWAY in importance between the actual furnishings of a room and the bric-a-brac come the accessories that add essentially to comfort as well as to beauty. Among these are the lamps, sofa pillows, mirrors, pitcures, screens and fireplace fixtures, ferneries, covers, floor cushions, aquariums, baskets, bird cages, etc.

Many of these objects are so attractive and so negligible in cost that they are worth considering and keeping in mind for the gift giving season which will soon be upon us. As to pictures, I am always loath to advise. I have seen in the course of my work so many rooms execrably ruined by bad paintings that were retained on account of their having been gifts. Better a thousand times a bare wall than one decorated with a painting of uncertain merit.

A few simple suggestions on the subject are all that can be offered. As a rule it is best to see that whatever is hung upon a wall should be in a measure of the proportions of the wall space. [illegible] tempt to harmonize pictures in different mediums in one room. It is safer to have few pictures and to have them all in one genre, not to have a water color, an oil, and an etching in close proximity.

It frequently will be found that a well framed mirror may with advantage be substituted for a picture. This is especially good used in conjunction with some good wall furniture, a chest, a console, or other wall table. Some English mirrors are to be had finished in antique gold with blue glass borders. The Italian wood carved mirror frames are lovely. A small pair of these wall mirrors in frames of dull gilt, touched with polychrome, makes an exquisite wall decoration. They are purely ornamental, being too small to take in the reflection of one's millinery.

In a room furnished throughout with Italian furniture, such a pair of mirrors on one wall is balanced by a single larger mirror on the opposite wall. It is hung above a console table of fine walnut and on the table are two unusually high carved wood candlesticks with slender lighted wax candles that almost sanctify the owner's vanity with their church like air. In this wonderful room, which is decorated for her own use by one of the leading women decorators, is an Italian walnut day bed, with a day cover and bolster pillows of large flowered blocked linen in shades of Burgundy. There are several small comfortable upholstered arm chairs, one in gray velvet and one black satin and silver brocade, together with a tea table of quaint design. The walls are painted pale putty color and the carpet is taupe with a tinge of wistaria.

A lamp is about the most conspicuous article in a room. It should therefore be selected with the greatest care, for its decorative value or its practicability. The models shown here are attractive. The one to the right is a kerosene bracket, or it can be fitted with electricity. The bracket is painted wood and the shade of parchment. It is a copy of an antique. The lamp to the left has no vase; it is electric and has a cover of rare Chinese embroidery. The third one speaks for itself. It is a sewing stand lamp.

The movement towards greater simplicity is well appreciated today, yet we all require a certain amount of ornamentation. A room that is devoid of accessories always looks more like a furniture sample salesroom than like part of a home. It depends upon a few well chosen accessories to humanize it into a being fit to live with. It is interesting in looking over rooms that have been successfully executed by good artists to pick out the minor points that save them from being simply furniture show rooms.

Fireplace accessories play a big part in decorative work. Whenever it is at all feasible, gas logs are discarded and andirons, fire baskets to hold wood or coal, fenders, and shovel sets are put in their place. The decorative value of a real fire cannot be gainsaid.

The center group in the illustration shows one of the season's models, reproducing an old English set. The brass scuttle is in helmet shape, the fire back is of cast iron, the Georgian andirons are of brass, and the old English dairy pail is used as a wood pail.

A set of this kind, together with a brass stand containing hearth brush, shovel, poker, tongs, etc., is splendidly used in a Caen stone fireplace, with a great tapestry hung to the plaster wall above the mantel shelf. In this room the woodwork is oak, and old English dark oak furniture is used. The walls are high. At one side is a great wooden door and an inset above the door is made of cross-stitch embroidered canvas. Beginning on a line with the top edge of this inset is a long narrow panel of the same embroidery done in dark colors. This pair of panels flanks door and inset, running clear to the floor. One high backed chair is covered with gros-point embroidery. A group of high windows is divided into small panes and bordered with narrow strips of blue glass.

Few "modern conveniences" are more offensive to the artistic eye than the steam radiator. Those that are built square and low are masked with window seats, but the large upright one is a stubborn proposition. Here is a simple expedient for its disguise. Make a frame of plain wood the size of the front of the radiator and to this stretch some decorative fabric (a certain sort of gauze, sunfast, that comes in thick and thin weave like madras would be excellent); stretch this or gather it to the back of the frame. The whole thing will not be much heavier than a wire window screen. Strap it to the radiator with some metal picture wire. A little block tacked to the back of the frame will hold it away far enough to keep the gauze from direct contact with the hot pipes.

Sofa pillows are more elaborate than ever. Among the novelties are little round ones not more than six or eight inches in diameter. These are called elbow pads. They look like exaggerated penwipers. Some are made of applique felt, with the edges pinked or cut straight around, not turned in.

Strips, squares, and stole shaped pieces of upholstery, brocade, armure silk rep, satin damask, brocatelle, etc., are never amiss made up into table mats or runners. All they need is to have the edges stitched flatly down on the right side and covered with an edging of dull gilt braid or lace. Beautiful remnants can be found in upholstery departments. Table mats of all sizes are in high vogue and these are far less complicated to make than sofa pillows.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. B. J. R.: Use a two tone green and taupe in your living room, and robin's egg blue in the dining room, with old ivory ceilings in both. Introduce touches of deep blue in the living room and touches of deep blue, orange, and light green in the dining room.

MRS. C. E.: When shades are used the rollers are set close to the glass. A wall tint that would go well with both the rose carpet in one room and the blue carpet in the other would be a delicate mauve. My advice would be to tint the walls the first year and use figured draperies, papering them later if you feel so inclined.

* *

MRS. A. B.: Your plan for remodeling your windows is excellent. It would be more attractive and less expensive not to run the windows all the way up.

* *

G. E. T.: Could you get a gray-green and deep, brilliant blue wide striped silk for the bed cover? I should like it lined with flame color and edged with narrow dull gold lace. This would harmoniously tie the colors already in your room.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Were You a Success or Failure at Matchmaking?

Matchmaking mother, were you a success or a failure? And your reason? Young man, what was your experience with a matchmaking mother—embarrassing, funny, or tragic? Daughter, did your matchmaking mother lead you into a marriage for which you were grateful or over which you were heartbroken? Tell everything you know about matchmaking mothers. Write your experience as or with one. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. None can be returned. Address Doris Blake, Chicago Tribune.

Glad She Failed.

When I was 16 and the oldest in the family, my mother thought it natural for me to marry young. For me she had picked a neighbor boy who was fair in looks but had bad habits. Every evening when I came home from work she would have him around the house doing errands.

When she thought I was away, and I was standing behind the vines on the porch, I heard her tell him he should ask me to go to the show and she would pay our way, and he did. From that on I had no use for him whatever.

She also tried many other ways and means to bring us to matrimony, but I finally married the man of my choice and am happy, and the other man is our neighbor, and mother often says how glad she is that I did not marry him. J. F.

One of the Family.

I had been going with a young woman for a few months and she asked me to come up for Sunday night supper. I came, I saw, and evidently I conquered, for in the midst of the meal her mother put her arm across my shoulder and said, "Give my son-in-law some more potato salad." Well, to say the least, I was uncomfortable, and, believe me, "I'll never go there any more." H. B.

Had the Usual Effect.

When I was a young man I called on a young woman to whom I think I should now have been married had it not been for her matchmaking mother. If for any reason I failed to make my regular call her mother was sure to inform me of a dangerous rival. To cap the climax she brought me the girl's hope chest and showed me everything therein, intimating what a wonderful wife her daughter would make. This, coupled with various other incidents, had the usual effect—the reverse action. However, in six months this ambitious mother had "her daughter off her hands" married to a man she never loved. H. Mother Got Him.

My mother was a born matchmaker and was successful with nearly all but me. Being a widow and depending on me for support, I did not blame her for trying to marry me off.

I was keeping company with a man considerably older than myself but a thorough business man. He lived in another town, so consequently I did not see him often. In the meantime, much to mother's disgust, I had other and younger company.

But when he did come my mother did everything but propose for him. Finally one day he came unexpectedly and found me out; he proposed to my mother and she accepted. I was perfectly happy, but rather surprised to say the least. M. A. M.

Her First Shampoo.

I believe this is the most embarrassing thing that could happen to any one. The first time I ever had my hair washed I didn't have the slightest idea what was expected of me. Picture me mounting the chair on my knees with the idea of hanging my head over the drain board. The sweet voice of the young woman saying, "Sit right down and I'll be there in a moment," brought me to my senses. E. D.

And a Narrow Escape.

I was on a boat with a small crowd, among whom was a grass widow, who was an acquaintance of mine. She was looking through a comic journal and, turning to me, said, "Why do these comic writers always make fun of mothers-in-law?" Then, without waiting for an answer, she continued, "Ah, me! I shall never have another mother-in-law!" And she looked earnestly out into the vista.

I glanced at her, and, without thinking, said, "My mother died when I was a child."

She laughed merrily and asked, "Is that a proposal?"

Then I came to my senses, blushed, and shook my head, and walked away, whistling—but it was a most embarrassing moment! P. C.

Looking for War News.

This incident proved rather embarrassing to me: It was late at night and I was on my way home in a partly filled street car.

A passenger, on leaving, put a newspaper on the seat and I, anxious to learn the latest war news, dashed madly across the aisle to get the paper. It proved to be some foreign language paper and I foolishly sat there pretending I was reading it.

To cap the climax, a loud talking, intoxicated man sat down alongside of me, pointed out something in the paper and talked to me in a foreign language which I did not understand.

With many eyes looking at me, I finally collected my wits and got off the car somewhat short of where I intended to get off. R. C.

"I'll Show You How Corns Peel Off!"

Ever Peel a Banana Skin? That's It!

"I should worry about those corns—I just put some 'Gets-It' on." Corns used to pester the world into frenzy, enduring pain, digging, slicing toes, tinkering with plasters and tape, trying to fix a corn so it wouldn't hurt. But now no one in the world "should worry," because the moment you put "Gets-It" on, it means the end of a corn. There is nothing in the world like "Gets-It"—nothing as sure and certain—nothing that you can count on to take off a corn or callus every time, and without danger. The corn never grew that "Gets-It" will not get. It never irritates the flesh, never makes your toe sore. Just two drops of "Gets-It" and presto! the corn pain vanishes. Shortly you can peel the corn right off with your finger and there you are—corn-free and happy with the toe as smooth and corn-free as your palm. Never happened before, did it? Guess not.

How to Judge a Woman by Her Hair

There is real common sense in just noticing whether the hair is well kept to judge of a woman's neatness or good taste. If you are one of the few who try to make the most of your hair, remember that it is not advisable to wash the hair with any cleanser made for all purposes, but always use some good preparation made expressly for shampooing. You can enjoy the very best by getting some Canthrox from your druggist, dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Dandruff, excess oil, and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is. Its lustre and softness will also delight you, while the stimulated scalp gains the health which insures hair growth. —Advertisement.

A FOOD CARD THANKSGIVING.

AMPLE allowance is made on the food card for the use of the time honored Thanksgiving turkey. Reading the first statement, we see justification for its use, since it is not one of the foods "of the most concentrated nutritive value," and it does require an exceptional amount of shipping space, as well as tonnage, since it must be iced.

The following is a simple menu:

Hearts of Celery.
Ripe Olives.
Cream of Celery Soup.
Roast Turkey with Brown Gravy, Potato Stuffing.
Apple or Cranberry Jelly.
Mashed Potato.
Stewed Onions.
Turnips English Style.
Fruit Salad.
Pumpkin, Squash or Indian Pudding.
Parched Corn or other tidbits.

Preparing the Turkey.

Unless a woman has prepared other poultry for cooking she should not attempt to get a turkey ready for roasting before she has seen some one do the work, unless she is a good student. In the latter case she should consult several good cook books. An adequate description of how to clean, dress, stuff, and truss a turkey would fill more than a small booklet. There are objections to letting the butcher do all the work, but it is a good plan for you to watch him remove the tendons for you, if you do not know how or what a tendon is.

If you are economical you will take the feet and the part below the joint home, for a fine jellied stock. To clean them is a nice task requiring a flame to singe the scales well. There are some newer methods of preparing turkeys which I have not tried, and therefore cannot recommend. One is a sort of cold pack detail. The turkey is scalded for two or three seconds and dipped in cold water to plump it, after which it is hung in a cool place for twenty-four hours.

Roasting the Turkey.

The truest way of roasting is on a spit. Next to that, and nearest like it, is roasting the turkey in a broiling oven, if you have one deep enough. A good deal of fuel may be saved by this method. The meat should be basted every ten or fifteen minutes, and will need to be turned once or twice. To cook a turkey in a covered roaster is to pot roast it. In good pot roasting we baste with a spoon, as in other roasting. This is because fat will not rise in steam, so the meat is basted with water only which, if left to itself, is likely to make it stringy and hard to carve. To pot roast in the truest sense gives an opportunity to season a poor piece of meat and make it as fine as the finest unseasoned.

Somebody has to use the poorer grades of turkeys. These baked in a covered roaster with a nice bed of seasoning vegetables, with spoon basting occasionally, may be highly palatable. In basting a turkey it is highly essential to pay attention to the dryer parts like the thighs. Well basted they yield a good many portions of delicious dark meat to supplement that of the second joint. The "oyster," or what the French call the "part the fool leaves," sunk in this second joint must not be forgotten when the carving is done. A good carver leaves a clean rack, while the good cook simmers for twelve hours for an excellent stock in which to cook vegetables.

Celery Soup.

Use the leaves and coarser outer stocks for a soup stock. Peel and scrape off any brown parts and any coarse veins, and cut up into pieces that will look well in a salad. Drained off, the cooked celery may be used instead of raw celery in a turkey salad, to be served with a mayonnaise sauce. Measure the cut up celery and add one onion to each cup. Cook in twice as much water added cold as there is celery. A little turmeric powder seems to set the celery flavor, but is not positively necessary. It also colors the part to be used as a salad, and the soup as well. Cook twenty minutes, drain off liquid, prepare thickening by melting for each cup of liquid one tablespoon of butter, and stirring a tablespoon of flour smooth in that, and then adding the liquid. If no other seasoning except salt a little freshly ground white pepper and a bit of nutmeg is added this makes a good soup to serve with bread sticks which are oven toasted bread cut in long blocks. A few almonds blanched, chopped and pounded fine makes this soup more festive.

Cranberry Sauce and Jelly.

Cranberries this year should be cooked and sieved before any sugar is added to them and must be any way if we want to use them jellied. Allow one cup of boiling water to a quart of berries, take off any poor ones that rise instantly to the top of the water, and cook until all pop or usually no more than five minutes. Sieve and add two cups of sugar, stir until well dissolved, and possibly over the fire until they just boil and then skim if necessary. Pour into molds rinsed with water. It is more economical not to heat after adding sugar.

Stewed Onions.

There is no need of and there is real loss in cooking onions in two waters. Peel and slice or cut yet finer and cook in the least possible water, over the smallest possible fire, after the water boils, in a covered kettle. A half cup of water is enough for two pounds of onions, which will not be the slightest bit strong if the cooking does not go on after they are tender. Onions can be boiled strong like tea. Keep rather dry, but finish with a few tablespoons of cream and possibly a little butter. Salt lightly and add a bit of pepper if you like to.

Pear Salad.

If one wants a salad that is the best sort of a transition to a simple dessert pare and cut in small slices sufficient pears, sprinkle them lightly with sugar or roll them in powdered sugar and serve with a sweetened and flavored whipped cream. Two or three tablespoons of cream whipped will go a long way. Nice flavored table apples may be prepared in the same way.

Squash Pudding.

Steam squash until soft, put through sieve, add to each cup and half of it one egg, a pinch of salt, and spices to taste. Beat till smooth and bake in individual buttered cups or in large dish. Serve hot or cold with cream. A little cream added to the mixture makes it richer and it may be sweetened to taste with molasses or sugar.

Indian Pudding.

A standard simple recipe which may be varied by adding fruit is the following: Five cups of milk which may be skimmed, five or six tablespoons of cornmeal, one-half cup of molasses, one teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of ginger. Cook milk and meal over top of stove gently until a bit thickened, stirring over a little fire add other ingredients, pour into buttered pudding dish or enamel pan, and bake in a slow oven for three hours. Serve with cream or hard sauce.

Parched Corn.

Pick over a cup of sweet corn, put in strainer, set strainer in bowl and pour over the corn boiling water to cover. Let stand five minutes, drain for a while, then wipe dry and parch in one tablespoon of butter in a cast iron frying pan over the gas turned rather low. Stir almost constantly for twenty minutes, when it should be evenly and thoroughly browned, and puffed so as to pop. Drain on blotting paper and sprinkle lightly with salt. Eat the same day as parched. This may be put through a coffee mill and eaten like a cereal. This is the best way for people with poor teeth to eat parched corn.

She Lost a Farmer.

I was a city girl, but much interested in a farmer—so much so that I pretended to know many things about country life of which I was entirely ignorant. One Sunday afternoon, riding through the country, I had just demonstrated that I did not know what a silo was, when I saw something that made me exclaim, "O, see those cute little white animals! What are they?" Well, he married a girl who not only knew silos but all colors of pigs.

It was my e ambition, when I was a boy on the farm, to some day be a driver of race horses. I loved horses and liked to read about the races. My father would never allow me to drive his good horses, even around the farm, so one day I hitched up the old mule to a buckboard and started down the road. We only started, for the old mule started kicking and when he was through the buckboard was all to pieces and I was sitting at the side of the road. That ended my ambition to drive horses.

SPIEGEL'S Grand Round-Up Removal Sale Bargains

The greatest furniture sale that Chicago has ever known now enters the final stage. For weeks and weeks the thriftiest people of Chicago, real downright bargain hunters, have been sweeping our floors clean of their tremendous stocks. Prices have been slashed; extra liberal terms have been allowed; unusual privileges extended, so that we will not have to move a single stick of our present stocks into our new building.

Quantities that seemed unending when we started have dwindled to a mere handful of things now. Each day sees some new line or department entirely wiped out. Some of the choicest and very handsomest things remain, but only in small lots; only two or three or a half dozen to a line.

These things we want to close out immediately. There isn't room here to even picture them. We rely entirely upon a further price-cutting to close them out at once. Here is one last grand opportunity for you to get some long-wished-for new piece of furniture at a price that will never again be possible for even years to come. Only a tremendous undertaking such as ours—moving a great big six-story stock of furniture, moving in addition to that an entire warehouse-full of brand new house furnishing stocks—could possibly induce us to make the price sacrifices that we offer you now.

Get your share of this splendid feast of bargains. Visit our store during this final round-up. You'll find everything a fourth off and sometimes even one-half what you might expect to pay.

And besides that, you can make practically your own terms. A dollar or two will bring your purchases into your home immediately, and we give you a year or two beyond that to pay for them.

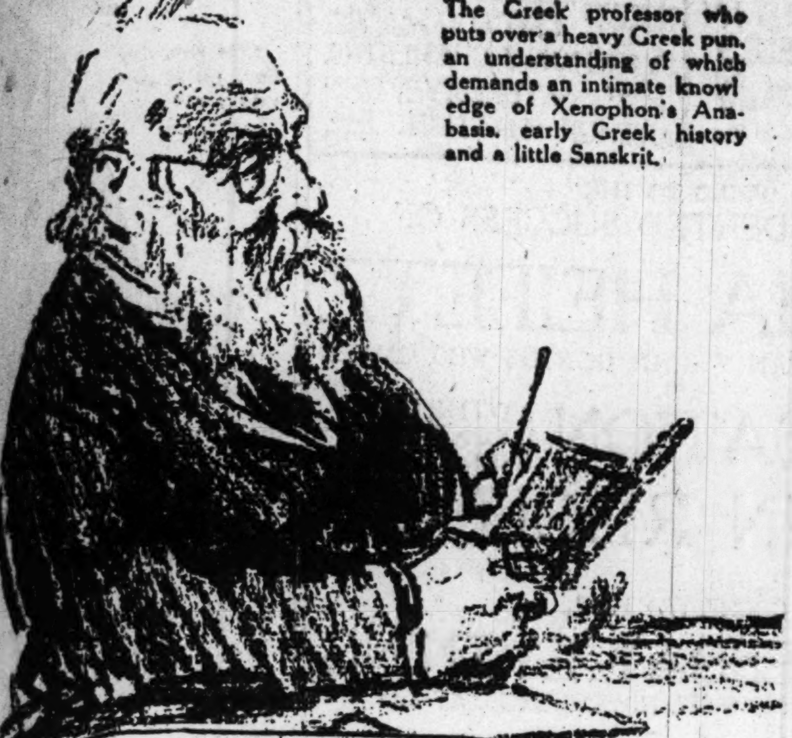
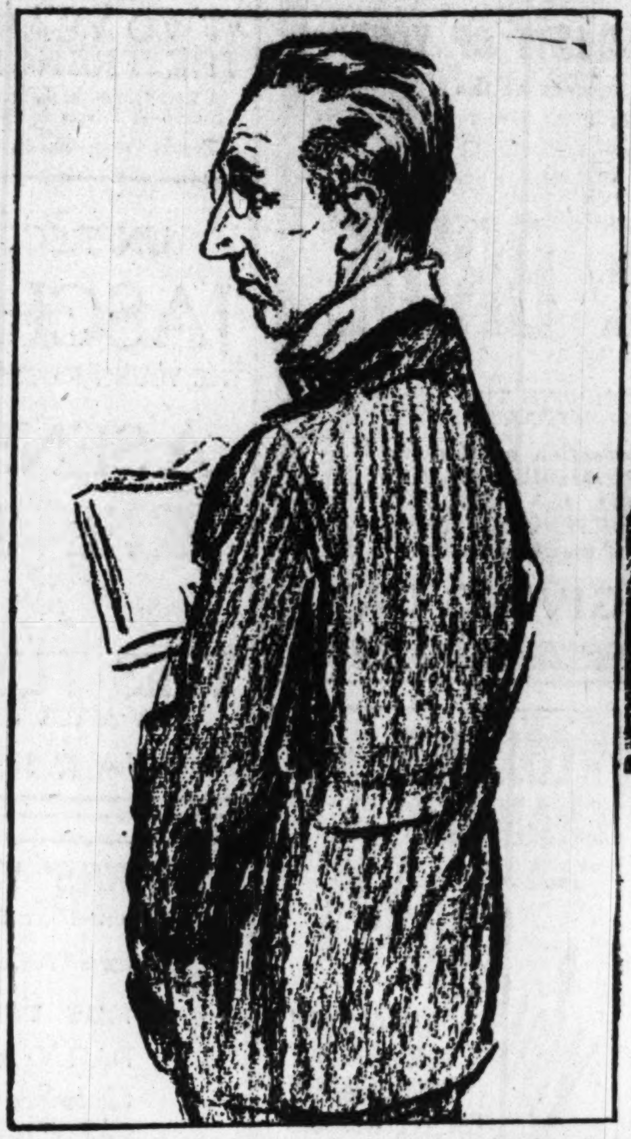
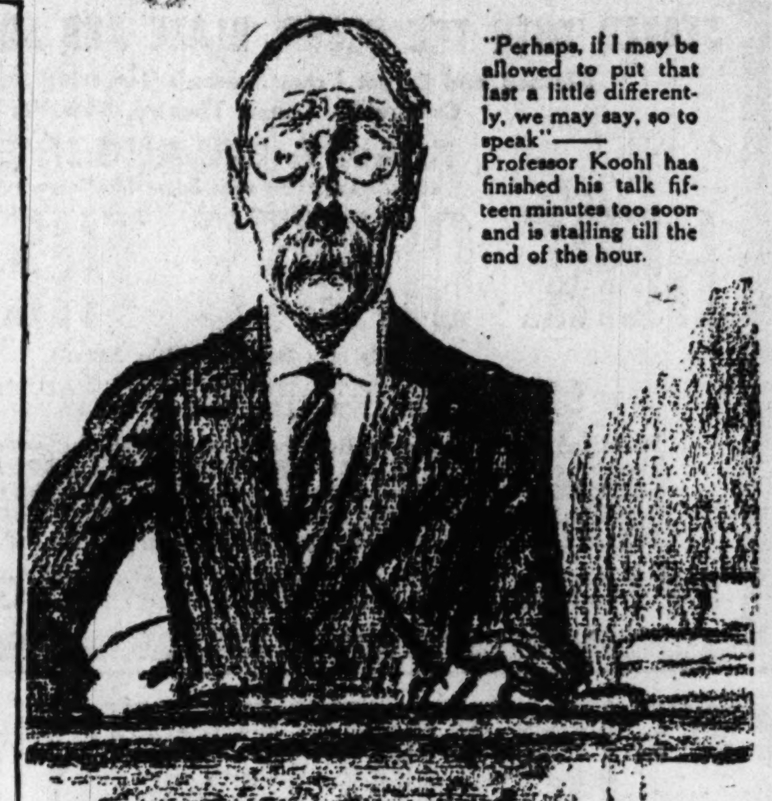
Among Us Mortals
The Classroom
Drawn by W. E. Hill



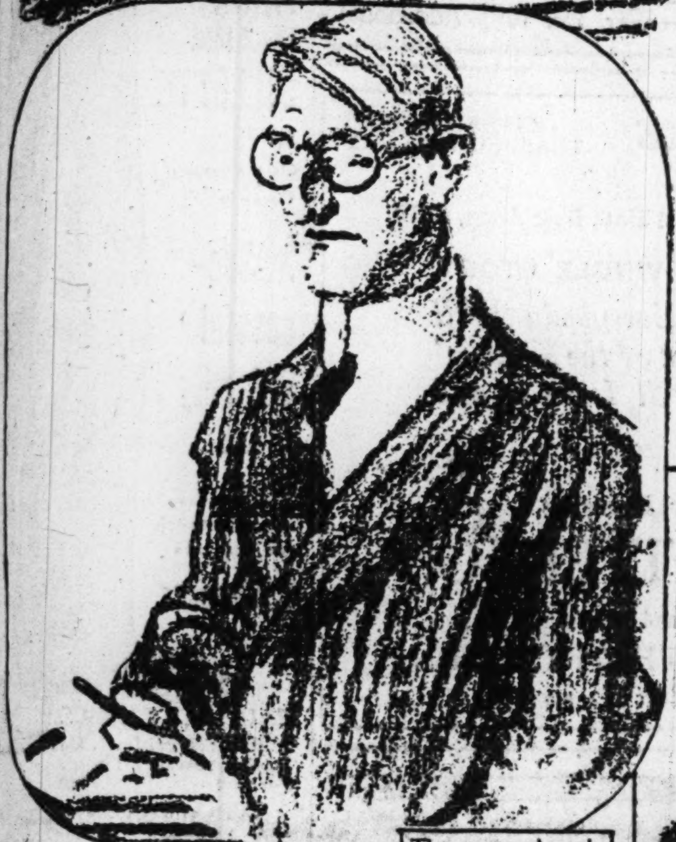
The Greek professor who puts over a heavy Greek pun, an understanding of which demands an intimate knowledge of Xenophon's Anabasis, early Greek history and a little Sanskrit.



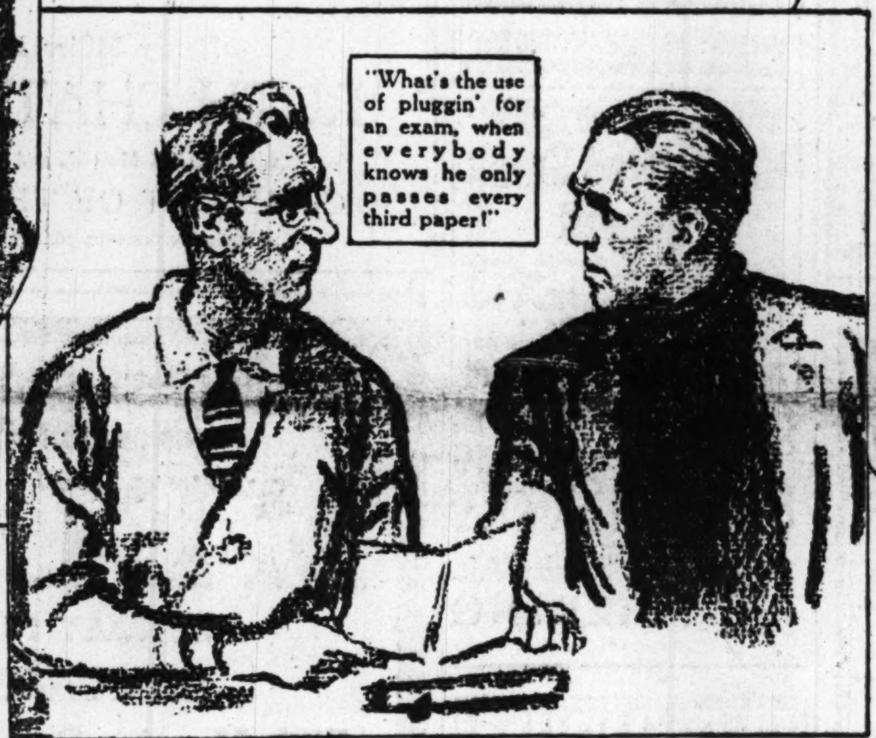
Roger, who expected some prompting from his friends, is not getting proper support in the sight translation.



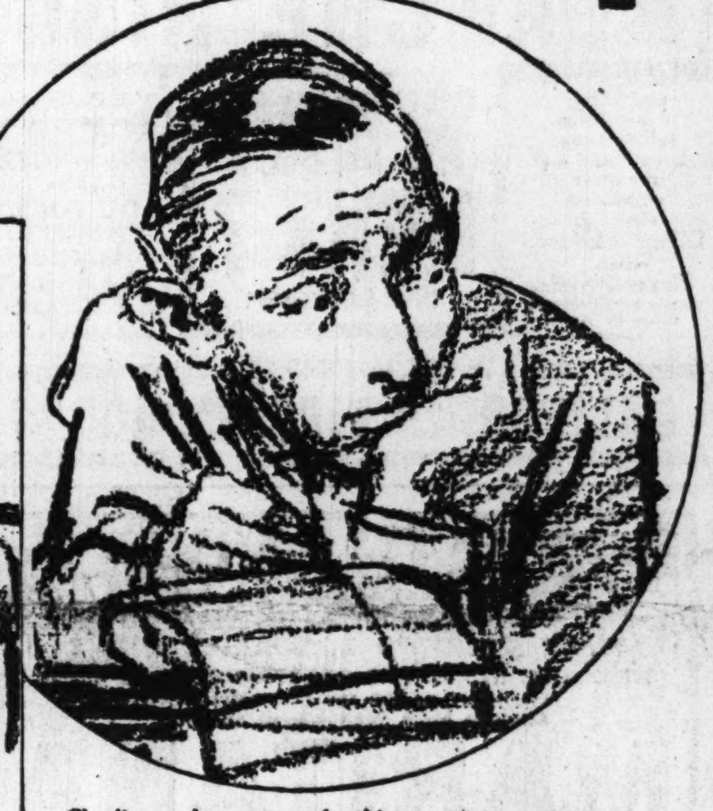
"Perhaps, if I may be allowed to put that last a little differently, we may say, so to speak"—— Professor Koohl has finished his talk fifteen minutes too soon and is stalling till the end of the hour.



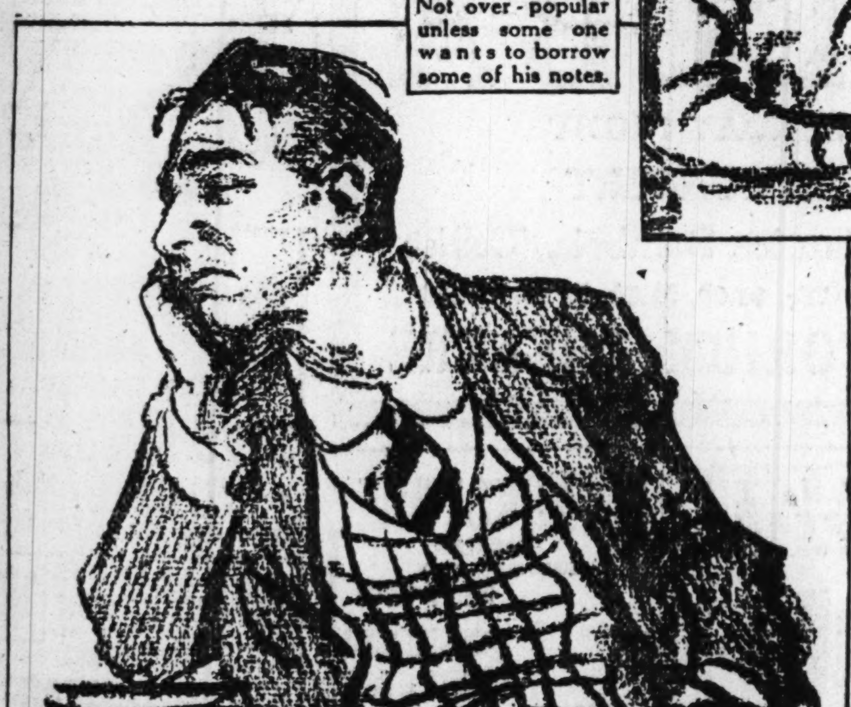
The man who always answers right when most of the class have failed on the question. Not over-popular unless some one wants to borrow some of his notes.



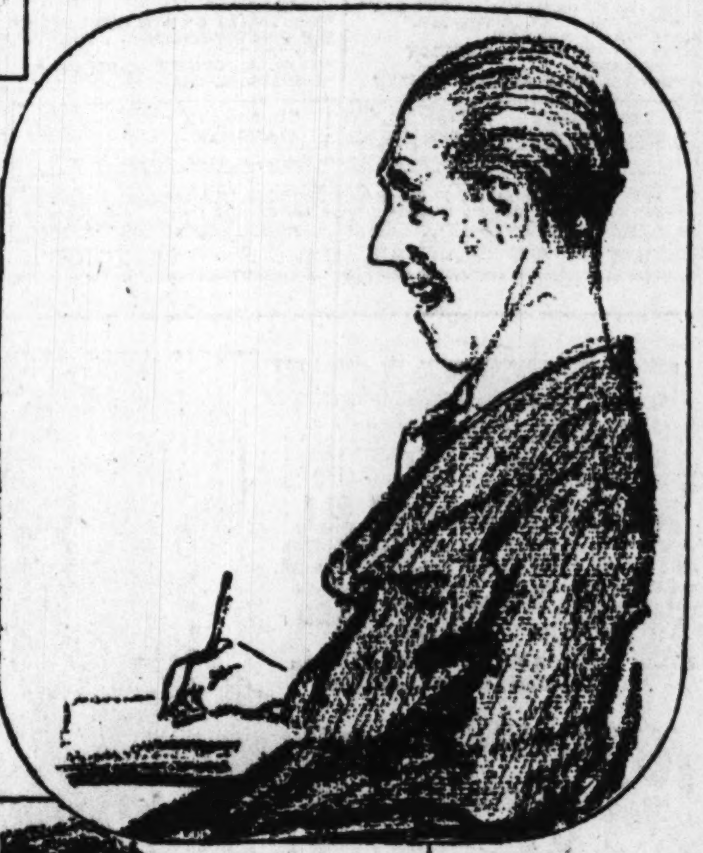
"What's the use of pluggin' for an exam, when everybody knows he only passes every third paper!"



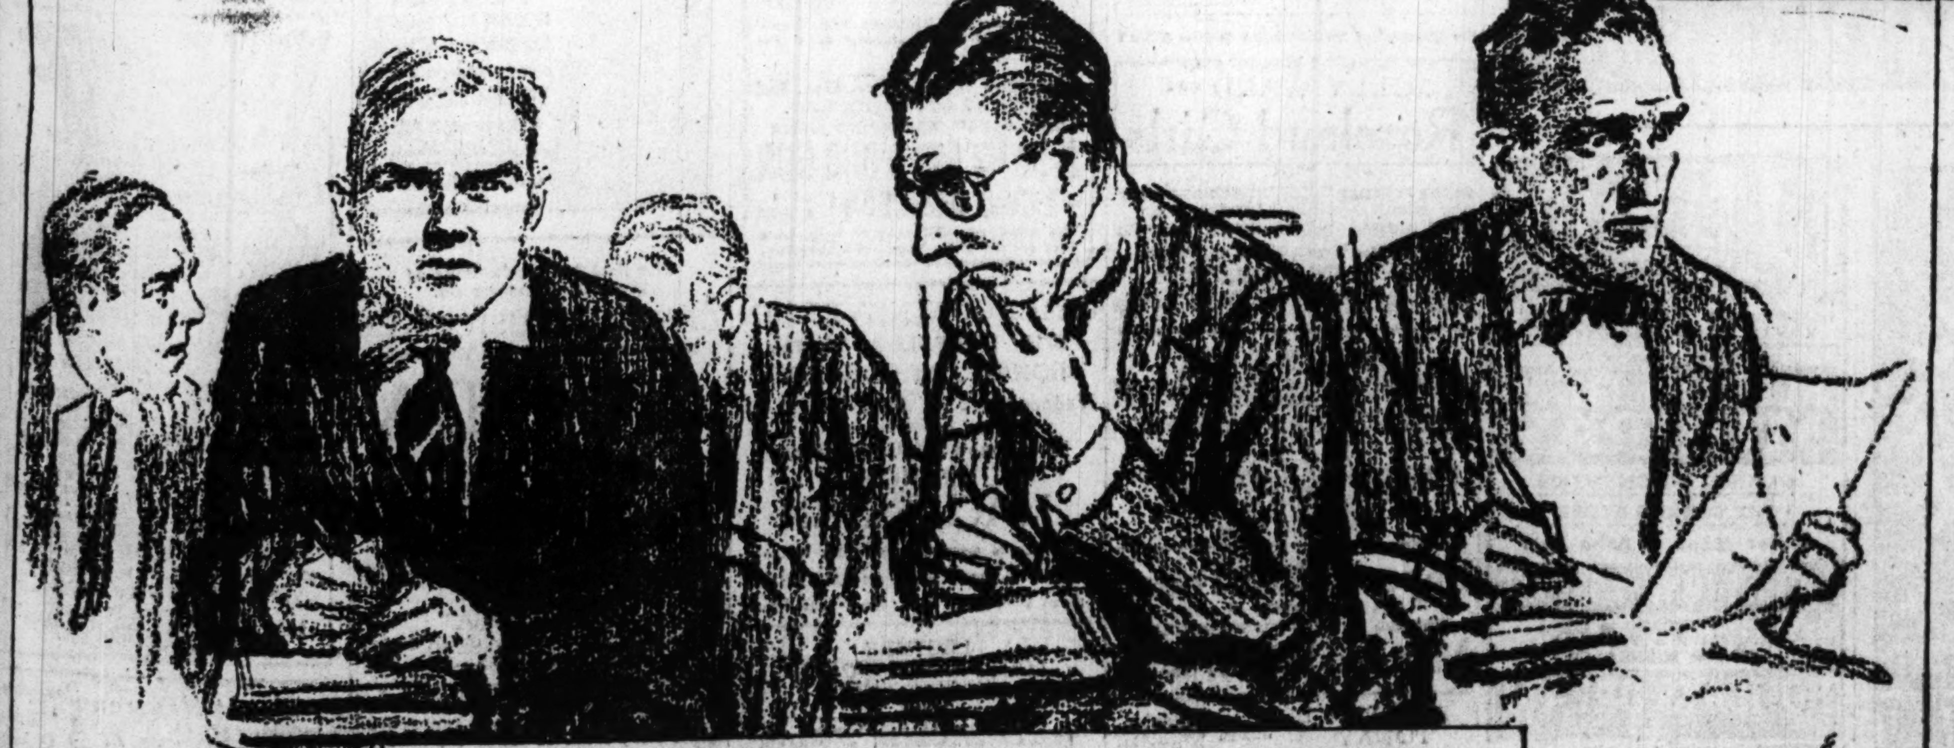
Charlie, under cover of taking copious notes figures out his week's cash account.



Eddie has a terrible morning-after headache and is awfully proud of it. He is hoping some one will ask him how he got it.



Mr. Spiegel, who has overcut the course five times and is worried about his mark, getting all ready to burst into uncontrollable laughter when the Greek professor tells the ancient joke.



The exam.—"Contrast as briefly as possible, laying due emphasis on the causal qualities, the characters of 'Lady Macbeth' and 'Tom Jones.'"

News and Views of the Theaters

By Percy Hammond

JACK LAIT and the Hattons having proved so rich an investment for Oliver Morosco, that canny Californian seeks other good critics to write dramas for him. In preparation for his management are plays by the Hattons, Ashton Stevens, Mr. Lait, and Alan Dale. Mr. Dale is reviewer for a Brooklyn periodical, and his play, dealing with sex, is called "The Madonna of the Future."

Mr. Mantle writes that Mrs. Fiske's "Madame Sand" is a brilliant, though brittle satirical comedy. He suspects that for those who seek a play for the play's sake, and with a fixed notion that a play must tell one connected story rather than bits of several stories, "Madame Sand" will be disappointing.

Left more or less at leisure by the failure of "The Old Country," William Faversham has time for day dreams. Among these visions is one of a Shakespearean festival in New York next spring with many stars acting in four dramas by Him. De Croiset, the French author of "The Hawk," cables Mr. Faversham that he has written a new play suitable for American audiences.

"Odds and Ends," Jack Norworth's new revue in Jack Norworth's new theater in New York is favorably referred to by correspondents. The outstanding feature, besides Mr. Norworth and Miss Lillian Lorraine, seems to be Mlle. Aquateeta, an ablutionist, of whom it is said with surprise that she eats a banana and smokes a cigaret though under water.

N. C. Goodwin and Arnold Daly who, since the advent of "Why Marry," had been, like the fabled swans, coupled and inseparable, are, as the saying is, off'n each other. "He's made me more trouble than all my wives," said Mr. Goodwin to Miss Emma Carus the other evening as he recited the details of the debacle which ended the friendship.

Possibly no one in this neighborhood will care a tinker's dam, but it is, nevertheless, a fact that Miss Alexandra Carlisle has been made the star of "The Country Cousin," instead of its featured player. That is, the advertisements now say Alexandra Carlisle in "The Country Cousin," not "The Country Cousin," with Alexandra Carlisle.

Leo Ditrichstein is complimented in New York for his performance of "The King." He plays the young and amiable ruler of Moldavia, who is in Paris negotiating a loan for his government. Most of the negotiations occur in the boudoir of an actress. Mr. Mantle writes that it will shock the seminaries, but that Broadway will love it.

High words are passing between Arthur Hammerstein, manager of "De Luxe Annie," and Vincent Serrano, the player of a part in it. Mr. Hammerstein charges Mr. Serrano with being a slacker in refusing to go with the other actors to Plattsburg to entertain the soldiers, and Mr. Serrano has resigned. His reasons for declining to perform before the army are these, if you care to hear them:

"It is true that I have not found it possible to go to Plattsburg on any of the Sunday nights proposed. One of these nights was the date of the Lambs' dinner to Dr. Leiser, one of my closest friends. As for going next Sunday, this is our last week in New York, we have a professional matinée in sight, and also an extra Thanksgiving matinée.

"One of my chief reasons for being unwilling to go is my desire to be fair to Jane Grey, our leading woman. Miss Grey has not been well, and, as a matter of fact, has been kept up by doses of strychnine. The hard journey and performance might prove extremely harmful to her health.

"As to my being a slacker, I made speeches on thirteen different nights in behalf of the Liberty loan, and I am willing to do anything within reason for the cause."

Prof. Kaplan, who imparts the ordinances, rules, regulations, and bylaws of English composition to young women at the University of Chicago, has written a one-act play called "The Critic's Comedy." Of equal importance as news is the fact that it will be produced next week in New York by the Washington Square players. It is about a lady critic.

Miss Laurette Taylor and Miss Marie Doro are among the victims of the troubled times, their plays, "The Wooing of Eve" and "Barbara," having waned in New York. Miss Taylor will soon try again in "Happiness," also by her husband. Her rôle in this will be that of a milliner's apprentice.

Eighty productions have been made in New York this season, fifteen more than were launched in the same time last year. Forty-five of these are already on the road or in the storehouse. Among the stars who have failed are William Faversham, Henry Miller, Miss Grace George, Walker Whiteside, Miss Alice Nielsen, Miss Billie Burke, Miss Laura Hope Crews, and Miss Henrietta Crosman.

One plain fellow to another:

New York, Nov. 20.—My Good Friend: In your article on "Why Marry?" I read this phrase: "Mr. Breese is a brusque (pronounced 'brewsque' by Mrs. Hackett) millionaire." The word brusque is of French origin and brewsque is by far the more elegant pronunciation. Just common garden fellows like you and me would stick to the brusque pronunciation, but brewsque is decidedly better. . . .

Most sincerely,
JAMES K. HACKETT.

Here is a note from Oliver Morosco confessing that he did not write the bright stuff in "What Next?" though credited with it in the playbill:

Chicago, Nov. 22, 1917.

My Dear Mr. Hammond: In your report of "What Next" in last Monday's TRIBUNE you were kind enough to credit Mr. Harris and the undersigned with some particularly laughable lines read by Messrs. Flanagan and Edwards of the company supporting Miss Ring at the Olympic. In justice to these entertaining jesters I desire to make known to you that the lines you quoted and commented on were theirs, having been absorbed into the performance when they joined the company and we interpolated their very successful vaudeville specialty. This letter, like the song they refer to, is "by request."

Very truly yours, O. MOROSCO.

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Dear Sir: Space! Space! Space! In the name of charity! There has been comment, absurd though it is, which must be answered. Somebody with the mentality of a private detective has been good enough to criticize Mr. Goodwin and myself for giving a benefit on Tuesday next, Nov. 27, for the Italian Red Cross ambulance corps instead of the American Red Cross.

This line of thought was answered recently most effectively by Mr. Lloyd George of England, who said: "To win this war we must have unity in action—coöperation instead of individual ambition. Our purpose is to defeat the Hun, and it is a matter of indifference to me whether the Americans, the British, the French, or the Italians do this—so that the work is done and the terrible useless tragedy ceases."

As the Italians badly need ambulances, it is our idea to defend the weak point by trying to send them some. We hope to get enough money at this benefit to supply the Italian ambulance corps with at least two ambulances and we feel confident that if the loyal Chicago public support this cause with the great enthusiasm which the bill must surely provide, then our object would meet with success.

The curtain rises at 2:20 sharp on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 27, at Cohan's Grand Opera house on Clark street.

Until then— Truly yours,
ARNOLD DALY.

Mr. Daly's new play, "Democracy's King," will be given for the first time at this benefit. The characters include the Kaiser by Edmund Breese, King George by Ernest Lawford, King Albert by Charles Lane, Poincare by Ferdinand Munier, Kerensky by Harold West, King Emmanuel by Richard Sterling, and The American by Arnold Daly.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It is interesting to watch the crowds on Broadway when the lights go out at 11 o'clock by order of the waste not, want not experts of the government. They stop, like so many Reubens before the pictured curiosities of a sideshow, and gaze at them. They make bets as to which will be the next to flicker its concluding flicker, and laugh gleefully when they win. And to pick the one that will cheat a minute or two, and thus get the benefit of so much additional advertising, is apparently as exciting as picking winners at a horse race or laying odds against a case card.

The early theaters have emptied their audiences into the street by 11, and the cabarets have not yet gathered them in, so there is always a crowd present for the ceremony. A disappointed crowd, usually, because the street is not immediately plunged in darkness. It is surprising what a slight difference the sudden obliteration of the dancing gum men, the three storied advice on the proper underwear to wear next summer, and the talking sign's flashing recommendation to playgoers not to miss "Romance and Arabella," which has been safely buried in the storehouse these two weeks, really makes in the lighting scheme of Broadway. Going out, they leave a dark fringe of steel around the horizon, like the spidery ruins of a fire swept San Francisco, but the street itself is as bright as ever. Even strangers in town have no difficulty in finding their way back to their hotels, if they have any intention of going back, which they have not.

Mark Klaw of Klaw & Erlanger, proposes that the lights be kept burning from dark till 8 o'clock, and then be put out from 8 till 11, while the big crowd is indoors, being lighted again from 11 till 12:30. But the government in Washington has not so far reacted to the suggestion. From which one might conclude that the government, being more or less paternal in its interests just now, is as much concerned for the children who do not go to the theaters as for those who do.

Ann Murdock is at the Empire with an adolescent comedy called "The Three Bears," and John Drew is at the Forty-eighth Street theater with the adult "Gay Lord Quex." The whirligigs of time and change have played no more fantastic joke than this in the theaters in a long time. For nearly twenty years Drew played at the Empire—was its chief attraction for half that time, in fact, and shared the honor later only with Maude Adams.

Miss Murdock, in those days, was either at school or playing saucy soubrettes with no thought of ever being starred—certainly none of being a Frohman star and at the sacred Empire! While Mr. Drew expected confidently to finish his days in the American theater on this stage!

But Frohman died and Drew, unhappy with the executors of his estate, cast his lot with John D. Williams, the old Frohman secretary, while Alf Hayman, taking up the work of advancing Miss Murdock where Mr. Frohman had left it, now presents her as a star in her own right, with full theatrical honors.

Mr. Drew has some trouble with the revived Marquis of Quex. It is hard to think of the American actor as an English roué. Hard to think of him as any one but Mr. Drew, in fact, trite as the observation has become. So there is little, if any, projection of character.

The play itself holds up rather well. It not only was a well made play when Pinero wrote it, twenty years ago, but he recently has revised it for Sir George Alexander's use in London. Of course most of the situations have been worn thin in the last dozen years, and, while the big scene of the third act is still tense and dramatically fine, the approach is slow and formal and not particularly exciting. Not, at least, with a mixed English and American company playing it.

Margaret Illington helps minimize the illusion by being not at all true to type as an English manicurist. A good actress is Margaret, but of a definitely limited range. Once she has the third act scene in hand she carries it splendidly. You may recall this episode as that in which Sophie Fulgarney, intent on saving her foster sister from marrying the wicked Quex, traps him while he is visiting an ex-mistress in her bedroom. He comes to plead with this lady friend that he be let off from further engagements and allowed to become a respectable married party, but Sophie refuses the explanation and is set on exposing him. He turns the tables on her by getting the mistress out of the way and locking Sophie in, so that if the house is aroused it is she, and not the other, who will appear the philandering female. And then, impressed by her willingness to face even this test, Quex releases her, proving by this act and a later confession of faith that he is several shades lighter than the gossips had painted him.

It is easily one of the best acting scenes in all the range of the social problem drama, and both Mr. Drew and Miss Illington extract the best values from it. But it is all there is left of the play for the entertainment of this generation.

Miss Murdock has come back from a year in the movies a changed actress. Where she was fidgety she is now calmness itself. Where she was actively fearful of being out of the limelight a single instant she is now modestly retiring and very, very gentle. She even refuses to raise her eyes to the curtain calls, but stands bowed and humble.

The change is for the better. Being chastened, she adds charm to her performance, and though the charm be a bit studied it still is an improvement. But her acquired virtues are wasted on the silliest of comedies—the old nursery tale of "The Three Bears" retold for the adolescent by the sentimental Edward Childs Carpenter at his worst.

Little Goldilocks, not wanting to marry the wicked man her cross New England auntie had picked out for her, ran away in her bridal dress and walked miles in the forest. Coming to a camp, she found the supper of three bear men, regular old woman haters, spread out on the table. So she ate the supper and went to bed.

When they found her they wanted to send Goldilocks away, but she wouldn't go. So she stayed and lived in the woodshed and they all fell in love with her, especially the littlest bear. And in the last act she became engaged to him, dear little Goldilocks did. And there you have a play without a rational human being in it nor a situation that, by any stretch of a normal imagination, could be counted reasonable, either in fancy or fact.

Carolina White of the Chicago Opera company found something wrong with the part she was going to sing in "Her Regiment." She was to be co-starred with Donald Brian and went through the first period of rehearsals. But either the music, or Donald, or the comedy, or the costumes, or the traveling, or an attack of temperament interfered and she withdrew.

Audrey Maple was substituted and the operetta brought into New York. Hearing it, we cannot think Miss White objected to the music, which is by Victor Herbert and, to our untutored ear, quite charmingly fresh and interesting. Nor Donald, who is as confidently handsome and swaggerish as ever, but still an engaging and talented lad, as musical comedy juveniles go, and the best of them all as a dancer.

So it must have been the jokes.

These are by William Le Baron, who wrote "The Very Idea," and is rather above the Broadway average, if the soprano only knew it. But there are no good jokes any more, or never seem to be in light opera, and probably hearing the same ones over and over discouraged her.

"Her Regiment" is a typical military operetta: Handsome young titled Frenchman masquerading as a common private in an army of twenty-four brightly costumed and melodious young soldiers; meets heiress from the neighboring castle, who pretends to be her own maid, just for the duets the deception makes possible. And in the last act they are mated. Comedy by the comic husband of the lady who runs the Pomme d'Or.

Miss Maple took full advantage of her opportunity, singing the rôle Carolina flouted with much enthusiasm and acting it so well that she is quite the most attractive of current heroines, being a blonde beauty who in the old days was much in demand as a fashion model.

MATTERS of MUSIC

Miss Myrna Sharlow
©MATZENE PHOTO

She is in her third season as a member of Campanini's company, and is remembered for good singing in "Werther," "Carmen," and "Don Giovanni," among other operas. But her most definite success so far was made in last Thursday's revival of "La Bohême," in which she was Musetta. She had, in the preceding season, been Mimi in a performance of Puccini's best work. She will again be Urban, the page, in tomorrow's revival of "The Huguenots."

The Opera

FOR the third week of his season of ten in the Auditorium, Mr. Campanini lists six operas for seven performances, starting this afternoon with "Rigoletto," to be repeated Thursday night. Stracciari joins the company for the title part in this revival, in which Galli-Curci will again be Gilda, the rôle in which she made the Chicago debut which placed her, overnight, among the great singers in the annals of opera.

Mme. Vix, whose delay has caused the postponements of the revival of "Manon," is now scheduled to sing for the first time in the United States Saturday afternoon—with, of course, Muratore as Des Grieux. "The Huguenots" will be sung for the first time, "Romeo and Juliet" and "Tosca" each for the second time, and "Aïda" at half-rates for the third.

The arrangement of operas and principal singers for the week are:

Today at 2:00—"Rigoletto," with Stracciari, Galli-Curci, Jean Nadal (for the first time this season), Claessens, Arimondi, Berat, Nicolay.

Monday at 8:00—"The Huguenots," with Raisa, Crimi, Sharlow, Arimondi, Huberdeau, Maguenat, Jessie Christian (first time this season), Daddi and Dua.

Tuesday at 8:00—"Romeo and Juliet," with Muratore, Galli-Curci, and the fine cast of last Sunday.

Wednesday at 8:00—"Tosca," with Fitziu, Crimi, Baklanoff, and the cast of last Monday.

Thursday at 8:00—"Rigoletto," with today's cast.

Saturday at 2:00—"Manon," with Vix, Muratore, Maguenat, Huberdeau, Dua, Defrere.

Saturday at 8:00—"Aïda," with Peralta, Van Gordon, Zinovieff, Kreidler, Goddard.

Sturani will conduct "Rigoletto" and "Tosca"; Conti, who stepped in so ably for "Dinorah" on Wednesday last, "The Huguenots"; Charlier, "Romeo and Juliet" and "Manon"; Spadoni, "Aïda."

"Maritana" in the Strand.

Mr. Sheehan will revive tomorrow night Vincent Wallace's ballad-opera of "Maritana," a work long absent from the Chicago stage, and once of a popularity hardly second to that of "The Bohemian Girl." Mr. Sheehan, Louis La Valle, and the Misses St. Clair and De Sellem will be in the Monday cast. "The Tales of Hoffmann" will be sung tonight for the final time.

The Week's Bills

ARTHUR SHATTUCK, a pianist who has not played with the orchestra for three seasons, will be the soloist of Mr. Stock's eighth program Friday afternoon and Saturday night. He will be heard in a novelty—Palmgren's concerto called "The River," which will on this occasion be given in public for the first time in the United States, so far as the records show.

Mr. Stock schedules for the orchestra Smith's overture called "Prince Hal," Enesco's symphony, the Dance of Nymphs and Satyrs from Georg Schumann's "Amor and Psyche," and Victor Herbert's Irish rhapsody. The Enesco and Herbert compositions will be new matter in the répertoire.

The third of the Orchestra's Pops will be Thursday night, with Tschaikowsky's fourth symphony, in its entirety, as the feature.

The Orchestra tomorrow night will give a concert in the Oak Park-River Forest High school.

Riccardo Stracciari

He may be recalled by those who took in the Italian performances when, in the spring of 1910, the Metropolitan last gave opera in Chicago. He was then ranked, in the baritone roster, by Scotti and Amato. He returns a celebrity, from all accounts, and will make his first appearance with Campanini's venture in this afternoon's revival of "Rigoletto," in the name-part of which he is said to have one of his best mediums. Galli-Curci will be with him, as Gilda.

Right off the Reel

BAD MANNERS IN MOVIES.

By Mae Tinée.

RIDING down in the elevated with a friend the other morning, discussing knitting and kindred subjects, she remarked irrelevantly and out of a clear sky:

"Honestly, the worst manners in the world are to be seen in pictures!"

I demurred. She contended her point, bringing up so many illustrations as proof that she left me quite limp and defenseless. She spoke especially of a recent production put out by a well known company where the star, formerly well known on the "legitimate," stood in his shirt sleeves with a cigaret in his mouth and his hat on part of the time while addressing women of his acquaintance.

No matter how much money is spent on settings, scenic effects, or stars, pictures will be stunted children until the people in them have been treated to strenuous doses of "How We Should Act on All Occasions" by people in charge who know how they should act on all occasions! Isn't it true?

Of course, everybody knows by now that Olive Thomas is Mrs. Jack Pickford. What everybody doesn't know is the fact that the young woman has been Mrs. Jack Pickford for a year from last October. Young Mrs. Pickford says she didn't "spill" the glad news for the reason that she wanted to see if she was "any good" as a screen artist, and "heaven knew how could she tell" if she "debuted" as a Pickford? "Because," she says, "you know, anybody'll go to see anything that has that name hitched on to it!"

The manager of a string of Chicago theaters came to me and in a deep, dark whisper announced that he had discovered something. There was a "Hist!-iness" about his manner that made my blood congeal. "Tell me quickly and end the suspense!" I begged. And here is what he whispered:

"Sonia Markova is not what she seems to be! In reality she is G—c—n Ha——n! I bet you anything!"

Now, what do you think about it? Could you ever imagine such a thing?

Director Marshall Neilan has been spending his and Mary Pickford's spare moments teaching that young woman to box. Little Mary says that these do be the times when she gets even with her director.

After a pathetic little talk by William S. Hart, delivered recently at a theater in Long Beach, Cal., in which the actor declared dolorously that the reason he clung to western plays was because he had the clothes that went with them, and owing to the high cost of living couldn't afford "new duds," the patrons riz as one and demanded that they be levied upon. A collection was forthwith taken. Result, Mr. Hart has one grand new hat. (Donations were limited to 1 cent per head.)

O, how those Normand fans want to see their own Mabel again! And how they chafe at each new delay! Long months ago it was announced, you know, that soon she would appear in "Mickey." Well, something happened and "Mickey" was temporarily derailed or had a rash or something. Then news that the fair Mabel, having joined Goldwyn, would positively be shown soon, vurr' soon, in a production that would be known as "Joan of Flat Bush." Again, great excitement, twirling of mustachios, etc. And now, now—now comes the sad news that the government objects to "Joan," or at least parts of Joan which will have to be rephotographed, involving a delay of several more months. Do the heathen rage, Maybe. But their ragings are as the ripple of a brooklet to the pounding surf sounds of the rage which rageth in the souls of the Normand fans—masculine gender!

It is not generally known that Kathleen Clifford, playing the lead in the serial "Who Is Number One?" is known in theatrical circles as "the smartest chap in town" and possesses a masculine wardrobe that is the envy of every man who knows about it. She was put on the stage through a whim of the late Charles Frohman, who met her at a dinner when she was only 15 years old. Upon learning who he was she spoke right up.

"I should like to go on the stage."

Mr. Frohman looked down, amazed but benevolent.

"What can you do?" he asked.

She told him quite truly—nothing. She couldn't sing, dance, act—anything. Mr. Frohman scratched his chin. Here was somebody new—somebody with no tricks to do away with, no learning to unlearn. Right then and there, the story goes, he engaged the lady for a rôle in "The Top o' the World." It was shortly after this that Miss Clifford, discovering what a good boy she made, began her male impersonations, meeting with such success that she began to confine most of her attention to them.

Night View Atop a Skyscraper Makes Chicago a City Beautiful

By Mme. X.

IT is only recently that artists, architects, poets, and others with imagination have begun to realize the possibilities of our skyscrapers as ministers to our sense of the beautiful. New York architects are setting an example to their Chicago confreres by their growing tendency to emphasize the perpendicular in designing the twenty, thirty, or forty story buildings which soar skyward along Gotham's business highways. Chicago designers and builders still incline towards the horizontal line in planning their big blocks. When they learn the inspiring effects of leading the eyes by swift, straight lines up, and still up, and when they fully appreciate the esthetic delights of a sky line broken by towers, gables, spires, and minarets, then Chicago will be well advanced towards realization of the vision of a city beautiful—a vision which dwells, in spite of war's preoccupations, in the minds of many of her devoted citizens.

The poet that lies latent in so many American men of affairs, stimulating their imaginations and making possible much of their financial and commercial success, is seeking expression in many ways. One young Chicago man, bearer of a well known name, manager of a large estate, is a good example, for instance, of this innate sense of the manifold beauties of a great, clamorous, garish city. He has a suite of offices in the nineteenth story of a Michigan avenue building—a suite which includes a perfectly appointed bathroom and a tiled kitchenette, with a miniature gas range, a shining ice box, and spotless cupboards to make any housekeeper's mouth water.

Scene of Charming Little Dinners.

There's a front door with an electric bell to push before you are admitted to the serious entrance hall. An anteroom to the left, of an aspect as grave as that of the hall, detains visitors until the master of the establishment will see them. Beyond is his main office, a large and lofty room, with dark mahogany woodwork and furniture, a big central table desk, and a few good oil paintings on the wall. To the right of this is his sanctum sanctorum, with cases full of books. A gramophone lurks in the shadows of one corner. Scattered here and there are big and supremely comfortable easy chairs, with shaded reading lamps bending attentively over them. A few capital bronzes are the room's only adornment. High and wide French windows, with leaded panes of glass, open westward on a matchless view of the city.

To look out of them at night is to sense the tremendous impressiveness and beauty of a great metropolis. Lights, lights, everywhere blink and stare and flash, revealing dim outlines of other high buildings. Over two hundred feet below the street traffic darts almost silently about, for the many noises are blended into one soft, murmuring chorus by the time they have risen to those French windows. Motors, each with a pair of glowing eyes, skim in and out of the throngs. Street cars, like glow worms, thread their definite ways. Pedestrians look like nothing human, seen from that height and angle. Even the elevated roads, usually so crassly noisy and ugly, look ghostly, unreal, and lovely.

The poetry latent in this man of affairs does not burst out in lyrics or epics. It expresses itself by chic and charming little dinners given in this suite of offices, with—weather permitting—the French windows opened wide and with the thrilling panorama of the city of beautiful night as a background. He is an epicure as well as a poet; it's a wonderful combination, though not so unusual as you would think. There was Heine, who said that the four things that made life worth living were "Love, truth, freedom—and crab soup."

Heine would have been enraptured could he have been one of a small company that dined in this suite last week on a soft, warm evening, high above the gleaming city, with a crescent moon dropping westward.

Notable Chinese Collection on View.

One of the most distinguished exhibits ever presented to the Chicago public by the Art institute is that of early Chinese paintings lent for this occasion by Charles L. Freer of Detroit. Mr. Freer has been for years a passionate art collector. He was Whistler's first prophet in this country, and for a long time made Whistler etchings his chief concern. Then he turned to the study of Chinese art and now is building at Washington, D. C., a gallery to be devoted entirely to housing what has now become a world famous collection of Chinese paintings, potteries, porcelains, jade, embroideries, etc. Connoisseurs have gathered here from New York and from San Francisco, they have come in private cars and by motors, just to examine this gathering of celestial or "middle kingdom" art.

It is safe to say that none of the visitors to this collection will bring to its inspection the profound knowledge and keen appreciation that Dr. John Ferguson does. He was the Howard Shaws' house guest last week, and was much entertained here. Dr. Ferguson has lived thirty years in China. He speaks and reads Chinese with remarkable facility—a rare accomplishment even for lifelong residents there of foreign birth. He occupies a position of great trust in the Chinese government and has come to this country to plead the cause of the Chinese, who feel that they are in danger of being deserted by their only friends, the American people.

He has some wonderful examples of Chinese paintings, one a strip fifty feet long painted over twelve hundred years ago and depicting the hundred and fifty metempsychoses of Buddha—a most extraordinary piece of work!

When Europe was wallowing in the darkest of dark ages China was at the height of its civilization. When Giotto, first of the primitives, herald of the renaissance, was flourishing the greatest period of Chinese art was already in its decadence. Do you wonder that the Chinese gaze on us with the calm superiority of a highly superb antiquity?

Wu Ting Fang, the former Chinese minister to this country in the days of the Manchu dynasty, once expressed this sentiment to a young American, with crisp definiteness. When asked as to the feelings of his fellow countrymen at the invasion of their land by missionaries and other so-called civilizing agencies, he admitted that the thoughtful Chinese were inclined to smile at it sometimes.

"Why, my dear miss," he concluded, "when our ancestors were at the height of their power and civilization yours were still hanging by their tails from the trees."

Urgent Need of Sphagnum Moss.

It is not unintentional—my straying for a moment from the all absorbing preoccupation of the time. Talking about other things doesn't make us forget the war for one instant. Nothing can make us do that. There's hardly an hour of the day, for society folk at any rate, the people who once constituted our leisure class, that isn't devoted directly or indirectly to some war relief work.

Many of the women connected with the American Fund for French Wounded are now devoting their time to the preparation of sphagnum moss for surgical dressings. In this they are following the lead of the Englishwomen, who are monthly turning out 350,000 dressings made of this moss. Every Red Cross center in Great Britain has a room devoted to sphagnum dressings, which is preferred to absorbent cotton by those working in the war hospitals. The Germans "beat us to it," to use the vernacular, as almost since the beginning of the war they have used this moss. It is lighter, more highly absorbent, cheaper and altogether better than absorbent cotton. It doesn't mat or stick to the wounds as does the cotton.

The sphagnum moss committee here, which is headed by Mrs. Arthur Small, makes an urgent plea that all who go south shall make it a point to collect this great agent for relief whenever they are near the bogs in which it grows. These are to be found in nearly every state in the union, from Maine to Florida, from Virginia to California. And the committee says: "We need tons of it at once."

Can you go to Florida, Georgia, and to the gulf states and not make it your chief business in life to collect this when you think of the immense need for it? From every field hospital in Europe the anguish of the wounded, the tender solicitude of the nurses, the wisdom and science of the surgeons must make appeal to you if you've a heart in your breast.

Take Nurses' Training.

Speaking of nursing, there's an eager little band of student nurses at St. Luke's hospital composed of five of our youngest and most attractive matrons and maids, who are having some great experience, some enlightening glimpses of life in its most serious aspect. The quintet consists of Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Harris Brewer, Mrs. H. H. Porter Jr., and Miss Anita Blair.

Every morning they set forth at the "screech of dawn," that is, by soon after 8, and hie them to the famous old hospital in Michigan avenue, where, donning nurses' attire (a most becoming outfit, by the way), they undertake, under competent direction, every imaginable sort of task. Nothing is spared them.

She's Working for the Success of the Benefit Performance for Infant Welfare Society.

Miss Margaret Marston

It almost seems, as things look now, that the work of the world is being gathered together in piles and being done by the young girls whom we used to regard as highly ornamental and agreeable, but scarcely as destined to be the power back, for instance, of the trenches. But here they come, a whole band of them, managing benefit performances for the Red Cross, for local philanthropies, for recreation committees, and many another good cause. Miss Margaret Marston is one of these, and is now working hard for the success of the benefit performance of "Have a Heart," to be given by the Kenwood Social Service club on Tuesday evening, Dec. 4, at the Illinois theater for the Infant Welfare society. Among others assisting will be Miss Florence Bradley, Miss Willa Stafford, and Mrs. Frank Winans.

But nothing daunts these young women. They are now in a much more trying and nerve wracking part of their course of instruction, that of aiding at serious operations, but they are sticking to their colors with invincible courage. Their aim is to fit themselves to take the places in local hospitals that may be vacated by the claims on our regular nurses of the war hospitals. In fact, I shouldn't wonder if each one of the quintet, at the bottom of her soul, was hoping that she, too, might some day see service in a war hospital, if the need for such service becomes acute.

It's surely going to be a different world after the war is over. Can you imagine all these energetic, capable women returning from these strenuous activities to the easy sloth of a life of luxurious leisure, such as many of them enjoyed before this world cataclysm?

New Holiday Greetings.

There's one department of business activities that seems oblivious of the war, and that is the agencies that design and produce Christmas cards. It is almost impossible to find any cards at all suitable to this year's Christmas sentiment. You can't wish your friends a merry time; you don't want to send them cheerful little pictures of Santa Claus and moonlit chimney pots; you feel that it's distinctly unsuitable to say "Happy New Year" to them. We're not merry, jolly, or happy. And yet there's not a card to be found on a shop counter with a message of courage, a hope for peace, or an expression of faith. It daunts the would-be buyer.

Here's Thanksgiving day coming this week. Shall we give thanks that the war came and found us utterly unprepared? Shall we give thanks that, though we've been six months in the war, not a big gun has yet been manufactured by this country? Shall we give thanks it will be impossible for our soldiers to play a really helpful, important part in any great military movement until 1919?

Well, there are other things for which we can be grateful. One of them is the spirit which has opened thousands of Chicago homes to the enlisted men at the Great Lakes Naval Training station; the spirit which fills our Red Cross stations with workers; the spirit which enabled our local branch of the American Fund for French Wounded to raise since last May $58,074.12, to send to France 30,466 articles for hospital supplies, 58,092 surgical dressings, 6,089 comfort bags, 2,057 pairs of wool blankets—in all, 96,698 articles since last May 1.

Further to aid this organization there will be a sale of autographed books and other articles tomorrow afternoon at Mrs. B. F. Ayer's apartment at 20 East Goethe street, and a tea for the same cause and in conjunction with this sale in Mrs. Russell Tyson's apartment a floor above.

Benefit for Aviators.

Also on Tuesday at the residence of Mrs. Hamilton McCormick, 613 Rush street, there will be a bridge whist party to raise money to buy kid glove vests for aviators and soldiers in France. The patronesses for this event are: Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Henry S. Robbins, Mrs. Henry N. Tuttle, Mrs. William E. Clarke, Mrs. Henry K. Chapin, Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter, and Mrs. Keith Spalding.

That same afternoon there will be in the gold room of the Congress hotel a song recital by the blind Russian baritone, Vladimir Resnikoff, and dances by Mme. Marie Yung, an entertainment arranged by Mrs. E. A. Leight, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the Red Cross.

The young singer is a notable figure in New York, where he has been made much of by Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes, Mrs. Philip Lydig, and others. Mrs. Stokes took him one day to sing for Caruso, not telling Resnikoff to whom he was going. The lad—for he was only that at the time—put his heart into the Slavic folk songs he sang for the world famous tenor, whom Mrs. Stokes introduced as Mr. Smith.

"Bravo!" exclaimed his unknown auditor, and then, leading the young Russian to the piano, Caruso sang for him. A glow spread over Resnikoff's face.

"And how do you like Mr. Smith's voice?" asked Mrs. Stokes.

"We all know Mr. Smith's voice," was the answer as he clasped Caruso's hands in both of his. Caruso gave the newcomer every encouragement, praised his technique, the quality of his voice, and sent him away in the seventh heaven of happiness.

Housekeepers! Read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest the directions of the food conservation committee as to what to leave out of your daily menu. Observe, as the soldiers do a command from a general on the battlefield, the order to keep two meatless days and one wheatless day a week. If we are not sparing in our use of wheat flour Mr. Hoover is quoted as saying that this country will undoubtedly see bread riots within six months. It is up to you, you who read this, to see that your household and that of your neighbors heeds this prohibition.

Social Service Department Aids Home Charities

By Mrs. Basil Ruysdael.

Mrs Basil Ruysdael
KOEHNE PHOTO

Mrs. Basil Ruysdael is an ardent worker in the social service department of the woman's committee of the Council of National Defense.

To spend a day in the social service office of the woman's committee of the national council of defense is to get a more extensive bird's eye view of the community at large than has ever before been my good fortune to obtain. Being an unlessoned volunteer myself, I am perhaps better fitted to give a general impression of the work of this division than any one who is more conversant with the technical details of organized charity, or who possesses a scholarly knowledge of social service.

The social service department is an organization devised to help support and keep going all the agencies of relief, recreation, and rehabilitation which existed in Illinois before we declared war upon Germany.

The experience of Canada gave us an object lesson as to the vital necessity of supporting our own home charities. The Canadians, impelled by patriotic zeal, devoted all their resources to the Red Cross and other organizations directly allied to the army. The result was disastrous to the public welfare. Juvenile delinquency increased enormously. Among the adults, owing to the fact that the free employment agencies changed to recruiting stations and that the relief societies devoted themselves to work directly affiliated with the war, unhappy people before merely on the threshold of calamity are now completely submerged.

This committee aims to be a clearing house between agencies and organizations which require support and volunteers who have service to offer.

The agencies have, as a rule, a definite idea as to what they want. "Give us a friendly visitor on Tuesday afternoons," they tell us. Or "some one to play the piano for the children's gym class Saturday mornings." Or "clerical help three days each week."

The volunteers are more difficult to place, partly because they do not always know themselves just what they want to do, and partly because it is the desire of the committee to give them such work as they are fitted for. There are innumerable opportunities for volunteers who are not trained in specialized work who "would like to do something but do not know how." Often the volunteers think that the recreational side of social service is not valuable in these times of stress and turmoil. But every person who knows how to play the piano can keep a class of children safely in the gymnasium or in the dancing class, can keep these children off the street.

Filing cards may sem a dull job, mere routine, but perhaps if this is well done such work will enable some one to locate a volunteer who has offered the use of his car to take a sick man to the hospital, or to transport a child to a country home, or to bring an alien inhabitant to the county building in time to get his second citizenship papers so that he may enlist.

Volunteer work is infinite in its scope. One woman drives a car for us; a group makes over old clothes for destitute children; there are nurses, story tellers, stenographers, musicians, doctors, cooking teachers, knitting teachers, artists, and many, many others who give up all or a part of their time to such service. There is not a single talent, a single gift, however commonplace or however unusual, that cannot find a needed place for its activity.

The social service department asks only three things: First, that the time offered by volunteers, whether it is one-half hour a week or every day, be definite; second, that, having promised to do a specific service, the volunteers will carry out their part of the compact punctually and faithfully, and, third, that they will wait patiently while the committee is trying to find the proper place for the service that they offer.

WOMEN IN WAR WORK.

On Thanksgiving day a dinner will be given to 100 sailors at the College Inn by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Beifeld, under the auspices of the patriotic open door of the Chicago Woman's club. Dinner will be served at 12 o'clock, so that the guests may leave in time to go to the football game and, following the dinner, there will be a program on the ice rink. Saturday night at 6 o'clock Thanksgiving dinner will be served to 150 soldiers from Fort Sheridan in the clubrooms. There will be a host and hostess for every ten guests. At the conclusion of dinner the hostesses will retire and there will be a smoker for the guests and hosts.

Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen reports that 4,039 towns in Illinois had been fully organized by the woman's committee and that there is now a chairman in every county.

Members and friends of the North Shore Civic alliance meet every Thursday at 7:30 o'clock at the home of Miss Helen Enelow, 845 Lawrence avenue, to knit sweaters, wristlets, etc. These articles are sent to Camp Grant and to the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

Women employés of the Chicago postoffice will form a Red Cross auxiliary.

A benefit card party will be given on Tuesday afternoon at the Gladstone hotel by the ladies of Company D auxiliary, Four Hundred and Tenth Telegraph battalion, S. C. N. A. Mrs. E. G. Carter, president of the auxiliary, is in charge of arrangements. The proceeds will go toward the purchase of yarn to furnish knitted garments for the men who are now in training at Fort Leavenworth, Kas.

Since the opening in July the war shop of the General Henry Dearborn chapter, D. A. R., 11,382 surgical dressings, 2,972 hospital supplies, 243 knitted articles, 800 Christmas bags, 75 blankets, 60 baby quilts, 625 Christmas gifts for the Belgian children, and 95 other children's supplies—hoods, socks, petticoats, etc.—have been shipped. They are working on 500 comfort kits for the boys now in Texas, and are using kid glove tops in making aviator jackets. The chapter will hold a patriotic meeting in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel Tuesday at 2 o'clock, when T. P. O'Connor will speak.

To Fort Riley Kas.—Victoria Carlson, Louise Knauer, Laura Erickson, Cecelia Hillstrom, and Alice Casperson, all of Augustana hospital.

To Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky.—Lelia Swanson, Rosalind Lindstrom, and Helga Melby of Augustana hospital.

To Camp Pike, Little Rock, Ark.—Lauretta Casey of St. Joseph's hospital.

Mrs. W. A. Moffett, wife of the commandant of Great Lakes Naval Training station, announces the following as patronesses for the navy ball to be held in the drill hall at Great Lakes Thanksgiving eve: Mmes. Joseph T. Bowen, Frank Hibbard, L. H. Armour, L. F. Swift, F. R. Carter, I. J. Couch, F. D. Countiss, C. C. Adsit, C. S. Dewey, and K. S. Goodman.

A Liberty bazaar will be held this evening at 1416 North Dearborn parkway for the benefit of the soldiers and sailors of the American expeditionary force in France. There will be a reception, dinner, and address by William Gemmill, who has been doing ambulance work in France. Receipts are to be distributed through the Lake Shore surgical dressing unit.

Miss Florence Spoffard of the emergency drivers announces that the drivers will have a special Red Cross section which will do nothing but Red Cross work.

Scalloped camouflage is the latest conservation dish to be presented to the conservation department of the woman's committee. It was evolved by Mrs. E. J. Dunne and Mrs. W. B. Rix and will be the "pièce de resistance" at a corn dinner to be given Dec. 5 (wheatless day) at the Methodist church at Greenleaf avenue and Ashland boulevard. The camouflage consists of corn, tunafish, and a corn breakfast food and is said to be delicious. There will be speakers from the Council of National Defense, and British and American buglers will add to the festivity. The dinner is to be given under the auspices of the conservation department and the Rogers Park Home Missionary society.

Transparent service flags bearing the Red Cross emblem as well as the stars of army or navy service will be placed in the windows of Chicago residences before long as a feature of the Red Cross Christmas membership drive.

Tomorrow the Woman's Work and Service club will give a card party at the Mystic Athletic club for the benefit of soldiers and sailors' families and general war relief.

Oak Park auxiliary, which has undertaken an extensive knitting campaign for the Red Cross, has given to the department of comforts and knitting 860 knitted garments.

The new naval auxiliary of the Red Cross (formerly women's section of the Navy league) has installed an electric cutting machine that is doing wonders in the way of supplying comfort kits.

To date the home charities committee has placed 166 volunteers. Of these sixty are taking the course at the School of Civics and Philanthropy and five are taking the settlement course and doing settlement work at the same time.

Miss Cornelia Conger, one of the most expert of the Red Cross knitting women, offers the following suggestions for making the newest sweaters and socks: "In making one of the new heavy sweaters, bind off the last four stitches on each side, then knit plain last six stitches all round armhole. At corresponding point on back add on four stitches in each side and continue back like front. This will save at least one and one-half hours of work to a rapid knitter, making a better sweater, and save an appreciable amount of yarn. The boys are crazy about bright stripes in the socks, but unless women will take the trouble to boil the bright colored yarn in salted water for a few minutes before it is knit the Red Cross department of comforts and knitting will have to give up the striped socks because the color will run."

A free dressmaking shop to serve the needs of various charities in Chicago has been opened by Mrs. E. L. Ellsworth, president of the Washington Park Business Woman's association, and Mrs. Maud Summy, who has offered her residence at 6120 Stony Island avenue as a workroom.

From the office of the surgeon general of the war department in Washington has come formal recognition and approval of an ambulance in the name of the college women of Chicago. Mrs. A. P. Kenny, president of the College club, is calling a meeting of college organization presidents for Tuesday at 2 p. m. to consider the question.

A temporary organization to administer relief to war victims in Italy has been organized in Rome by the American Red Cross. Carl Taylor is general manager, Edward Eyre Hunt head of civilian relief, and Dr. Alexander Lambert will investigate and report on military hospitals and sanitary conditions.

Mrs. J. N. Hobbs, chairman of Red Cross auxiliary No. 281, a band of workers recruited under the banner of the Chicago Society of Ohio Women, asks for volunteers to assist in their shop at 902 Karpen building.

Mrs. Philip Schuyler Doane, director of the department of surgical dressings of the Red Cross, says she doesn't see why more men aren't making surgical dressings and other articles needed by the surgeons at the front. "We already have sixty men doing it," said Mrs. Doane, "but we should have many more. There are many men doing it in the east. Why not in Chicago?"

In Chicago the Smith college women are meeting each week at the homes of different members. Two of the groups meet on the north side, one at the residence of Mrs. F. P. Davis, 1117 Sheridan road, Evanston, and one with Miss Ellen Holt, 920 Lincoln parkway. Mrs. Joseph L. Valentine is chairman of the latter group, which includes Miss Martha Wilson, Mrs. William R. Dickerson, Mrs. Robert E. Ross, Mrs. John J. Healy, Miss Gertrude Grace, and Mrs. Ogden McClurg. Miss Margaret Moore, 4433 Greenwood avenue, is chairman of the south side group, and there is an enthusiastic group which meets each week at the residence of Mrs. W. D. Potter in Oak Park.

Home preparedness lectures on war cooking are given every Tuesday at the School of Domestic Science and are designed to aid in the conservation of food. They are free. A number of girls, including Miss Betty Hoyt, Miss Ginevra King, Miss Janet Pauling, and Miss Isabel Gilmore, are regularly enrolled students of the domestic science school, and are learning war cookery in classes that meet twice a week, on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Prairie Club to Spend Holiday in Fox River Valley

THE HIKERS' HYMN.

Come all ye hikers out today,
  Prairie Club of Illinois,
We're on the march, with comrades gay,
  The rustic road we hail with joy.

We roam the woodland's winding way,
We know the wild bird's roundelay,
And where the hidden fountains play
  In shaded streams of Illinois.

Our banners gleam on many a pike
  In our fair state of Illinois;
O'er forest trail and woodland dike
  Our merry, happy hosts deploy.

Our colors we will never strike,
Through sun and rain we gayly hike;
To us the clear and cloud alike,
  Prairie Club of Illinois.

With this hymn, written by one of its members—F. B. Morehouse—in their hearts, even though it be not actually on their lips, the Prairie club, an organization of men and women enthusiastic about walking, gathers together every Saturday afternoon and takes a long walk through the country around Chicago.

On Thanksgiving day there will be an all day outing. The club will leave the Northwestern station at 7:30 a. m., arrive at Fox River grove at 8:50, and walk nine miles through the Fox River valley to Lake Zurich. At 11 o'clock fifteen minutes will be allowed for a light luncheon, which each member is expected to take with him. At Lake Zurich a Thanksgiving dinner will be served to the members. The club will leave there at 4:10 p. m. and arrive at the Northwestern station at 6:12 p. m. The cost of the outing will be $2.15, including the dinner.

The club was organized nine years ago as the "Saturday Afternoon Walks," and was arranged by a member of the Playgrounds association. After two years of success it was decided that the club should be incorporated, and June 28, 1911, is the official date of its birth as the Prairie club.

The activities of the club include other things than the regular Saturday afternoon walks, which, as the hymn says, are taken "rain or shine." There are regular open meetings once a month in Fullerton hall, and occasional special meetings where men of note, usually in the world of nature lore, give talks to the members. On holidays and on occasional week ends trips are arranged to places which are too far away to be visited on Saturday afternoons.

Every summer the club arranges two vacations which its members may avail themselves of, one a long trip and the other a permanent camp. The club has visited the Yellowstone and Glacier National parks in the last few summers, and has had permanent camps in Wisconsin. Likewise the club maintains the Beach house at Tremont, Ind., where club members who go to the dunes may find accommodations over night.

The Prairie club was one of the most influential and enthusiastic backers of the Dunes pageant last spring, and is standing firmly for the conservation of the dunes as a national park. The club also has a magazine called the Hiker. It is a hand made magazine, typewritten, but a magazine nevertheless. It is edited by F. B. Morehouse.

There are now 900 members of the club. Any one may become an associate member by the payment of the annual dues, and will receive regularly the bulletins of the Saturday afternoon walks. The management of the club is vested in active members. Applications for active membership must be recommended by two active members. One does not, however, have to be a member of the club to take the Saturday afternoon walks. Every one interested in walking is welcome.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS.

There will be a business meeting of the Chicago Woman's club on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Recital hall. In the morning at 10:30 the literary study class will meet. Mrs. John C. Shaffer will speak on "American Journalism." The Wednesday evening class will meet at 7 o'clock to receive instructions in making surgical dressings. On Saturday at 1 o'clock the committee on American speech will meet.

The regular monthly luncheon of the Woman's City club will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. in the rooms of the Chicago College club. At 2 p. m. the program will be in charge of the bathing beaches and public comfort stations commitee. The speakers will be John C. Cannon, J. F. Foster, and a representative of the special parks commission. The Tuesday morning citizenship class has invited the foods and markets committee to a fireless, meatless 25 cent luncheon at the clubrooms on Tuesday at 12 o'clock. Any members of the club and friends who are interested are invited to attend. Following the luncheon Ald. John A. Richert will discuss Chicago's financial situation. Miss Harriet E. Vittum will give a message from the Council of Defense. Miss Jenny Snow will speak on "Conservation from the Viewpoint of Housekeepers and Citizens." The police committee will meet at the clubrooms at 12:30 p. m. The Twenty-third ward branch Red Cross auxiliary will meet at Butler house on Thursday at 10 a. m. The knitting class organized by the industrial civic extension committee will meet at 7 p. m. on Friday.

At the card party to be held at the Chicago College club on Tuesday Miss Helen Earle will be hostess.

Tomorrow the Culture club will meet at 2 p. m. at the Hotel La Salle. Walter D. Moody will lecture on Chicago and also show views of many European cities. Mrs. Clayton C. Pickett, president, asks for a second book shower for the soldiers and sailors.

The Independent German-American Woman's club will met at 2 p. m. on Wednesday at the Hotel Morrison. Dr. Eliza Morse will speak on "Social Hygiene in War Time" and Mrs. Hickson on "The Morals Court."

WOMEN IN WAR WORK.

The following letter was received by one of the women of the woman's committee, C. N. D., from an Illinois man in one of the training camps: "I understand you are sending sweaters to soldiers of the United States army. If it would not be too much trouble to you, I have two children, 3 and 5 years of age, and would much rather know they were warm than be warm myself. If there is one intended for me, will you please take the yarn and send it to them? If you think this is unfair of me in asking this favor, kindly disregard the matter.

"LOUIS N. PAVLIK."

In Dvorak park is one of the busiest groups of workers in the city. It is composed principally of women of Bohemian ancestry who come four times a week to the park house to work for the welfare of the soldiers. On Monday and Saturday afternoons the young women and girls of the neighborhood meet with their knitting bags, and on Tuesday and Thursday evenings the older women meet. The men have done their bit in furnishing the yarn, which vanishes at an astonishing rate—so quick are the workers with their needles. Instruction in the latest knitting stitches is given by Miss Florence Kiefer.

Mrs. J. P. Bittner, 908 Wolfram street, has found a new use for small scraps of fine linens and laces. She had a great bundle of such scraps saved and she is making them into infants' clothes, which she is donating to the social service committee of the Woman's council.

The Daughters of the West End Woman's club are giving a "movie" at the Crawford theater Friday afternoon and evening. The proceeds are to go to the Red Cross to fill kits for the soldiers. Mrs. L. C. Davis is chairman.

CONSTIPATION INVITES DISEASE

A reliable laxative is necessary to the comfort and health of any well-ordered household, because constipation is a condition that affects, in greater or less degree, practically every member of the family. When the bowels refuse to act the entire system is affected; digestion is impaired, nerves begin to twitch, foul gases and poisons generated by decomposing substances in the intestines are distributed throughout the body, and often result in serious illness. A prominent French scientist says ninety-five per cent of all human disease is directly traceable to inactive bowels.

More than a quarter of a century ago Dr. W. B. Caldwell prescribed a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that is now the standard remedy in thousands of homes. This prescription is sold by druggists for fifty cents a bottle, under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. A trial bottle can be obtained, free of charge, by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 456 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois, for whom this advertisement is published.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME. X.

Simplicity Rules This Season for Bride and Bud

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Two weddings took place last week, which in other days probably would have been celebrated elaborately. This is one of the signs of the times—the keynote, so to speak, of the attitude of society to the new epoch in our national history, which begins with our country at war. Another of those signs was manifest through the debutantes. They are going to be conspicuous by their inconspicuousness. They are going to ooze out, as it were. None of them made their first public appearance on any scene last week at the opera.

In days of old, i. e., in days before the war, debutantes did not go to the opera in their first year. They were ostentatious, those debutantes of old, in their very reticence, and one of the large features of those pre-war openings of the opera was the comment that no buds could be seen. Now they are there and without comment. Their appearance in this drab, solemn year does not make as much of a stir as their absence did before.

Their appearance has a significance, means that they are out and ready for work. The next day they get their detail. It is to go over to the Junior league and begin making war bandages. That's what it is to be a debutante this year. Some who did not make their official appearance at the opera entered society through the medium of the horse show, and still others are scheduled for small and unpretentious teas.

Miss Shonts Weds Soldier.

But to revert to the two simple weddings. Miss Marguerite Shonts, once of Chicago, was one of the brides. The bridegroom was Capt. Rutherford Bingham, U. S. R. With a duchesse for a matron of honor and a little duc for a page, yet the nuptials were simple. The day has gone by—it passed on that July 27, 1914, on which war first broke out—when titles mean much of anything.

The wedding took place in the little chantry of St. Thomas church, which was garnished with palms and white chrysanthemums for the event. There was no reception after the ceremony. The couple merely kept their places for a time at the chancel to receive the good wishes of friends.

Usual bridal finery was dispensed with. The bride, who has a charming look of sweet amiability about her, was attired in a brown velvet traveling suit and a brown velvet hat tipped with a plume of the bird of paradise. Brown is extremely becoming to her, and so was the quaint style in which the costume was made. It had a bustle effect and was plain in the bodice except for a fold of cream lace for a collar. She carried a prim bouquet, such as her grandmother might have effected, of orange blossoms frilled with white lace.

The duchess darkly referred to in the beginning of this comment is the Duchesse de Chaulnes, her sister. She was attired in a gown of black velvet, the skirt of which was cut with a train. With it she wore a black hat trimmed with white feathers. The duc mentioned is her son, the bride's nephew, a charming little boy. He wore a suit of black velvet.

Among the few guests at the ceremony were Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt, Mrs. J. Laurens Van Alan, Mrs. E. N. Breitung, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, and the parents of the bridegroom, Gen. Theodore Bingham, U. S. A., and Mrs. Bingham. The bride's father, Theodore Shonts, gave her away.

Capt. Bingham, who has been in the diplomatic corps for some time, has been appointed first secretary of the American legation in Copenhagen. The couple are said to be now on the seas en route for the city which is to be their new home.

Miss Morgan a Bride.

The other bride was Miss Jane Morgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, and the bridegroom was George Nichols, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. T. Nichols of 42 West Eleventh street, New York. This marriage took place in the little church of Lattingtown, near Locust valley, St. John's by name, and of a capacity for 100 guests. Even then its capacity was not taxed. Only a few near relatives and friends were asked to this notable wedding, although many more had opportunity to wish the bridal couple good luck. There was a breakfast after the ceremony at the sumptuous home of the bride's parents at Matinicock point, Glen Cove. Two special trains could scarcely contain the host of well-wishers who came out from New York for the event.

The ceremony took place at 12 o'clock, and just as the hour struck Mr. and Mrs. Morgan drove up to the church with their daughter. Mr. Morgan gave her away. Only one member of the family was not present at the ceremony. His absence was a silent, grim reminder of what is going on in the world today. The absent one was Junius Morgan, who is said to be somewhere off the coast of France on coast defense duty.

His presence was much missed and the absence cast a shadow over the happiness of the affair. It is just such a shadow as is cast over all life in this world today. Sometimes it seems as if the very animals feel it—but I am straying from the subject in hand.

The newly married couple will probably live in the Nichols place in Oyster Bay. Before her marriage the bride did two years of Red Cross and hospital work in France. Mr. Nichols is distinguished as a yachtsman.

Makes Debut at Opera.

By the rules of composition I should have finished off the subject of debutantes while on it. If you will allow my thoughts to run their own course I shall return for one brief moment to the subject as exemplified in Barbara Loew. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Goadby Loew, the latter of whom was pronounced by experts one summer to be the best dressed woman in Newport, and she is strictly indeed in and of the smart set. She carries in her personality a dash of all its brilliancy and she cherishes the splendidly conventional.

It seemed strange to see her daughter the other evening merely leak out into society at the opera instead of coming out to the accomplishment of a brass band. She was demurely dressed in a dim color, and yet she was so pretty and so alive with the fire of youth that she attracted much pleasant comment, and that brings me to the point I was going to make. Every year it is the practice of smart society and the newspapers to size up the debutantes and decide which is the prettiest and the most popular. I wish to place a small wager on Miss Loew for the winner this year.

Les Corsets
MODART
garantissent

(Modart Corsets insure continuous figure improvement)

The "better dressed" woman is selecting a Modart Front Laced Corset this season. As in the past, her purchase is made with more pleasure than any other article of her wearing apparel.

The event with her is far more than the mere purchase of a corset. It is a sound investment in figure improvement.

All Modart Corsets are designed and sold on a basis of the figure improving service they render. To sell corsets simply as corsets has never been our purpose.

The hundreds of thousands of women who wear Modart Corsets know this. They buy the Modart because of this service. Experience has demonstrated to them that each Modart worn continues to improve the figure. This improvement is constantly maintained, for the corset is designed to hold its shape until worn out. Modart wearers remain Modart wearers year after year.

To create and fix such service in a corset, the very highest designing skill is employed. As a consequence the finest materials and the best workmanship possible must be used. These are reasons why Modart values are always unusual and why women willingly pay $3.75 and up for this superior corset.

Leading stores nearly everywhere throughout the United States and Canada sell Modart Corsets. They join us in inviting you to make the "Test of Tests"—a Trial Fitting. Their corsetières will render this service without obligation on your part to purchase. When you have made the test, we believe you will not care to be without a Modart.

Do not hesitate to ask for your Trial Fitting. It will be gladly given you by experienced corsetières who thoroughly understand the Modart idea and will advise you how to wear your Modart so you will get the utmost out of its wonderful figure improving qualities.

Modart Corsets are Always Front-Laced. Pioneers in the Front Lacing idea, we design Front-Laced Corsets only, because our experience has proved to us that Front Lacing is the correct idea in corseting and that the properly designed Front-Laced corset offers greater opportunities for visible figure improvement than any other type.

WHO IS "NUMBER ONE"?

The First PARAMOUNT Serial

WHO IS "NUMBER ONE"? is a melodramatic photoplay—a melodrama constructed by artists. The greatest motion picture makers in the world took ten months in the building of this serial. Not a reel was O. K.'d until it reached in every detail the Paramount standard.

Anna Katharine Green wrote the story of WHO IS "NUMBER ONE"? She's the greatest of all mystery writers, author of "The Leavenworth Case," "The Filigree Ball," and a score of other "best sellers." In this one she has outdone herself as a fashioner of baffling plots. It's an absorbing tale of intrigue and conquering love.

Kathleen Clifford is the star. She is a brave, charming little daredevil, famed as a star of vaudeville and musical comedy. She is an adorable sweetheart, a valiant champion of the ones she loves. WHO IS "NUMBER ONE"? is chock full of throbs and thrills and Kathleen is the inspiration of every one. H. M. Horkheimer wrote the picture synopsis.

The Story Is Now Running Serially in the Color Section of The Chicago Sunday Tribune.

There will be two large Thanksgiving balls on the north shore this week. A gala benefit ball will be given on Wednesday evening at the Great Lakes Naval Training station, and Mrs. William A. Moffett, wife of the commandant at the station, will be in charge of arrangements. Sousa will conduct the band of jackies for the dance and Capt. Moffett and members of his staff will be present. Admission will be $2 a single ticket and the public is invited. Among the patronesses are Mrs. J. Ogden Armour, Mrs. J. J. Mitchell, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mrs. Frederick D. Countiss, Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. Frank Hibbard, Mrs. Laurance H. Armour, Mrs. C. C. Adsit, Mrs. Ford Rodman Carter, Mrs. Ira J. Couch, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, and Mrs. Kenneth Sawyer Goodman. The proceeds of the ball will go to the Great Lakes auxiliary of the Navy Relief society.

Another ball on Thanksgiving eve will be that given in the gymnasium of the Deerfield-Shields High school, to which the home guards of Winnetka, Wilmette, and Glencoe are invited. The reserve militia of Highland Park is giving the party, with Lucius A. Hine in charge.

A lecture on Alsace-Lorraine will be given on Wednesday evening by Marcel Knecht in the Recital hall of the Fine Arts building, the proceeds to go to the fund of the Chicago branch of the Fatherless Children of France. M. Knecht is in this country as general delegate of the French national committee. He will lecture in French and will show moving pictures of Alsace. The committee in charge of arrangements, in coöperation with Antonin Barthélemy, the French consul, includes Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, chairman; Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. M. H. Herbert, Mrs. Charles A. Chase, Mrs. Chauncey Martin, Prof. Henri David, and Alphonse Campion. Applications for tickets may be made at the office of the Fatherless Children of France, room 741 Fine Arts building.

A large Thanksgiving celebration will be held at the Brownleigh club, where the members will entertain dozens of jackies for dinner on Thursday. Dr. Julia Holmes Smith and Miss Jean Hill are responsible for the plan to entertain the boys.

The "Brownleigh Barrel" is the latest effort of the club to do its bit for the soldiers. Each Friday a barrel of candy and gum is shipped to the boys in the camps. This is the outcome of "sweetless day," proposed by Dr. Lucy Waite at the recent fellowship dinner. Miss Marie Topping of 12 West Elm street is chairman of the sweetless day committee.

The glide of skates has taken the place of the dancing whirl in society this winter, and seems to have made up to the young girls the loss of dancing, which the absence of young men in war service has caused. Miss Marion Osborne, Miss Elizabeth Adsit, Miss Rosamond Goodrich, Miss Marion Beach, and Miss Elizabeth Beach are some of the debutantes who are frequently at the ice rinks of the city. There will be numerous parties for jackies given this weekend at the Arena, on the north side, among the hostesses being Mrs. Ford Bodman Carter, Mrs. Sydney Gardner, Mrs. Harry L. Taft, Mrs. Loring W. Coleman, and Mrs. Charles C. Adsit.

Members of the Friendly Aid society will hold a theater benefit on Friday evening at the Blackstone theater, the play to be "Hamilton," with George Arliss in the leading rôle. Mrs. Clifford C. Chickering is chairman of the committee on arrangements and has assisting her Mrs. Walter Warren, Mrs. Fred K. Higbie, Mrs. Fred A. Poor, Mrs. Edward Tilden, Mrs. Harold Jones, Mrs. Edward E. Maxwell, Mrs. Robert J. Graf, Mrs. Amos G. Allen, Mrs. Albert Shutz, Mrs. Joseph Oswald Schreiner and Mrs. Clifford G. Wells. A group of young society girls under the direction of Mrs. Averill Tilden, will sell flowers, and are Miss Helen Ruth Orb, Miss Helen Higbie, Miss Dorothy Higbie, Miss Marion Porter and Miss Cora Howland.

The society is to hold a bazaar at the Blackstone hotel on Tuesday, Dec. 4, from 10 o'clock until 6 o'clock. Mrs. Godfrey Ball is chairman of the committee.

Mrs. John A. Orb of 2901 South Michigan avenue will be hostess on Tuesday morning at 10:15 o'clock to an interesting group of writers, members of a literary club, who have been asked to meet Mrs. Orb's sister-in-law, Mrs. William S. Young of California, who writes under her maiden name, Ruth Comfort Mitchell. Among those who are to be guests are Mrs. Howard Van Doren Shaw, Mrs. Arthur T. Aldis, Miss Harriett Monroe, Mrs. Louise A. Garnett, and Mrs. V. K. Spicer. Luncheon will be served after the informal meeting.

The pageant, "Times and Manners," written by Mrs. Elia W. Peattie, is to be given at the Studebaker theater on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons of Dec. 4 and 6 under the auspices of the Chicago Woman's club. The net proceeds are to be entirely devoted to the Red Cross and war time activities of the club. The pageant is to be given under the direction of Mrs. George B. Carpenter and Mrs. Guy Goddard will give the prologue. The stage grouping and pantomime are to be in charge of Mrs. Lou Wall Moore and Mrs. Elsa Durand Mower. Miss Elizabeth Telling has designed the costumes according to a color scheme which will dominate each group. The music is in charge of Mrs. Junius C. Hoag and Miss Mary Cameron. The posters are to be designed and executed by Miss Katherine Wolcott. Miss Grace Dixon has charge of the boxes. Among those who will participate in the pageant will be Mr. and Mrs. Louis L. Burr, Mrs. H. H. Lobdell, Mrs. Maurice Goodkind, Miss Mary Thomas, Mrs. G. T. Banzet, Miss Elizabeth Channon, Miss Catherine Pierce, Miss Alice Rockwell, Richard Mann, Jack O'Connor, Mrs. Sheridan Masters, Miss Catherine Simmons, Mrs. Eben Lane, Miss Sarah Washburn, Miss Hester Washburn, and Miss Constance Kretchmar.

An informal military dance will be given by the Woman's War Relief auxiliary, Eighteenth district, on Saturday evening, Dec. 1, at the garage at the corner of Stony Island avenue and East Sixty-ninth street. The proceeds will be used for the purchase of material for sweaters and other articles for the enlisted men at Camp Grant. Tickets will be 50 cents and the public is invited.

An illustrated talk on Venice will be given on Friday afternoon at the musical to be given at the residence of Mrs. Samuel S. Hutchinson of 6231 Sheridan road. Miss Lila Van Kirk will give the lecture and the proceeds will go to war charities.

The football game to be held on Saturday at Stagg field between the student officers of Fort Sheridan and the jackies from the Great Lakes Naval Training station will be a great social affair, as well as a notable athletic event. Many society people have taken boxes, among them Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. William Wrigley Jr., Lieut. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour. Capt. and Mrs. W. A. Moffett will be present and many of the opera people expect to attend the game. Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick is chairman of the Illinois group of patronesses.

The last in the series of informal lectures on "Living on the Edge of the War" which are being given by Miss Elizabeth Frewen Risser at the Blackstone hotel will be delivered on Friday morning at 11 o'clock. A delightful series of afternoon teas will be given on each afternoon of the coming fortnight at the studio of Christian Abrahamsen of 19 East Pearson street, whose portraits of Miss Helen T. Birch, Chief Justice Harry Olson, Francis S. Peabody, Prof. Joseph Jastrow, and Frank Baackes are attracting much favorable comment. The portraits are now in Mr. Abrahamsen's studio, and among those who are acting as patronesses at the teas are Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis, Mrs. Alan C. Dixon, Mrs. Wentworth Field, Mrs. Albert Fink, Miss Helen Gurley, Mrs. George Higginson Jr., Mrs. Lockwood Honoré, Mrs. James Keeley, Mrs. Robert G. McGann, Mrs. Julian Mason, Mrs. Potter Palmer Jr., Mrs. Honoré Palmer, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, and Miss Ethel Wrenn.

Thanksgiving at the South Shore Country club this year will have an added delight in the presence of a hundred jackies from the Great Lakes Naval Training station, who are to be entertained by a committee of members. Also the club announces a formal ball on Thanksgiving eve.

A Thanksgiving dance is announced by the Temple Judea auxiliary for Thursday evening at the Community center ballroom at 8 o'clock. This is the annual dance of the auxiliary.

The Jewish Consumptives' Relief society will hold a card party at the Hotel Morrison on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Maj. Eric Fisher Wood, author of "The Note-Book of an Intelligence Officer" (Century), is at present stationed at Chillicothe, O., as assistant chief of staff to Maj. Gen. Glenn.

NAT GOULD has a bigger reading public than any other romancer, and probably there aren't fifty men and women in Chicago who have ever heard of him. He is the odil of the Tommies, and he is already growing popular with the American soldiers over there. Over 10,000,000 [ten million, that is!] copies of his books have been sold, and sturdy literary pillars like "The Athamaeum" say that "all living writers are headed by Mr. Nat Gould, and of the great of the past Dumas only surpasses his popularity."

Over 2,000 of his most recent tales have just been sent to the American troops libraries at the front, in response to a pleading demand. And still even magazine editors and publishers in America haven't yet discovered him.

Nat Gould doesn't pretend to write literature. He does pretend to tell a good story, and he has no rivals in that line, so the soldiers in France say. His tales are all stories of the turf, and he has been writing them for twenty-six years. His latest novel, "A Rider in Khaki," will be his one hundred twenty-third romance. Besides writing books he has done a lot of newspaper work, written no end of short stories, and turned out a lengthy autobiography, dashed off a few plays, and lately he has been attending to the filming of some of his tales.

When I first heard the name of Nat Gould and of the amazing popularity which he had in England I thought he was a man of O, say, 38 or 40. Investigation proves that he is almost 60—will celebrate his sixtieth birthday four days before Christmas. He is under contract to his publishers to turn out five novels a year, and he lives up to his contract. They are published to begin with at 6 shillings [about $1.50], then at a shilling, and finally at sixpence, and at sixpence they sell by the hundreds of thousands.

Instead of being in the great war himself, as I supposed he was, he has sent two of his three sons with the royal flying corps.

When our boys begin writing about the books they read and like—after the novelty of the new country and the new life has worn off a bit, you'll see that they'll write about Nat Gould's books. They do in England, and always beg to have another sent them.

Lieut. Coningsby Dawson, author of "Carry On" [John Lane] et al., has returned to his regiment after a furlough in the United States. He was wounded in battle a year ago and the wound developed so bad a case of gas gangrene that the surgeons decided to amputate his arm as the only means of saving his life. He refused to permit the operation and finally recovered. He's one of the fighting Canydians.

Word comes from England that Elinor Glyn's fervor for war work has carried her to the point of translating her dramatization of "Three Weeks" into French and presenting the play, with herself as the queenly heroine and with players from the Théâtre Français as her support. And all of this for war's sweet sake. She has appeared in a couple of semi-private performances of her English dramatization of the story. This Paris production may have happened—I heard merely the rumor of its going to happen. It's a choice bit to be doing!

The second volume of Frank H. Simond's, "The History of the World War" [Doubleday Page], gives a record of the great war down to Jan. 1, 1916. Frank H. Simonds is the first American to undertake a history of the great conflict, but his interest in the war—in wars in general—is not national, but cosmopolitan. When he was a small boy he was deep in history, in military tactics, and in mapmaking. He was at Harvard specializing in history when the Spanish-American war broke out and he left college to enlist. Lately he has been a journalist, a correspondent, and always an enthusiast on military affairs. His familiarity with European politics long ago convinced him that there would be a great war some day and he made many walking tours through Italy, France, and the Vosges for the sole purpose of familiarizing himself with what he felt sure would be the battlefields of the future. After the battle of the Marne he went to Europe to study the battlefield and he was received by such men as Rudyard Kipling, Viscount Bryce, and Lord Northcliffe as a great historian. Mr. Simonds will go on writing a contemporary history of the war as long as the war lasts.

"For France" [Doubleday-Page] is a benefit volume which is a benefit not only to the fund to which the profits go, but to the reader who has been canny enough to rescue it from the mêlée of charity books and to read it. Literally every man and woman of art and letters in the United States has contributed something to the volume—most of it written especially "For France." Charles Hanson Towne edited it and Theodore Roosevelt has written an introduction. The French Heroes fund is the beneficiary of the volume.

Two new volumes to add to your shelf of Tagore are "Nationalism," the lecture which he delivered at Orchestra hall last winter, together with "Nationalism in Japan and India," and a poem, and "Sacrifice and Other Plays," which contains four of his most popular plays. The volumes are in the uniform Macmillan edition.

For those who look forward to the short stories of Katharine Holland Brown with eagerness, there is a collection of some of the best of them in permanent form under the title of "The Wages of Honor" [Scribners].

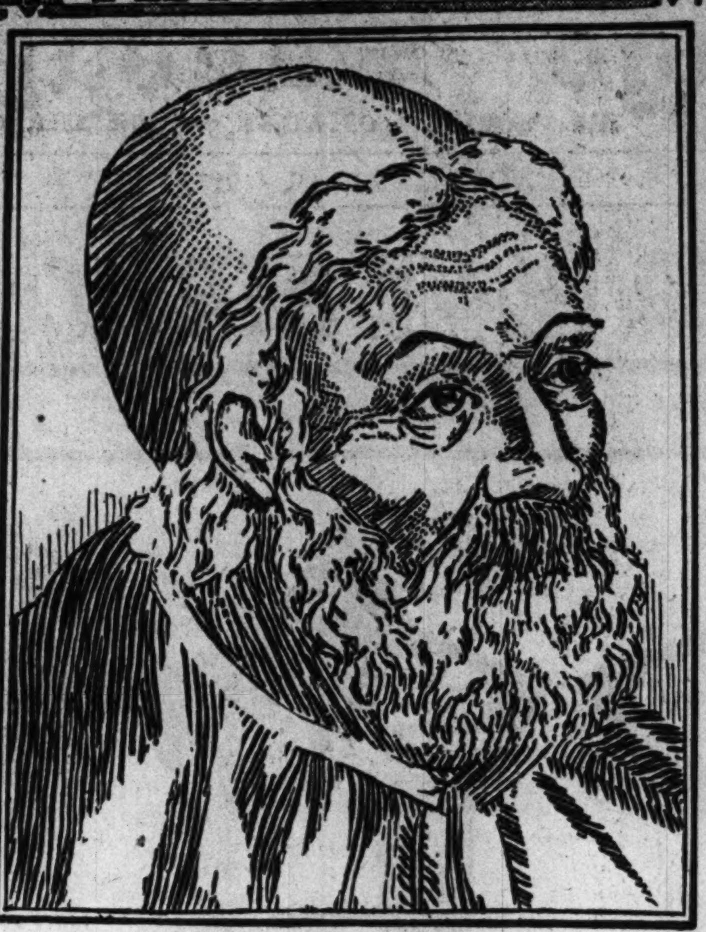
A giant Bible over 5 feet 2 inches high and nearly 3 feet 6 inches wide has been bound by the Oxford University Press for the Bible Crusade in London—in case you're interested.

"The Land of Deepening Shadows" [Doran], by Thomas Curtin, gives you information about Germany at the third year of the war which no other book that I have seen even hints at doing. Mr. Curtin tramped through rural Germany, took the word of no man until he had proved that the man was right, got his news first hand instead of from the official shepherds of the flocks of neutral correspondents. He is obviously a fair and open minded man, and when he judges Germany he is neither harsh nor merciful, but almost Judaically just. Germany needs nothing but justice to condemn her.

Two volumes on Little Theaters have appeared this fall, "The Little Theater in the United States" [Holt], by Constance D'Arcy Mackay, and "The Insurgent Theater" [Huebsch], by Thomas H. Dickinson. They both remind us that the Chicago Little theater was one of the first in this country, and one of the most consistent in its ideals. Far from crushed by its misfortunes in the Fine Arts building, the Little theater is beginning a season this month with "Candida," one of the "Pleasant" Bernard Shaw plays.

A new Arthur Rackham book is always an event in my life of books. This year's is as lovely as any that he has ever done. "The Romance of King Arthur" [Macmillan] an abridgment of Malory's Morte D'Arthur, is a foreordained subject for Arthur Rackham's chivalric and fantastic pen and brush.

ASTRONOMY



CLAUDIUS PTOLEMY
FROM A WOODCUT DRAWN BY S.F. MAXWELL

THE WORKS OF PTOLEMY.

STRANGE as it may seem, the Greeks devoted little attention to astronomy, compared with the time they spent on art and literature. They used a clumsy lunar calendar, and although its errors were gross and glaring, made little effort to correct it. Such knowledge of the stars as they possessed appears to have been taken bodily from the Egyptian store of learning.

Several of the most renowned thinkers of ancient Greece made attempts to philosophize a system for the sun and planets, but apparently none of them realized the importance of having careful observations from which to make their deductions. Some ingenious conjectures were made concerning the structure of the solar system, notably by Pythagoras, who placed the sun in the center of a circle of planets, but they were mere guesses, and being unsubstantiated by any concise knowledge they bore no fruit.

It was not until after the time of Alexander the Great, when Grecian culture was spread throughout the world, that we find a single astronomer of note.

Claudius Ptolemy was a Greek, who lievd at Alexandria, in Egypt, about the year 130 A. D. Nothing of certainty is known about his life, and his works exist only in translation. His astronomical labors include his catalogue of stars and his theories of the construction of the solar system. Ptolemy took the list of stars which were in existence in his time, correcting them and making numerous additions, and finally made a catalogue of them, giving their positions, their descriptions, and names, if any.

When the Arabs conquered Egypt they were so impressed with the stupendous labors shown in this book that they called it "al magestuni," which means "the greatest." There are many translations of the almagest which have come down to modern times.

The stars, Ptolemy thought, were bright lights fixed on the surface of a great crystalline sphere, which turned once in a day. The sun, moon, and planets each had a separate sphere, and their obvious irregularities of motion resulted because they were fastened upon small spheres which rolled around the larger ones. The earth he knew to be a sphere, and he placed it in the center.

The reasoning which he employed to prove that the earth did not move is interesting. The sphere of the stars, he argued, turned at an absolutely uniform rate. Now, if the earth were not in the center, its distance from any particular star would vary from hour to hour, which would cause the star to move faster in one part of the sky than in another. Also, if the earth moved about, it would come nearer any particular star at some times than at others, and would therefore cause the star's motion to seem disturbed. But, he reasoned, neither of these conditions has been observed; therefore the earth must be at rest.

Ptolemy completely erred in his estimates of stellar distances and in his scheme of the solar system, while at the same time employing the soundest logic. According to what was then known, there was nothing amiss in his teachings, but in the spring of 1610, when Galileo turned his new telescope upon Jupiter, he saw four unknown satellites revolving about a planet, a thing which Ptolemy had declared was impossible. Then, in 1851, Faucault hung a great pendulum from the dome of the Pantheon, in Paris, and showed by its disturbed vibrations that the earth is actually turning on its axis.

Modern astronomical efforts have completely supplanted the theories which Ptolemy considered his greatest work. On the other hand, his star lists in the almagest, to which he devoted less theory and more care, have furnished the basis for all the star atlases in use today.

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

NOVEMBER

Late November.

A WIND with a new voice fills the eaves and pulls at the casements. The dried rose vines pass forth and back and the thorns scratch the glass of the windows, scratching as if intangible beauties, less than the shadows of perfumed memories of a July night, were afraid of a new portent and were asking shelter; as if the red bud of the wild rose which had unfolded, paled and dropped its petals were again where only the red berry remains and were asking shelter for the night.

The new voice is that of a wind which has passed over northern pine and hemlock, balsam and tamarack, which has carried snow and has been under the wings of the wild goose, which now comes to the white oaks with suggestions of what it has been and intimations of what it will become.

The sound in the gables and the eaves, at the casements and in the areas, around the corners and in the oaks, as the thorns of the climbing rose vines scratch at the glass and as the fire sputters, is the sound of the firs and hemlock, the whisper which is the intimation of storm and is a sign to go with Orion coming into the evening sky.

Comfortable apprehensions start at the sound of the wind with a new voice, and the four walls of hut happiness find a new glow and new radiance from the light of the fire which is an answer to the sound without.

"Rengo Belt" Corset

—the corset of countless superiorities

That tired, lack-luster feeling that so many women experience at the close of day is usually traceable to incorrect corseting. These HYATT BEARINGS Hold the World's Endurance Record

HERE THEY ARE—the original "Hyatt Roller" bearings, dripping with grease—just as they were taken from the "Hyatt Roller" at the end of its long grinding circuit of the country.

272,962 miles is now the official record of this car—a greater proved distance than any other car has ever gone.

When these bearings were photographed, it was the first time they had seen the light since the world's long-distance veteran started its journey "Around the U. S. A."

Yet this original set of Hyatt bearings is still serviceable. Laboratory examination shows an average wear of only four one-thousandths of an inch (.004")—a wear perceptible only to micrometer and microscope—not enough to interfere with the good service they have given and will continue to give when returned to their positions in the car.

In view of their past — nine years strenuous service covering 261,800 miles—their latest 11,163 mile performance is all the more remarkable.

They have surmounted all the toughest conditions of touring—gumbo roads, mountain grades, desert sands—and have finished on schedule time.

This test gives you a definite indication of the enduring, quiet, carefree service you can expect from your Hyatt Roller Bearings.

"Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

THE WAR AND AFTER.

The only nation at war which has no immediate tangible objective is the United States. Every other nation is fighting for something and, if it wins, will get something tangible.

The United States is fighting for something intangible. We could not collect it at a peace conference. We could not add it, if we were victorious, to our possessions. The intangible something for which we are fighting may be called humanity, right, democracy, peace, or anything else, but it is, in truth, the security of the United States.

That is the only thing in behalf of which the United States government has the right to conscript the men of the United States and make them fight. It is for that the United States is fighting and it is that we must plan to preserve.

We are now fighting, but how about planning? Having fought the war, what will be our position after it? To what extent will the fighting have promoted the cause? Every citizen ought to ask himself that question and in asking it try to determine for himself and for the effect of his opinion upon public opinion whether the United States can find its security in the outcome of this war if it does nothing else than fight the war, if it does not change its habits and its thought, if it remains after the war precisely what it was before the war, unprepared and without military power.

We have no doubt that after the war there will be a general disposition to study and remove causes of war. Democracy undoubtedly will be advanced. Peoples under autocratic rule will progress towards democratic rule. Incentives to war which had their origin in aristocratic thought, habit, and ambition, or in the purposes of a military caste, will be removed to the extent that military castes and aristocratic impulses are eliminated.

With the progress of democracy this elimination will be apparent and appreciable. Whatever form new Russia takes, for instance, we may be convinced it will not be controlled and directed by the same ideas which prevailed in the government of old, autocratic Russia. Its people under the new government will not go to war as its people did under the old government.

Democracy, however, does not eliminate war. It seems to us to be a mischievous error to conclude that the spread of democracy and the elimination of war are in direct relation. There will be a new influence in Europe, that of democracy, if the enemies of Germany win, but although that new influence will modify it will not completely change national impulses.

The end of a war victorious for the allies will bring, we may assume, a wider democracy, new influences, and a great desire for peace. In such conditions the machinery of a new internationalism may be erected and for many years it may seem as if the world had at last found a working arrangement for the control of one nation in its relations to another.

The end of the war also will find the United States developed as a military nation, a healthy, strong military nation, not in the power of a military caste, but with a well equipped citizen army, composed of men taken from civil life and, after service, anxious to return to it.

America will have the equipment for this army. It will have all the material. It will have the whole machinery needed for the training and maintenance of a citizen army. The question which concerns the security of the United States—the issue which brings the United States into this war—will be whether this equipment, this machinery, this system, shall be preserved for the security of the United States or whether it shall be junked, the army lost, the country returned to its former condition of defenselessness and the issue determined only as against Germany and for the present.

On one side we are asked to accept a condition of increased democracy and general disgust for war as indicative that the world is done with war forever. On the other we are asked to consider that the United States can win permanent security only as it is able to protect itself.

THE TRIBUNE does not believe that a national policy of security ought to be built upon a speculation that the future will be safe for this country without any military provisions for security.

We believe that the purposes of the war will not be served unless the United States, emerging from the war a strong military nation, takes precautions, in spite of new world influences and conditions, to remain a strong nation, preserving the military machinery it has created, training its young men and keeping itself in a strong but not provocative position in the family of nations.

For this the first essential requirement is the passage of a universal service law.

RODIN'S MESSAGE.

"With Rodin a style begins," said an eminent critic, and numberless have been Rodin's imitators. For good or ill? Generally, the latter. Rodin felt it. When heads grew meaninglessly out of marble blocks, when ugliness became an ideal, and when the gigantesque (there is no English word that quite carries the sense) abolished grace and beauty and spiritual charm, Rodin turned upon the Rodinolaters and read them a lesson.

Sometimes with his own pen, but oftener by way of the interview, he kept telling young artists to catch their inspiration directly from nature. "Art," he was always saying, "is only a profound study of nature." He himself owed much to Michael Angelo and more to the Greeks, but what he got from them was not style, primarily, it was primarily the conviction that became a source of style. In a word, the conviction was this: Inspiration, far from being the initial element in creating a work of art, is a result obtained by closely observing nature.

He never began by imagining a statue and posing a model to suit the idea. He began always by watching his models when they were not posing. A superb attitude caught his fancy, thrilled him, fired his artistic soul. In a flash he sketched it. There followed a profound study of the model in that attitude. Out of the study came a flaming revelation of principles, sentiments, emotions. His problem was then to seize upon the technical means by which those principles, sentiments, and emotions could be given expression. Style, so he reasoned, was not a thing applied to nature by the artist. It was a thing forced upon the artist by nature.

Summed up, Rodin's message amounted to this: Quit talking of temperament. Quit talking of style. Quit mooning about Art with a big A. Study nature. Nature itself will give inspiration. No other inspiration counts. Nature itself, when profoundly studied, will dictate style. Style arrived at in any other way is only affectation. Never ape the masters. Especially never ape Rodin. Be honest. Work. The highest romance is not imaginative, it springs from the realism that by infinite patience can penetrate the very soul of things and faithfully portray it.

COME OUT OF THE MUCK.

Of the South Water street scheme for river reclamation the Chicago plan commission says: "It is a simple plan, involves no legal difficulties, is not prohibitive in cost of construction, and will save, in a single year, an amount equal to the total cost. It will also greatly increase property values, thereby adding to the taxable property of Chicago and increasing the city's revenue."

These are demonstrable statements, or, it may be assumed, the plan commission would not be their author, and they introduce into the situation the element of wonder that benefits so much needed should be so denied in reasonable expectation.

We are convinced that unless a great change in the Chicago mood is experienced the river banks will continue in the appearance of dirty alleys, foodstuffs marketed in South Water street will continue to be marketed in the same wasteful and expensive fashion as now, and north and south traffic across the river will continue to break against the dirty, ugly barrier which this produce street throws across it.

Something is wrong with a city in which such expectations are reasonable. The city government as a means of getting city improvement is dismissed without consideration. It is not expected to do anything. We have been trained to a different conception of city government. A government which represented the going strength of the city, the intelligence, energy, and imagination of the city, would not be recognized as a Chicago government.

We do not ask of a city government even that it "set and think." We know it will merely "set." We would not recognize as a local administrative body anything which had a mental process or a movement of physical activity. We recognize municipal authority in a spongelike substance which gets into the city hall, swells out, and fills it.

Therefore we shall never make any progress in the direction of either esthetics or utility until public opinion is far ahead of its administration. The only definite purposes the city has are to be found outside the city administration.

Such a citizen as Charles Wacker may do ten times the amount of constructive work done by any ten mayors of the city, but such a citizen and the agencies coöperating with him must work by persuasion, education, appeals, and by such influences as can be made at all effective upon popular understanding and imagination.

If that is the only fashion in which Chicago can be brought to a sense of its avoidable errors and its obtainable benefits it is the duty of every agency which can help to devote itself to the work of influencing public opinion.

The South Water street river reclamation project which would give the city a part of its esthetic heritage is one project in a great scheme. As areas which realize their possibilities are created in the city they will stand out against the surrounding ugliness as a rebuke and admonishment.

Here is an improvement which represents a complete gain, one which can pay its own way. If it has difficulty in getting public support the city is even more indifferent to its needs than was realized.

FOOD FOR OUR ALLIES.

So many worthy proposals, not infrequently accompanied by appeals for money, are advertised as necessary to "win the war" that we may perhaps become confused as to which are essential and which are desirable. Or rather we may reduce them all to the same plane, making an equal sacrifice for each one under the impression that we are doing our full duty and that if victory is not achieved it won't be our fault.

For this reason, perhaps, the nation has hardly begun to make a serious effort in food conservation. It probably would be no exaggeration to say that only the very poor, for whom prices are prohibitive, have placed any considerable limitations on their rations. Yet food conservation is one of the indispensable sacrifices, if it actually is a sacrifice, that the American people are asked to make.

For months the food administration has sought to impress us with the necessity of food economy. The statement of Harry A. Wheeler, the state food administrator, indicates how inadequate the response has been. It appears that there will be a shortage of 125,000,000 bushels of wheat and that we are furnishing only 60 per cent of the pork products needed by our allies. In order to meet this situation we are not asked to go hungry, but we are asked to use intelligent judgment in confining our diet to foodstuffs that cannot be readily exported.

To the degree that our allies are underfed their fighting morale will suffer and to the same degree our military aims will be made more difficult of accomplishment.

Editorial of the Day

"GOOD GOD, GENTLEMEN!"

[From the Catholic Citizen.]

Jeremiah O'Leary, president of the American Truth society, whose paper, Bull, was denied the mails because of its pro-Germanism, now assures us that he is a martyr to the Irish cause:

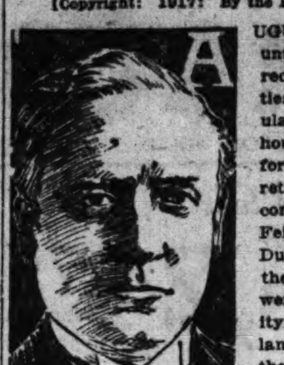
"I have striven as every self-respecting man of Irish blood should strive, to secure recognition of Ireland's claim to absolute independence. For these crimes I have been misrepresented by the press and persecuted by Woodrow Wilson and his administration."

That will probably be the cue of all of "the small envenomed clique," as they are progressively exposed or repressed. They "did it for Ireland" (?)—not for Germany. If they practiced "sabotage," if they blew up American munition plants, it was "all for Ireland."

Here they are putting Ireland and the Irish cause in evidence as a reason and excuse for acts that are criminal under the law and opinions that are inimical to the American cause. They virtually say: "We must be false to America in order to be true to Ireland."

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1917: By the Brentwood company.]

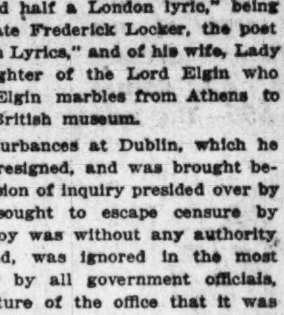


AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, until Easter, 1916, was recognized as the wittiest and the most popular member of the house of commons, but, forced to resign the secretaryship for Ireland in consequence of the Sinn Fein disturbances in Dublin and elsewhere in the Emerald isle, which were ascribed to the laxity of his rule in Ireland, he has never been the same man since. All his sense of humor and his sunny cheeriness, which won for him so many friends, have left him. He conveys the impression of a thoroughly broken man—a pathetic figure—and therefore no surprise has been caused by his announcement that he is resigning his seat for Bristol in the house of commons and is retiring altogether from public life.

Domestic bereavements have added to his melancholy, including the loss of his wife. She was a widow when she married him, her first husband having been the poet Tennyson's favorite son, Lionel, who died when returning from India in 1886 and was buried at sea. She was, as Tennyson put it, "half a Bruce and half a London lyric," being the daughter of the late Frederick Locker, the poet and author of "London Lyrics," and of his wife, Lady Charlotte Bruce, daughter of the Lord Elgin who brought the famous Elgin marbles from Athens to England and to the British museum.

When after the disturbances at Dublin, which he failed to prevent, he resigned, and was brought before the royal commission of inquiry presided over by Lord Hardinge, he sought to escape censure by declaring that a viceroy was without any authority or prestige in Ireland, was ignored in the most contemptuous manner by all government officials, and drew such a picture of the office that it was felt that no one with any spirit or character would be willing to place himself in so humiliating a position. Indeed, his evidence before the royal commission went to show that the office of viceroy was a ridiculous sham. On the strength of this Premier Asquith, in the house of commons immediately afterwards, denounced the office of viceroy as utterly useless and ridiculed it as one of the most anomalous institutions in the world.

Yet within a month afterward, for reasons which Premier Asquith never vouchsafed to parliament, Lord Wimborne was reappointed as viceroy and returned as such to Dublin, with even still less authority, and assuredly less prestige, than before his resignation. The fact that he should have accepted reappointment after his own showing before the royal commission of inquiry lowered him in the estimation of friends and foes alike.

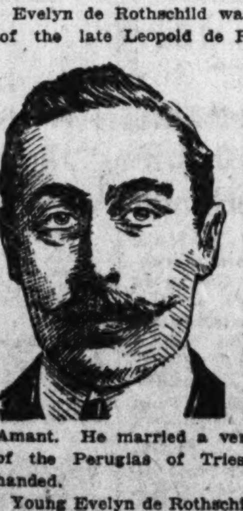


Vladimir Puriskevitch, who, according to the cable dispatches, has been arrested at Petrograd along with young Prince Yousouppoff, who was living in hiding in his house, or rather palace, in the capital under an assumed name, has for a number of years been one of the most prominent figures in Russian public life, and after the beginning of the war became one of the moving spirits and most powerful chieftains of the Russian Red Cross. Both he and Prince Yousouppoff are charged with conspiracy to restore the monarchy under the regency or dictatorship of Grand Duke Nicholas.

Vladimir Puriskevitch was the leader of the right in the duma prior to the revolution, but was the first to denounce Rasputin by name in parliament and to demand of the cabinet that its members should prevail upon the czar to banish him. It was on Puriskevitch's Red Cross hospital train that the death of Rasputin was decided by a meeting of about half a dozen persons, which included young Prince Yousouppoff.

Puriskevitch, who is a very wealthy man, has all along bitterly denounced Kerensky and his revolutionary associates on the ground that their one cry and their one thought has been to save—not Russia—but the revolution. If they had given less thought to the revolution and more to the safety of the nation the revolution might have been a success and Russia a republic. Puriskevitch proclaimed that, although a monarchist, he would give all his allegiance and support to any sensible Socialist in the revolutionary government who honesttly sought to save Russia. But he declares that the experiences of the last nine or ten months have definitely shown that no salvation is to be expected from the revolutionary elements at Petrograd and at Moscow and that the only hope of Russia lies in the restoration not necessarily of the czar but of the monarchy.

That a scion of the great banking dignity of Rothschild should lose his life as a twentieth century crusader against the Turks in the Holy Land is one of the extraordinary situations brought about by the present war. In the days of King Richard Coeur de Lion, of the Sultan Saladin, of Peter the Hermit, and of Duke Godfrey de Bouillon, first Christian king of Jerusalem, the Crusaders regarded the Jews as their foes. Now they are comrades in arms. Gen. Sir Edmund Allenby, the British commander-in-chief in the Holy Land, has at least two wholly Jewish regiments among his troops now before Jerusalem. And it is probable that there have been a number of their coreligionist officers besides Maj. Evelyn de Rothschild who have laid down their lives in the fight to free the land of their fathers from the Ottoman thralldom of centuries.



Evelyn de Rothschild was the second of the sons of the late Leopold de Rothschild, who died last June and who was perhaps the best known, and assuredly the most popular, of the members of the house, for he rode to hounds, maintained a fine pack, and also a particularly well selected racing stable. Indeed, it is no exaggeration to say that he was for several decades a pillar of the turf, and is on record as having twice won the Derby, with Sir Bevis in 1879 and in 1904 with St. Amant. He married a very beautiful woman, one of the Perugias of Trieste, and was very free handed.

Young Evelyn de Rothschild was a regimental comrade and particular crony of his cousin, Lord Rosebery's younger son, the Hon. Neil Primrose, who succumbed to his wounds at the front in Palestine last week, and whose mother, now long dead, was a De Rothschild.

GETTING FIT FOR WINTER.

IT must be right to prepare for winter, since all nature does. The earth fruits in summer in preparation for winter. It is easy for wild animals to get fit for winter because nature provides an abundance of fat producing foods. Possums fatten because the persimmon trees are full of carbohydrates in the form of sugar—the most easily assimilated and therefore the most fat producing form of carbohydrate. Coons fatten readily because the fields are full of carbohydrate in the shape of corn.

Quail fatten because grain lies handy on the ground and the warm season has multiplied insect life. Everywhere wild animals are round and sleek. For them this fattening up process is preparation for winter. Not having the character to be thrifty in the sense that they hoard food against a season of privation, their bodies make recompense by storing food in the shape of fat. Let us get the point clearly. Their great enemy is starvation, and they make themselves fit to contend against it by becoming obese.

Certain customs show us that man responds to the same primal urge. Certain peoples have the custom of sewing their children up for the winter. The children are given a good bath, dressed in clean flannel undergarments, which are securely sewed on. The sewed on garments are not removed until time for the spring cleaning. There are additions but no subtractions. The mother makes preparation against her bête noire—washing, drying, and ironing a lot of clothes in winter time with no laundry facilities.

The farmer whose home is heated by one base burner stove makes his household ready for winter by banking dirt around the outside wall and chinking the cracks around the windows and doors. His enemy is cold air and he prepares against it.

Just as the woman sews her child in and the farmer who banks his house, however foolish they may be, are wiser than the animals which fatten up in preparation for winter, so there are even more intelligent methods of preparing for winter than either of those described.

In northern latitudes the death rate is lowest in October. In November there is a gradual rise. This rise becomes more marked in December, and continues through January and February. The maximum is reached in March. A decline then starts and continues steadily until June.

So far as we are able to judge the sickness rate follows the death rate in its rises and falls. The unfitness rate probably parallels the sickness rate. Furthermore, the greatest element in these increased rates—unfitness, sickness, and death—is infection.

The tendency of men to stay in overheated, illy ventilated houses follows the same curve. Men are out of doors as much time as possible during October. When they are indoors the windows are wide open. In November they stay in more. Fires are lighted and windows are closed. As the winter progresses the time spent indoors increases. The houses become increasingly stuffy. We say that wealthy and wise people go south in winter in order to be cool. They substitute open air at 50 and sunshine for close house air at 75 and lack of sunshine. Of course, the great gain in going south in winter is from being out of doors.

Would that from somewhere a new Richardson or a new Frank Lloyd Wright would come to build for us a house in which the sickness rate of the inhabitants would be as low in February as in October. But not all of the unfitness, sickness, and mortality of midwinter can be charged to the house. Much of it is to be charged to the man. With the oncoming of cold weather he stops exercising.

If he is an office man he walks to the car in the morning, takes a few steps around the office during the day, and walks to the car at night. He eats his dinner, sits around for a while, and then goes to bed. No exercise worth speaking of for his arm, neck, and trunk muscles and but little for his leg muscles. No fresh air except for a short time while getting to and from the office. The housewife gets even less fresh air. The present day household labor savers make it so that she gets very little bending exercise or exercise for her trunk and arm muscles.

In consequence of our winter customs and habits we are soft and flabby by December. Soft, flabby people are highly susceptible to colds and all other forms of infection. They are less able to throw off infections once acquired. It is for these reasons that wise men prepare for the winter by putting themselves in good condition.

To the civilized man of the twentieth century infection stands in the same relation in which starvation stands to the wild animal. Putting one's self in good condition means working off the surplus fat, developing muscle, making one's joints supple, and cultivating wind and endurance.

We say that a person has good wind if he can run, say 200 yards, at speed without panting unduly—capacity for supreme effort. We say that a person has endurance if he can walk or work for hours on a stretch without giving out—capacity for sustained effort.

So long as the weather continues good the best method of preparing against winter is by open air games. This is the golfer's chance. The game builds up the leg, arm, and trunk muscles. A hard drive calls into play the muscles of the abdomen, neck, and shoulders, as well as those of the arm. The walking develops the leg muscles. The time spent is in the open. The air is clean.

Two months of golf and the strong muscles of the back draw the shoulders back and take out the stoop. No other season is quite so good for horseback riding. The pound of the abdominal organs on the muscles of the front and sides greatly develops and strengthens the latter. A man who has any tone left in his abdominal muscles will lose some of his "paunch" through a daily horseback ride.

I occasionally notice men running through the parks in the early morning hours. Some of these are prize fighters and wrestlers in training, some are ordinary citizens likewise in training. Running is much better exercise than walking. In the latter the propelling foot does not leave the ground until the forward or receiving foot has been placed.

In running the propelling foot has left the ground before the forward foot touches it. Each step is therefore a one legged jump. Not only are the leg muscles called on for more exertion but the trunk muscles likewise work much more strenuously. There is very little development of the wind in walking. Running is "good for the wind."

The rate and the depth of respiration are determined by the concentration of carbonic acid in the blood and in far less measure by the proportion of oxygen the blood contains. Whenever the blood is becoming overloaded with carbonic acid gas we pant. Panting empties the lungs of foul air and carries into them a larger quantity of fresh air.

In other words, it is the condition of the garbage can which determines the frequency of the visits of the garbage wagon. A man who is out of condition pants upon the slightest exertion. A man in condition can run or jump without increasing the rate of his respiration or heart beat. Running is about the best of exercises for "developing one's wind."

For those who are equal to it there is no fall exercise better than handball. No man can stand handball unless his heart is sound, his wind is good, and his muscles are firm. It is a game for the vigorous only. Handball more than either of the exercises mentioned above develops the heat making powers. And one of the great reasons for getting into shape for the winter is development of those powers.

A prize fighter or a football player in training does not need to wrap up against the cold. He seldom wears an overcoat on the street on cold days. He never hugs the fire. The windows in his room are seldom closed and the cracks are never stuffed. When you talk to him about the discomforts of cold weather he does not understand. He is never cold, for he is a good heat maker.

Most of our ills in winter are due to lack of fresh air, and much of that lack is because we are poor heat makers. All the sports, games, and exercises increase heat making capacity, but none is better in this regard than handball. The handball player gets pleasure out of his cold shower and his cold air bath. The man who can get pleasure out of a cold shower and a cold air bath in winter is usually in little danger of pneumonia, and loses but little time from colds.

A man need not enter the winter submarine zone unprepared if his duties make it impossible for him to golf or play handball. A half hour a day spent in exercising in his home will be approximately as satisfactory. In fact, some of the fittest men I know of never play golf or any other game. They never allow anything to interfere with their home exercises.

It is not necessary to take anybody's system. One system is as good as another. Any man can work out his own system. The great need is for "stick." The tendency is for persons taking home exercises to work at them faithfully for one week, fitfully during the second week, spasmodically during the second month, and after that to chink the windows, hug the fire, and trust to luck.

TOO MANY JONAH FRIENDS.

M. H. writes: "I am a girl nearly 19 years old. Although I am never sick, I am rather pale, and some of my friends have said that I may be anæmic. I am about 5 feet 4 inches tall and weigh 110 pounds. The only times I have been sick were when I had the mumps and measles when I was a child. I have been subject to very heavy colds, but lately have grown stronger and have had only one severe cold since last December. I have rather poor teeth, but am having them attended to. I started to work about six months ago. Friends have said that might be the reason for my lack of color. However, I lived in the country nearly all my life up to two years ago. I have no parents, and well meaning friends take it upon themselves to warn me of all diseases. I don't think there is any cause for worry, although I must confess I have thought a great deal about this latest disease that they have just attached to me. Just what do you think of my case?"

REPLY.

I do not see that you have any case. You may be having a little trouble getting city broke, but that is the worst about you that I can see. Try to get some exercise in the open air. Get into the park on Sunday. Skate when the time comes. Can your Jonah friends.

NO CAUSE FOR WORRY.

C. A. writes: Can a person have tuberculosis and not cough? I do not cough, but my sputum is black. This I suspect is my lungs. I do not spit blood or sweat at nights, but I do get fatigued quickly. When the days get cold and I stay outdoors for some time, then go inside, my face gets red. During this redness, lasting for the rest of the day, I am warm in the head. The cause of this condition I would like to know, for my face does not get red when I am outside in the cold. I am 18 years old, 6 feet 1 inch, and weigh 163 pounds. Have never seen a doctor yet."

REPLY.

A person can have tuberculosis and not cough. Tuberculosis of the lungs in the very earliest stages does not cause cough. But none of your symptoms indicate that you have consumption. Dirty sputum means that you breathe air that is filled with soot and dust. Redness of the face in one who passes in and out of doors is not significant in any way. It strikes me that you are a big, husky, healthy boy, somewhat given to introspection. Live right and do not worry about your health.

BITING THE NAILS.

Mrs. R. J. does not think our reply to an inquirer about biting the nails helpful. The reply was that nail biting was a bad habit and is controlled through developing self-control. She suggests that keeping the nails manicured will cure the habit. If home manicuring does not suffice, the services of a professional should be made use of. She thinks that irritation from jagged nails induces the habit.

DELAYED FOR SEWER CONSTRUCTION.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Will East Ninety-second street, between Anthony and Jeffery avenues, be paved during 1918, and when will the first payment be called for?

TAXPAYER.

Assessment for paving, with asphaltic macadam, Ninety-second street between Anthony avenue and Jeffrey avenue is confirmed, but the work cannot be done this year for the reason that a sewer has to be built in Ninety-second street between Luella avenue and Yates avenue, which has only recently been confirmed in court. The laying of the sewer will delay the pavement until the spring of next year.

My father then promised, in the presence of a witness, that he would give each child the amount my mother wished us to have. He has remarried and has not kept his promise. WAR ORGANIZATION.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—[Editor of The Trib-Tribune.]—Your editorial, "War Organization," has the ring that is sorely needed at this time and unless your words of counsel and warning are heeded we will all pay a higher tax to the German war lord than we are at present paying to the United States government.

While your paper has been severely criticized in many quarters for publishing Arthur Sears Henning's article on the "Luxuries" the women are making for the boys who are giving 100 per cent service for you and me and the rest of us who cannot get into this fight with a bayonet, there are some of us who can see what this article has done for "showing up" the inefficiency of the departments from which the statements were issued.

I have an acquaintance in France, an officer, who should be fully equipped if any are, who writes that he has never suffered from the cold as much as he has since he has been in France in the army work. We, his family and friends, are now sending to him not only one sweater, but two, and a change of warm clothes including socks and heavy underwear. Has it ever occurred to these "hot house plants" here at home with their comfortable "bullet-proof" jobs, that men in the trenches get wet through and through and unless they have a little more than the "generous equipment" furnished by the government they are compelled to suffer unnecessarily? Our men do not require any pampering to keep them on their feet, but they are the "last word" standing between Democracy and Autocracy, and unless they are kept on their feet by better war organization than we have at present we will pay that indemnity to "Bill."

PAYING INTERNED GERMANS.

Berwyn, Nov. 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Is there any truth in the story that we are to pay interned Germans? I cannot believe it, but how can a paper of your class publish it? It makes a loyal American nervous.

KATHARINE MCKEE.

IDEALISM.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Monday's TRIBUNE contained an article stating that interned German army officers would receive pay in the same amount as paid to our officers of equal rank. Is this a fact, and why? Has this been the practice in war times? Civil prisoners, regardless of social standing, are not paid during imprisonment. If it is a further evidence of the magnanimity of the United States, it is wasted effort—the Germans are too much like Mexicans to appreciate decent treatment. The scheme would appear to have emanated from the addled brain of a pro-German senator. I am not an anarchist, but I certainly dislike the idea of our war taxes and Liberty bond funds being directed toward the pockets of high class German prisoners. Please explain further about the matter.

SHE MAY WELL ASK.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What effect will it have on woman's respect for man if the women have to run the ammunition factories while clerical positions in banks, wholesale houses, and retail stores are held by strong, stalwart men of from 20 to 45? There is the great cry of shortage of labor and appeals to the women to come forward and do their bit. I am a married woman and, having one child, I was anxious to do my bit. I have a trade I naturally thought I could work at on the short hour plan, and the company that formerly employed me when labor was plentiful had often used the same plan to give every one a chance to work.

But I found on application I could not secure a position because I did not use an attachment that was not in use when I last worked at it, but without which I could have given excellent results if given a chance. However, they offered to teach me in a class of beginners, and after I had become expert they would give me $12 a week. I had worked five years at the business before I was married. This at a time when the government is sending out S. O. S. calls for men on the signal corps from that same company.

I then tried the banks, but was told no women were employed. There were scores of husky men there at work which women could do as well. If a woman can be on the police force surely she could be a floor walker. Why expect us to make munitions when men are selling silks and keeping accounts in banks and offices? Will some corporation enlighten me?

ARE THE JACKIES FAVORED?

Chicago, Nov. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Various organizations throughout the city have been giving dances and parties for the sailor boys so that they might have a good time and make new acquaintances. But one seldom hears of a club setting aside an evening for the soldier boys. These boys, who train every bit as hard as the sailors, rarely have any amusement outside of their Y. M. C. A. or a visit from home about once a month. In a few months they will be in the trenches fighting as hard as they possibly can for this country. Why are they not entertained as frequently as the boys in blue? They surely deserve it. Does the public think less of the soldiers? I hope not.

OBSERVER.

DON'T FORGET THE VOLUNTEER.

Chicago, Nov. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The press has devoted a great deal of space to eulogizing the drafted men of our army, and each community has arranged a parting celebration to speed these men on their way to Rockford and other national army cantonments. This is right and proper, but too little has been said of the patriotic boys who did not wait to be drafted but enlisted of their own free will and for love of their country.

ARE ENGLISH TEUTONS?

By Elia W. Peattie

Is England a country of Teutonic origin? We have been told so—long have been told so—and with touching ethnological credulity have accepted the statement. The English, one of the most sharply differentiated of nationalities, were, we consented to believe, an offshoot of the vast Teutonic race. In view of certain essential differences between the English and the Germans, and considering the almost accute irritation which they caused each other, this seemed strange. But ethnology is vague, and as the learned insisted upon the point it was the lot of the unlearned to accept the large, vague, and annoying theory as a fact.

Now, however, two good Englishmen arise to make emphatic denials of the tradition. One is G. K. Chesterton, and his refutation may be found in a remarkable book just from the press, entitled "A Short History of England." The other controversialist is Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch, and his theories as to the racial inheritance of the English are in an essay called "Lineage of English Literature," the essay being included in a collection of lectures delivered at Cambridge "On the Art of Writing."

I do not know whether or not Mr. Chesterton reads Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch. Considering how palpitatingly Mr. Chesterton is forever writing, it does not seem as if he could find much time for reading, and he is the last man in the world to adopt another man's ideas, even if he should by any chance accept them, which is in itself outside the range of probability. But upon this conviction are these two Englishmen united, that England is of Roman rather than of Teutonic descent; that, no matter what races have entered into the great amalgam of English life, it is the Roman stamp upon the coin which remains; that in character, ideas of law, literature, and art, the influence of the Mediterranean civilizations and not that of the Teutonic is predominant. (As in the United States the Puritan has exercised a persistent influence. Numerically in the minority, a tradition rather than a perpetuation, yet the Puritan spirit lies at the root of our ideals and Puritan opinions have modified those of the men and women of many nations who have since joined us.)

MR. CHESTERTON is almost as much surprised as his readers or his publisher at finding himself with the grave pen of the historian in his hand, and he can only reconcile himself to the anomaly by putting every known fact of English history against the wall and riddling it with his characteristic rapid fire comments. He believes, for example, that tradition is far more important than a meager and isolated fact, and he is inclined to attach more real value to a nursery rhyme than to a group of dates. His exhilarating record abounds in such comment as this: "The place of Richard Coeur de Lion in popular fable and gossip is far more like his place in true history than the place of the denationalized, ne'er-do-well given him by our utilitarian school books. Indeed, the vulgar rumor is always much nearer the historical truth than the 'educated' opinion of today; for tradition is truer than fashion."

This brings us quite neatly to what we may refer to as the Teutonic fallacy. Chesterton speaks of the time when the British isles were the Ultima Thule, the other end of nowhere, until "they were at last lit up by the long searchlight of Rome." Julius Cæsar came, with his appraising eye and his trenchant pen, and though he professed to give no more than the glimpse of a traveler, yet his Romans returned and "turned Britain into a Roman province. What they cared about getting and giving in Britain was what they had got and given in Gaul. We do not know whether the Britons then, or, for the matter of that, the Britons now, were Iberian or Cymric or Teutonic. We do know that in a short time they were Roman.

"Every now and then there is discovered in modern England some fragment such as a Roman pavement. Such Roman antiquities rather diminish than increase the Roman reality. They make something seem distant which is still very near, and something seem dead which is still alive. It is like writing a man's epitaph on his front door. The epitaph would probably be a compliment, but hardly a personal introduction. The important thing about France and England is not that they have Roman remains. They are Roman remains. . . . Britain was directly Roman for full four hundred years; longer than she has been Protestant, and very much longer than she has been industrial. . . . The Roman empire did not destroy nations; if anything, it created them. Britons were not originally proud of being Britons; they were proud of being Romans. The Roman steel was at least as much of a magnet as a sword. In truth, it was a round mirror of steel in which every people came to see itslf. . . . The Roman empire necessarily became less Roman as it became more of an empire until not very long after Rome gave conquerors to Britain, Britain was giving emperors to Rome."

MR. CHESTERTON in his own fashion reviews the causes which led to the disintegration of the Roman empire, but insists that the strong Roman influence and inclination remained in Britain, gathering around great cities like York and Chester and London—these cities which are older than the counties, and, indeed, than the country. And the point to be emphasized is that though the Roman legions left Britain in the fourth century, this did not mean that Roman civilization or Roman civilians left it.

Mr. Chesterton believes that during the dark ages Britain looked back to Rome with satisfaction and wistfulness, and that her more enduring ideas were founded upon Roman ideas. In the Round Table, in the arch, in all the symbols of strength and democracy which were a part of her architecture and domestic environment, he sees the interpretation of Roman meanings, and he believes the conviction, rules, and tastes which were implanted in British minds by the Romans have predominated down through the generations to the present time. "Teutons might enter England, but they could not dominate it. Race was not only never at any time given movement and motion, but it was never even an excuse. The Teutons never had a creed; they never had a cause; and it was only a few years ago that they began to have a cant. The orthodox modern historian, notably Green, remarks on the singularity of Britain in being alone of all Roman provinces wholly cleared and repeopled by a Germanic race. He does not entertain as a singularity of this event the possibility that it never happened."

It is at this point that we bring up the reinforcements of Quiller-Couch. He, too, takes firm stand on those tesselated pavements which were laid bare by the lads plowing British fields, and he asks us to understand what the presence of such pavements means. Wherever the feet of the Roman went, there went the tesselated pavements for them to stand upon. Even generals on foreign service carried in panniers on muleback the little colored cubes for laying down a pavement in each camping place, to be taken up again when they moved forward.

In England there was found in the tesselæ "the same sweet emblems of the younger gods of poetic legend, of love, youth, plenty, and all their happy naturalism constantly repeated. Bacchus with his wild rout, Orpheus playing to a spell-bound audience, Apollo singing to the lyre, Venus in Mars' embrace, Neptune with a host of seamen, scollops, and trumpets, Narcissus by the fountain, Jove and Ganymede, Leda and the swan, wood nymphs and naiads, satyrs and fauns, music, hautboys, cornucopæ, flowers and baskets of golden fruit—what touches of home they must have seemed to these old dwellers in the Cambridgeshire wilds!"

BUT Quiller-Couch contends that the tesselæ discovered by the English plowmen were not merely reminders of home. They were the confirmation of home, for the owner of the villa before whose door the storied tesselæ was spread was "the great-great-grandson of the colonist who first built it, following in the wake of the legionaries. "It was an axiom that where the Roman conquered there he settled, and the owner of the villa was born in Britain, his children were born there, and he lived, Sir Arthur ventures, "a comfortable, well-to-do, out-of-doors life, in its essentials not unlike the life of an English country squire of today."

Then, too, his pleasant deities were becoming the literary if not the religious inheritance of the Britons. It is, as Sir Arthur points out, only the other day, so to speak, that English students became familiar with the Scandinavian, the Saxon, and the Celtic mythology, and they learned their lessons with difficulty and retained them none to well. It was not on Beowulf that Marlowe fed; nor did Ben Jonson know of Dierdre and her sorrows. The grim Saxon legends and the wild and mournful Celtic fancies did not nurture Shakespeare nor his friends and followers.

They, like the men who built and lived in the Roman villas, fed upon the rich beauty of the Roman world—those familiar symbols and sacraments which are still part and parcel of the cultured Englishman's mental store. Nor could it be otherwise, if, as Sir Arthur believes, these Roman colonists were veritably the ancestors of the English aristocracy. He says, with more heat than is common in a classroom, "If you insist on being a Teutonic people (which I flatly deny) then you alone of Teutonic peoples have inherited the Roman gift of consolidating conquest, of colonizing in the wake of its armies; of driving the road, bridging the ford, bringing the lawless under the sense of the law."

"We English," urges Sir Arthur, "have had above all nations lying wide of the Mediterranean the instinct to refresh and renew ourselves at Mediterranean wells; our writers, our poets especially, have sought them as the hart panteth after the water brooks. If you accept this assertion, and if you believe as well that our literature, surpassing Rome's, may vie with that of Athens; if you believe that a literature which includes Chaucer, Spenser, Shakespeare, Pope, Wordsworth, Shelley, the Authorized Version of Holy Writ, with Browne, Bunyan, Swift, Addison, Johnson, Arnold, Newman—has entered the circle to take its seat with the first—why then, heartily believing this with you, I leave you to find some better explanation than mine if you can."

IN other words, he finds in the quality of English brains, the continuity of Roman, not of Teutonic, characteristics. He would be the last to deny the influence of Germany upon recent English thought and life. It was impossible that with the royal family forever replenishing itself from Germany that this should have been otherwise; but even at the period when German was the domestic tongue at Windsor castle the poets and the more original writers of prose were in revolt against the tastes and tendencies of the Victorian dictation or if—as in the case of Tennyson—they permitted themselves to be stroked by the hands of royalty—they offered not Teutonic themes but those inherited from Mediterranean sources.

No doubt there may be some irritation in the hearts of these two distinguished Englishmen who have united in their claim for a Roman ancestry for their native land. All the world is uniting in a protest against the Germans, and if Chesterton and Quiller-Couch are irritated they have the example of their king, who changed the nomenclature of his family from its German to its plain English appellation, "The House of Windsor."

Apropos of the irritation, Chesterton, in tracing the sources of the present conflict to the Thirty Years War, says: "Far away to the northeast in a sterile land of fens, a small ambitious family of money lenders, who had become squires, vigilant, thrifty, thoroughly selfish, rather thinly adopted the theories of Luther, and began to lend their almost savage hinds as soldiers on the Protestant side. They were well paid for it by step after step of promotion but at this time their only principality was only the old Mark of Brandenburg. Their own name was Hohenzollern."

Indeed, Chesterton blames the Germans for America's break with England in 1776. It was the Anglo-German alliance, the dead monarchy as represented by George III., which caused America to refuse to compromise, coöperate, or capitulate. Not the spirit of liberal Englishmen, but the administration of German princes was alien to her ideals, to her pride, and to her energies.

But to stand in the full currnet and sweep of Chesterton's anger against the Germans one must read the chapter "The Return of the Barbarian." In it he describes the hold German ideas have had upon England since the accession of George III., and he does his eloquent best to serve his country by repudiating those ideas and by imploring Englishmen to return to their true inheritance of opinion, custom, and idealities. If the Augean stables are not cleaned it will not be the fault of Gilbert Keith Chesterton.

"A Short History of England" is an exhilerating book. It inverts most accepted opinions, but by so doing it gives them a new vitality—like trees reflected in water, and so, for the first time, seen in full proportion. Nor does one mean that in inverting accepted opinions he is wrong. On the contrary, he seems strangely and fascinatingly right. And at any rate, he has lined his fellow-Englishmen up with their valiant Mediterranean allies, and has shown the back of his hand to the enemy-ancestor, refusing him even the privilege of being an ancestor. He has gone further, and got the Americans in under the tent with him. For which many thanks.

DIVINE AFFLATUS

By H. L. Mencken

THE laborious Chesterton, in a late effort to earn the honorarium of a Chicago gazette, composed a thousand words of somewhat feeble railing against what is called inspiration in the bozart. The thing itself, he argued, has little actual existence; we hear about it so much because of the value of its alleged coyness and fortuitousness as an apology for second rate work. The artist is thus depicted as a helpless slave of the gods. If they favor him by blowing their breath upon him he teems with ideas and creates a masterpiece. But if they neglect him or overlook him he has to stand and wait—a fiddle without a bow, an engine without steam, a tire without air. All this, maintained Chesterton, is bosh. A man who can really write at all, or paint at all, or compose music at all should be able to do it at almost any time, "whenever he is not drunk or asleep."

Here, with the usual Chestertonian address, we have the usual Chestertonian method—which is to say that we have a characteristic effort to dispose of a difficult question by denying that any such question asks itself. The facts, unhappily, stand against that facile reduction. Setting aside the struggles of those magnificoes of the spirit whose gifts amount to genius, it is a commonplace of experience to every creative artist on lower planes that there are days when his ideas flow freely and copiously and days when they are dammed up damnably. He has a good day, accomplishing a double stint of the best work he is capable of, and goes to bed impatient for the morrow—and on the morrow he feels almost idiotic, and is incapable of any work at all.

This experience, as I say, is familiar to every man who tries to do anything in the world involving reflection, planning, creation. It overtakes poets and contrapuntists, and it overtakes novelists, critics, philosophers, and mere journalists. It may even, so far as I know, be shared by congressmen, stock brokers, tripe sellers, and the clergy. The qualities that all anatomists of melancholy mark in it are the irregular ebb and flow of its tides and its pervasive mysteriousness. No one can ever predict its courses, even roughly, and no one has ever rationally explained the processes behind them.

I say rationally for a plain reason, for explanations of another sort are very plentiful. The ancients threw responsibility directly on the gods; one day they were kind and the next day they were the reverse. In medieval times the lesser powers of heaven began to take a hand in it, and one reads of works of art inspired by the saints, by the shades of the departed, and even by the devil. In our own day there are explanations less supernatural, but still no less fanciful—explanations chiefly grounded upon certain hypothetical characters of what is ineptly called genius, whereby its possessor, on occasions, becomes the mere agent of vast powers that are quite beyond his control, and, the occasion past, returns to his own defective self.

ALL these explanations, however, fail to explain; they constitute, in fact, no more than a gigantic begging of the question. The machinery of the thing remains as unseen as before, and the manner of its starting and stopping as unfathomable. In this emergency, having regard for the sufferings of those who wrestle with the problem, I offer a new, simple, and at all events not metaphysical solution. It is supported by various observed facts and by more various logical analogies, and it may be couched in the following terms, to wit, that inspiration is a function of metabolism and has its roots in the intestinal flora—in other words, that a man's ideas, both in quantity and quality, are conditioned not by the whims of the gods or the combinations of some transcendental set of dice, but the chemical content of the blood which reaches his cerebrum, and that this chemical content is determined by the state of his digestion, particularly south of the pylorus.

I speak here, of course, of men who have cerebrums mechanically capable of the process of ratiocination, of men designed by nature to have ideas—in brief, of the minority of intelligentsia. The nether herd, being incapable of ideas, is obviously incapable of inspiration. But once we get among those who, from observed facts, can deduce a conclusion that is neither worn out and notorious nor insane, we are among those who, at least occasionally, are potentially capable of a conclusion that is subtle and even brilliant. Such seizures we call inspiration. Tschaikowsky, in general, was a bad composer, and for the plain reason that he was a silly and maudlin man, but when he wrote the allegro grazioso of his sixth symphony he had a first rate inspiration, and so he achieved a first rate work of art. So with writers. Hillaire Belloc is surely no genius. On the contrary, he is mainly a dull fellow. But he belongs to the minority because he has his moments, and it was during one of those moments that he conceived "Emmanuel Burden," a very brilliant piece of work.

Fix your eye upon my hypothesis of metabolic inspiration, and at once you will find that it explains many things not hitherto explicable. For one thing, it explains the observed hopelessness of trying to pump up inspiration by mere industry and striving. A poet may sit at his desk until he petrifies; he may gnaw his pen until it is a mere stump; he may read other poets until his head swims—but if too little manganese or phosphoric acid reaches his cerebral arteries, or too much creatin or paralactic acid, he will never dredge up a good idea for that sonnet, and the bad ones generated by the reactions in his brain will make him tear up his work tomorrow.

Again, this chemical theory explains the fact that inspiration, save under extraordinary circumstances, is never continuous for more than a short period. As Mr. Chesterton says, some of Shakespeare's strongest passages are in the weakest of his plays; he had sudden bursts of inspiration, and then long periods of dullness. And why? Simply because the chemical constitution of the blood changes hourly, almost every minute. A beefsteak may flood it with poisonous proteids. A glass of bad beer may fill it with enzymes which split its euglobulin into zinc ointment and picric acid. A few billion bacilli, hidden and forgotten below the equator, may so pollute it with toxins that the very bones of the skull are corroded. These changes come quickly: they are potent; they depend upon a vast complex of factors. It is no wonder that the brain heaves and pitches under them—that it is as sensitive and ineffable as an æolian harp one moment and as stupid as a liver the next.

MOREOVER, the theory explains why it is that inspiration tends to flag as work progresses—that a tired man seldom has good ideas. Why should he have them? The very confinement and constraint which any sort of creative intellectual labor imposes are bound to interfere with metabolism, and so impede the proper nutrition of the brain. A poet cannot do his work under the ideal hygienic conditions which surround a farmhand, a curb broker, or a sailor. He must bend over a desk, his muscles flaccid, his viscera congested. He must lose exercise and sleep and rush through his meals. The result, at best, is a flabby blood stream and a starved cerebrum. At worst it is intestinal intoxication, a headache, arthritis, asthma, and delusions of persecution.

The more the influence of metabolism is examined, indeed, the more plain it becomes that it conditions mental processes quite as directly and as powerfully as it conditions the more patent processes of the muscles and nerves. A badly cooked chop not only causes spots to appear before the eyes, it also causes a freckling of the spirit. The notion that thought is independent of the brain, that it is a function of some obscure superphysical ego—this notion belongs to mythology. Not long ago insanity was also relegated to the same fabulous sphere; there were mental diseases and physical diseases. But the Wassermann reaction drove a great gap into that ancient dualism, and nowadays no intelligent psychiatrist cherishes it. Mental diseases are now known to be quite as much physical diseases as rheumatism or the delirium of fever, and some of them are being treated and cured in the same way that malaria and adenoids are being treated and cured.

Once rid of its metaphysical hocus-pocus, inspiration becomes rational and comprehensible. But how to pump it up when it flags? So far scientific medicine has not answered; it has not yet, indeed, so much as tackled or even recognized the problem. But soon or late, I am convinced, an answer will come. It is, after all, a mere question of the technique. The poet of the future, come upon a period of doldrums, will not tear his hair in futile agony. Instead, he will go to the family doctor and get a rasher of Bulgarian bacilli, or an injection of some vaccine, or an order on a masseur, or a diet list, or a dose of calomel.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS

By Rollin Lynde Hartt

CANADA disfranchised the conscientious objector; he that will not fight, neither shall he vote. In Canadian opinion his exalted spiritual delicacy gives him the rank we Americans assign to idiots, Indians, and criminals and revives in his behalf an argument dear to anti-suffragists: Women cannot bear arms, so how can women vote?

Nevertheless there are woman who can bear arms and do. In Canadian opinion the conscientious objector has taken a position below a girl's—and a Russian girl's at that. Meanwhile Canada doubts his sincerity. Like the delightful Hibernian (to whom the top of the morning and three cheers!), she says to him, "Look deep down into your heart of hearts, lad, and see if you don't find cold feet there."

At Camp Grant, so one hears, conscientious objectors have their sorrows. Forty-two tons of coal they unload every day. And what are our pacifists but uncaught conscientious objectors? They will not fight, they will not help others to fight; neither should they vote. For the duration of the war disfranchise these gentry. Before a war conscientious objectors serve a purpose. After a war conscientious objectors serve a purpose. During a war they lend aid and comfort to the enemy, prolong the struggle, and increase the slaughter.

Before a war the possessor of an exalted spiritual delicacy has entire freedom to exert his influence toward preventing war. As a restraint upon hasty action he is invaluable. Craven and odious his attitude may be. Out and out honorable it may be. In either case it checks the war party, and war parties need to be checked. Nobody in his senses wants nations to adopt the mining camp maxim, "Shoot first and talk about it afterward." However, there is abundant talk afterward, inevitably, and conscientious objectors become critics—not always just, it is true, but nevertheless active and spirited—of what has passed. Their criticisms forestall undue glorification. They forestall a tendency to repent the exploit for the sheer thrill of it. They dim its glamour. They restore sanity. All in all, they help to put war where it belongs. Thanks to their protests, it appears legitimate only as a last resort.

WHAT then? Is the conscientious objector a necessary evil? One might say so. Every generation breeds the type of mind that, seeing one thing clearly, sees nothing else. Every generation breeds the type of mind that will do right no matter how much wrong comes of it. Every generation breeds the type of mind that refuses to compromise, whereas life is made up of compromises—always was, always will be. In this sense the evil is necessary. In view of its usefulness before a war and after a war, it is even desirable.

But we are not living before a war just now. We are not living after a war. And it behooves us to examine not only the mere mischief conscientious objectors accomplish in outward ways during a war but much more particularly the evil within the heart of every conscientious objector—his selfishness, his conceit, his egotism, his intense, overweening individualism, his willingness to bring shame and ruin upon his country rather than sacrifice a pet theory.

Socrates, when unjustly condemned to death, was offered a means of escaping, but replied to his friends in effect: "All my life I have obeyed the state. I will obey the state now. Who am I to set up my private, individual conscience against the collective conscience of the state?" It was in exactly this spirit that Decatur cried: "Our country—in her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong." No conscientious objector will talk like that. It means ceasing to be a conscientious objector. It means abdicating the assumed right of the citizen to set up his private, individual conscience against the collective conscience of the state. Happily there are conscientious objectors who are abdicating the assumed right—for example, the young pacifist who now wears khaki and has lately written himself up in the Saturday Evening Post. A similar case—in principle at least—is that of Prof. Edward Cary Hayes at the University of Illinois. Writes he:

"War is on the same ethical and intellectual level as perfidy and violence in private life. The only ethical and intellectual difference is that war is 'the sum of all villainies.' It is worse, for it is villainy raised to the nth power. It is no more a justifiable form of competition than for rival storekeepers to rob and murder each other or for rival candidates for political office to eliminate each other by lurking in the dark with daggers and shotguns."

There you have the pacifist in Hayes; here you have the fighter: "Paradoxical as it seems, it is right for America to go to war just because war is wrong. Our war is a war against war. Nothing can ever justify war except the desire to prevent war or tyranny."

THIS sounds Jesuitical; the end sanctifies the means. It recalls Miss Carolyn Wells' immortal epigram, "Circumstances alter kisses," and applies it to war. It points out that the circumstances of this war are absolutely distinctive. No war in the world's entire history ever had such a purpose. No war in the world's entire history ever made so direct a demand for compromise on the part of conscientious objectors. They disbelieve in war. Let them. We all disbelieve in war, but not in this war.

Take the whole mass of pacifist literature—pretty distinguished, some of it. Take Channing's tremendous diatribes. Take Carlyle's. Take Tolstoy's. Take Mr. Howells' reply to the bellicose bishop who had glorified war and, Ruskin-fashion, defended it on account of intellectual and esthetic felicities supposed to follow in its train. Take Charles Dudley Warner's observation that, while killing in plain clothes is disreputable, killing in fancy dress is thought a virtue. Take even the sacred precept, "But I say unto you, resist not evil." When you have done, does any of it discredit this present war? Can it? The pacifist in khaki renounced pacifism and conscientious-objections the instant it dawned upon him that to this present war there could be no objections and certainly no conscientious objections.

"Resist not evil" is sound doctrine in and of itself. The conscientious objector might well enough conclude not to resist evil if his nonresistance stopped where nonresistance is generally supposed to stop. In private life turning the other cheek may be noble and Christian and altogether praiseworthy, but by his very attitude the conscientious objector has emerged from private life. He has set himself up as superior to the state. He is a preacher of anti-patriotism even though he hold his tongue. He has dramatized his creed. It shouts. It is treason, vociferous though silent. Its influence goes far and wide.

DO you call this nonresistance? It is resistance. It is resistance not so much of evil as of good. It does not stop the war. It prolongs it. It does not mitigate its horrors. It increases them. It postpones peace. It adds mightily to the cost of peace. In this present war it resists the forces of righteousness and assists the forces of evil. He that is not for us is against us, and he that is against us is for Germany.

Christians so inclined are at liberty to turn the other cheek, provided that the other cheek is theirs. They are not at liberty to turn the other cheek when it is ours and their country's. Just here the conscientious objector misses the whole point. He says, "Rather than fight I will sacrifice my liberties." What that involves is, "Rather than fight I will do my bit toward sacrificing the liberties of my kith and kin, of my friends, of my entire country."

An intense individualist, he renounces all indebtedness to his contemporaries. In the same spirit he renounces all indebtedness to his forefathers and to posterity. Although it may seem a trifle like robbing the cradle and the grave for arguments, this reference to indebtedness to past and coming generations is by no means fanciful. It will not do to say, "Let the dead past bury its dead." It will not do to say, "What has posterity ever done for me?" A nation is no mere aggregation of contemporaries. It is a stream. By the same token, it is a sacred trust. Men with hearts in their breasts accept it as such. They feel in honor bound to preserve the liberties handed down to them by their forefathers who bought those liberties dear. They feel in honor bound to hand down those liberties untarnished and undiminished to generations still unborn.

The question as to whether or not a man shall make of himself a German doormat is a personal question, but the question as to whether or not he shall do his bit toward making German doormats of us all is vastly more than a personal question. If the stream of liberty ends with us it will defeat all for which our ancestors lived and died. It will rob our children of their birthright. It will rob our children's children of theirs, and so on till once more men live and die for liberty—if ever men have the courage to live and die for liberty again.

It is easy to answer, "Let posterity take care of itself." It is also dastardly. It is easy to answer, "Why should this concern us? We shall be in our graves ere then." It is also ignoble. At this writing posterity labors under the embarrassment of never having been born, the most of it, and the beginnings of posterity now romping around the house seem hardly capable as yet of settling what sort of world they are to have.

A CASE in point. Here, let us say, is Blank Blank, Esq., citizen of the republic. He enjoys freedom under American institutions because his great-great-grandfather and yours got out with flintlocks some years ago and put a quietus on British tyranny. Has Blank Blank, Esq., any right to undo their work by inviting German tyranny? And here, let us say, is Blank Blank Jr., a downy headed babbler with dimples in both cheeks and his little pink thumb in his little pink mouth. What right has Blank Blank, Esq., to spoil America for Blank Blank Jr.?

No man liveth unto himself. No man fighteth unto himself. No man conscientiously objecteth unto himself. Duty reaches far back into the past. It reaches far ahead into the future. It is the supreme blunder of the conscientious objector that he thinks of himself as somehow isolated and, because of his imagined isolation, permitted to sacrifice America to a pet theory.

In justice to the conscientious objector be it said that the issues of this war are unfamiliar issues upsetting all his preconceived philosophy of freedom. To his way of thinking American freedom began in 1776 and was made doubly sure by the war of 1812. That settled it. These United States are and of right ought to be free and independent. Never until the year 1917 did it become clear to him, if it is clear now, that independence hangs upon the willingness to defend it.

Because no one had challenged our independence for a century and more, he felt certain that no one would. Peace reigned. Why should it not reign perpetually? By inclination a pacifist, he thought of war as needless, and, because needless, evil. Today, with war actually here, he sticks to his old bent. If unmolested he cries "Peace! Peace!" where there is no peace. If called to the colors he resists. Talk of disfranchising him and he raves. He has no relish for being classed with idiots, Indians, and criminals. Still less does he relish falling victim to an out of date argument against woman suffrage. He prides himself on his exalted spiritual delicacy. He sets up his private, individual conscience against the collective conscience of the state. Though not too proud to fight, he is by all odds too virtuous. He will do right no matter how much harm comes of doing right. He stands where he always stood, not realizing that the platform he stands on no longer exists, that his former virtue is now a crime, that his former wisdom is now madness, and that a fallacy underlay it all.

TO be precise, what fallacy? This: He has imagined he could receive liberty, education, prosperity, happiness, security, all as a free gift. There is no such free gift. From the very beginning men paid the price; if not actually, then potentially. In principle every American signed up for war taxes and Liberty bonds the day he was born. In principle every American signed up for military service the day he was born. Nothing in the least subversive has occurred, nothing in the least revolutionary. No new duty is here. The duty was here all along. At any moment a crisis like the present might have arrived. That it did not arrive was sheer luck. At birth we shipped for the voyage, so to speak, and our papers contained no clause to certify that the voyage would be calm or that we might sneak below because of exalted spiritual delicacy should foul weather roughen the sea.

Disfranchise the conscientious objector—at least for the duration of the war! And afterward? That depends. Many a conscientious objector will recant before the struggle is ended. For such there is hope and a place of large usefulness. Disbelieving in war on general principles, but believing profoundly in this present war on specific principles, they will become an element opposed to future wars. As for those who refuse to recant, disfranchise them forever and ever, world without end, amen. Spiritual delicacy so exalted that it cannot perceive the moral issues now at stake is ipso facto unfit to receive the ballot.

THE BIRD MAN OF VERDUN

By Sterling Heilig.

THE war has brought strange characters to light. One of the most remarkable is Achille, the canal boat man who, with his millionaire partner, Lewis (claimed to be an American), reinstated carrier pigeons, supposed to have been superseded by wireless telegraph, and proved their vital superiority in the furnace of battle.

At a certain moment at Verdun the wireless went down in a tempest of bombardment; and the French front, "blinded and voiceless," was saved by delicate little living creatures being thrown into the breach—the tender, cooing pigeons whose tired wings are being heliotherapeutically massaged by a grateful government; while a military decree, published and placarded over all France, warns good citizens to rescue the paralyzed.

They were aided by war dogs, whose virtues had been recognized, but up to Verdun pigeons had been militarily neglected in favor of the boasted wireless, and it took born "nature fakirs" (as the French say, getting the word twisted) to rehabilitate "bright birds that eternally flew."

I.

He is the bird man of Verdun. He is a man with the "animal instinct" to such a degree that he can take a pack of hounds (they say) and "make them howl and weep by merely talking to them." He sits solemnly at the kennels amid the dogs. Picking out some sad eyed old leader, Achille addresses the confiding critter in low, confidential tones: "It's sad. It's very sad. We are unhappy. Everything is against us. What's the use? Nobody loves us!"

The old hound's chops quiver as he looks attentively, with utter sympathy and credulity, into the "nature fakir's" eyes. And the low voice continues: "Nobody understands us. Nobody appreciates us. We are all alone, neglected! O, how sad we are! We are so sad! We are unhappy, so unhappy!"

Ow-yuuuu! The old hound lifts his nose and voice. Great tears roll down his jowls. "It is so sad! We are so sad!" the voice continues softly. Ow-yuuuu! Ow-yuuuu! The entire pack takes the howl up. They squat in a semi-circle around the fakir — ow-yuuuu!—until the ground around their feet is wet with weeping—until some hardened army officer of the audience (they say, once, an American colonel) gets worked up to indignation and stops the show on the ground that it is an abuse of confidence!

Once, in a quiet sector, nightingales sang in the forest hills between opposing trenches. Achille, then an ordinary poilu, roamed at night; and once he made a bet that he would bring in a German prisoner before daylight. Taking two friends, whom he had taught to move like shadows through the forest, he hid them in a dangerous spot, close to the German trenches.

Soon a nightingale was heard. Its liquid notes died on the air, and all was silent. Once again the sweet voice of the bird was heard, and all again was silence. A third time the notes ascended. The witnesses grew impatient. Had they been brought for a concert—the nightingale's hymn in the dark?

There was a rustling in the forest. Beyond, they beheld a human figure. A German officer was standing listening in rapt attention to the nightingale. The bird seemed to move a little distance backward in the trees. The German followed. The two witnesses held their breath as he passed them. Again the sweet notes came, more faintly, on beyond, toward the French trenches. The German officer hesitated, followed. Suddenly there was a noise of wrestling and the voice of Achille whispering hoarsely: "Bring those ropes, you fellows!"

That night Achille brought his prisoner and won his bet.

II.

He was a canal boatman, they say, before the war. Floating lazily through the French countryside month after month by the network of canals which cover the land, Achille had time and solitude to develop his gifts of "nature faking." He can imitate every bird and call them from the trees to hop about him. It seems that he was a "bee boy" from his childhood; bees would never sting him and would gather round him thick, with pleasure, in a garden. Later he would capture swarms for villagers without net or headgear. Seated on the banks of a canal, he could call the frogs, who would come flopping to his lap.

Once in the quiet sector men complained about the trench rats. Invasions of great field rats have been a pest of the trenches.

Our expeditionary forces in France are seeking Americans with the animal instinct to manage their carrier pigeons and war dogs. When the employment of dogs in the French army beyond mere trench companions increased to a great service in direct proportion with the artillery this Achille boy got his chance and was promoted high specialist of the Fifth army kennels.

He made an uncanny reputation with "liaison dogs." "Liaison" means "linking"—the interlinking of—the interlinking of services or troops; and a "liaison agent" has to keep up intercommunication of services that depend on each other. For example, cannons and artillery direction.

Of course, the training of liaison dogs is a secret, but you can easily imagine that the main part of it must be the animal seeking a beloved master. Amid exploding shells below and fire from the sky above the faithful beast will crawl, sneak, stop, and dash away with the vital message locked securely in the pocket of his collar. Nothing stops the liaison dog until he reaches the post where he expects to find his master. There they take the precious message from him and put him in safety, or start him off again with another message, scampering through the fields of hell upon his faithful quest.

III.

When the great attacks on Verdun began everything was planned to catch the French napping. The German artillery, having exact plans of French railroads supplying the front, proceeded to "cut" them methodically, blowing up section after section in succession.

Verdun was saved, as everybody knows, by French automobile trains.

Verdun was saved, also, by the heroism of French poilus. They took the diabolical bombardment "on their breasts," and died in mass to the immortal song of "Passeront pas!" ("Won't get through!")

Verdun was saved, thirdly, by the new French heavy artillery which France did not possess when the war came (France was not ready) and which was planned, made, and had its munitions provided for it in war, while fighting off the invader. None will forget the heavy artillery.

And Verdun was saved by birds and dogs.

When the wireless telegraph went down in the tempest and deep laid telephone cables were blown into the air by the fury of the German shell fire the French batteries would have been "blinded" but for the carrier pigeons of the bird man. Achille arrived with his partner, Lewis, in peculiar shaped "invisible" tents painted green, brown, and gray in daubs, and a cage wagon full of expensive flyers so attached to their traveling home that nothing could keep them from it, once free on the wing.

How the great flock of Verdun pigeons was bought and who footed the bills will be a story for after the war. Many things that were done are surely military secrets for the present.

Let us suppose, however, a trained animal turn in vaudeville. The faithful dog will introduce three pigeons into Thiaumont. The flat curved wicker panniers are strapped to Medor's sides, and off he trots, through shell fire that makes the world hold its breath, to find the master he had left in Thiaumont—sixteen times taken, lost, and taken! The French hold it, in a pandemonium. If the German battery upon the left cannot be silenced Thiaumont is done for. Telephone and wireless long ceased to exist; the last pigeon has been released, and the commandant is desperate to communicate with the rear. But what can be expected through that blasting?

Far away (a quarter mile is far), Medor crawls on his belly through the flashes and the crashes. Now he dashes on, and now he flattens up against cement heaps. He stops and whimpers, for the way is awful. He crouches, leaps, and stops again—and, at last, scampers into Thiaumont with the devoted pigeons in his panniers! His collar bears a message: "We relieve you by attack on Froideterre, 3 p. m." Quick, to one of the pigeons, they attach a return message: "Stop the German battery on our left. Here are the elements for pointing." Now they wait for a calm in the tempest. From a corner of Thiaumont they throw the frantic bird into the air. What does she think of her adventures? She doesn't think—she's just a palpitating little mass of craving to get back to the calm home of the cage wagon!

IV.

It is a strong story; but stronger will be told after the war.

Regularly the birds are simply carried in their little cages by the dozens, when troops occupy advanced positions and as long as telegraph and telephone work, they are held in reserve.

Recently at a soldiers' sing-song we heard, sung movingly from a tin record, the dear old wheeze of the bird with the white, white breast; and there is a line, you will remember, where it mourns and mourns and mourns.

Whereby hangs as strong a tale as any. Only yesterday, during the capture of the Montparnasse quarries, beyond the Chemin des Dames, two German aviators, completely palsied and unnerved, came tranquilly down on a French colonel's post. At the same moment three German carrier pigeons fell, almost beside them. Wouldn't that hornswoggle you? Birds in their little nests agree; but it wasn't that.

The first bore a message in which a German commander told his desperate need of reinforcements to avoid capture; his battalion was stranded on the slopes beyond Allemant. The second concerned an attack on Royere, which the Germans would launch at daybreak. And the third bird bore word that the troops told off for that attack were being wiped out, captured, driven back, and hunted down.

The pigeons were paralyzed! Paralyzed pigeons! Any one could pick them up. They would lie in your hand, turn their little heads toward you, and look with their pink eyes, astonished!

It is not the first time. French pigeons get paralyzed, but they do not carry information to the German rear. Doubless because they come from home and are not invaders introduced into an unknown land, their poor benumbed wings carry them invariably to the French rear in safety; and, as if their little brains were somewhat shocked and confused, they have been found wandering with their messages as far south as Lyons!

Whence an order of the French government of which I spoke. All French residents finding carrier pigeons in distress are to care for them tenderly and hand them over to the military. The treatment for paralyzed wings is massage, electricity, and heliotherapy.

ART

by Louise James Bargelt

THE exhibit of the Atlan Ceramic Art club at the Art institute is one of the most important of the many art features which the institute is now offering to the public. It opened at the same time that the American exhibit of oils and sculpture was placed on display and will remain until the 2d of December. The club's claim that it has raised the standard of china painting to the rank of legitimate ornamentation is vividly proven in the charm and elegance of the work which is shown, in the pleasing variety of the differing designs, and in the beauty of the coloring as applied on the many floral, symmetrical, and geometrical patterns.

The work of thirty-five women is represented, which includes in all nearly 350 pieces. One sees a wide assortment of articles, intended primarily for practical uses and yet of such decorative value that the combination of these two elements renders them nigh irresistible to the normal feminine heart. Nor is the masculine taste and preference overlooked in many of the articles destined wholly for his use.

There are many pieces of satsuma embracing in their categorical list rose jars, bon bon boxes, card cases, cigar jars, button boxes, match boxes, trinket boxes, and stamp boxes. There are handsome smoking sets for men and boudoir lamps for women, desk sets for both sexes, and tableware of such fascinating color scheme and design that to see is to covet and to attempt description is to stop and urge the reader to view rather than to read descriptions.

Mrs. Leroy T. Steward, who is president and director of the club, has a number of exquisite pieces of satsuma. One is a dresser tray of unusually beautiful design and coloring and there is a set of luncheon plates which is distinctively charming.

Among the pieces which might be mentioned especially for their attractiveness and their worth are a boudoir lamp and desk set by Miss Ellen Lovgren; a Sedji tray by Mrs. Frank Letz; a sandwich tray by Mrs. Eolah Kulp; a satsuma vase in Hungarian coloring by Mrs. A. A. Frazee; a set of salad plates by Mrs. Emma Hutchinson, and also a large satsuma bowl by her; a vase of Johonnet type by Mrs. A. M. Barothy; a bon bon box in satsuma by Mrs. A. C. In order that the high standard of the work of the club may be maintained, its exhibiting membership is limited, but there is a large and growing associate membership who may or may not paint. These associate members have equal opportunities for design and color and the benefit of the winter class in historic and miscellaneous ornament.

This class meets each week at the public library, under the instruction of Mrs. Leroy T. Steward. There are a few water color lessons attached, and it is expected that this winter Mrs. Steward will give a short French lesson each week.

Auguste Rodin, the greatest sculptor of modern times, died last week at the age of 77 years. His was a long life and a hard one, lived out for years in a constant battle against almost insurmountable odds. He entered the seventh decade of his life before he had really convinced the world of his greatness—he whom some men today put next to Michael Angelo in greatness and power.

MINUTE MAN SIX

More Beautiful—More Practical

GREATER beauty with added utility and convenience is obtainable in these two closed cars.

The new Lexington Sedan at $1785 has many decided advantages.

It may be entirely enclosed for winter driving, as shown; warm but well ventilated, with wide, plate glass windows that permit sunshine and clear vision.

For summer the side panels may be entirely removed, leaving not a single obstruction from front to back! The top remains permanent.

Lexington ingenuity allows you to take out these plate glass panels during the open months and to quickly replace them during the winter season.

There is no more need for lugging these panels around in summer than to carry your overcoat around in July because you will need it in December.

For sudden summer showers, one-minute storm curtains are provided quickly and easily attached from the inside where they are snugly stored out of sight in a specially designed compartment in the ceiling over the driver.

The Sedan is beautifully appointed throughout, with whipcord and broad lace upholstery, its dome light in the tonneau, windshield with adjustable visor, and every refinement and comfort worked out to the minutest detail.

The advantages of the Sedan apply with equal force to the Convertible Coupe at $1510.

AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

Brakes Require Frequent Care; Don't Neglect It

By High Speed.

[illegible] there is one part of the mechanism of the automobile, to which one would think the car owner would devote the tenderest care, it is the braking system, for on the efficient operation of this part may depend the motorist's life. Strange to say, however, the brakes seldom receive the attention that they need and deserve.

Let us glance briefly at the different types of braking systems now in use before we take up the question of what care they need.

Brakes are classified according to their position in the chassis. They may be on the rear wheels, the front wheels, the propeller shaft or the jackshaft in chain driven vehicles. Sometimes two different locations will be utilized in the same chassis; one set of brakes may be on the rear wheels, while another is on the propeller shaft. Brakes are also classified according to their method of operation; they may be external contracting or internal expanding and are further denominated as hand or foot brakes, according to whether they are operated by a pedal or a lever.

The braking system generally employed on American cars consists of two sets of brakes, acting on steel drums attached to the rear wheels. One set is operated by a foot pedal and the other by a hand lever.

These members are attached to rods which run back to the brake bands, which are simply metal bands with a fireproof covering on the contact side. When the lever or pedal is actuated by the driver, the rods act on the bands, so that they are either contracted or expanded against the surface of the drum. The friction retards the speed of the drum and consequently controls the progress of the wheel.

Within the last year or so two new types of braking systems have been placed on the market, an electric brake and a vacuum brake. Each of these systems seems to have real merit, but they are not yet in general use.

Until a few years ago the custom was to have one set of brakes of the internal expanding type, while the other was external contracting. At the present time the general practice is to have both sets of the internal expanding type and to locate them on the rear wheels. The principal disadvantage of the external contracting type of brake is its mud collecting proclivities, which lead to drum cutting and other ills. This is probably the reason for the swing away from this type.

At present the transmission brake, that which is placed on the propeller shaft, seems to be coming back somewhat into the favor it enjoyed in the early days of motoring. This brake, too, may be either internal expanding or external contracting.

When this brake is external contracting it is difficult to design an efficient cover for it, which makes it liable to the entrance of dirt. Where the band is internal expanding, it is usually difficult to remove the band for replacement or relining. A well designed transmission brake is powerful, more so than the rear wheel type. It is easily adjusted, removal of the floor boards being all that is necessary to get at it.

The front wheel brake has not yet achieved popularity in this country, although it is widely used in Europe, especially on racing cars. After the war we may see a drift toward this construction.

Even when properly used, the braking system of the motor car is bound to show wear in time. The linings are subject to much friction and heat and are usually the first part of the system to need atttention. These linings are usually of asbestos composition of some sort, often reinforced by copper wire.

After the linings are worn they must be replaced for safety's sake. This is not a difficult problem. The old rivets are removed, new linings of proper length are fitted, with holes countersunk in the fabric above the holes in the metal bands, after which new rivets are inserted and their ends flattened. If the owner does not care to tackle the job, the service station will do it at no great expense. It really does not pay to buy cheap brake lining because of the rapid wearing of it and also because the cost of installation should be considered in the cost of the lining. Good lining well installed should wear 8,000 miles.

In the main mechanical trouble in the braking system will be in exact proportion to the abuse handed out to it. If the various attentions needed are given the system from day to day, serious trouble will not often be encountered.

One of the commonest troubles here used to be dragging, which is not so prevalent now. This means that the bands slide on the drum, that is, make a partial contact, without the driver's touching the control. This means a useless consumption of power and undue wear on the lining. A screwdriver inserted between the band and drum all around will free the band so that it will not drag. The idea is to spring the band a little, so that when it returns it will not touch the metal.

The bands should be cleaned at least once a month, by squirting a little kerosene onto the lining surfaces and after the oil has had time to dry, some fuller's earth should be sprinkled over the surface. This will restore the grip of the band.

Adjustments must be made from time to time to take up slackness in the braking system. Usually there are two places at which adjustments may be made, one at the drum and the other near the pedal.

A yoke and clevis pin are generally the only parts requiring removal and adjustment is very much like the use of a turnbuckle. The yoke is disconnected and given a few turns to shorten the rod and the adjustment is complete. One side must never be adjusted without similar action on the other side. Brakes must act with uniformity or dangerous skidding will result.

The brake connections or linkage collect dirt and they must be cleaned and oiled frequently. It is difficult to keep the points of this exposed linkage properly oiled and for this reason it must be attended to regularly and frequently.

The pedal crank should move freely The shaft on which the pedal operates usually contains an oil hole and this must be kept free from dirt and filled with oil. If the brake rods happen to become bent, they must be straightened at once, as a bent rod produces springy action.

Nor Does Motoring Interfere in the Least—Why Put Business Before Pleasure When You Can Combine 'Em?

"It's a funny thing," confided the partner of the automobile editor's joys and sorrows, "I can't knit at all in a rocking chair, but in a limousine it's just fine. The motion seems to help. Wonder why that is?"

Lines to the Little Children

by Monte Solm.

IN THE WASHINGTON TIMES

When, as plodding our task the day,
Over this fairish place—
Children, deep in their simple play,
Tumble and tear and race.
Free as wind on the open plain,
Hither and yon they flit;
Streets they view as a Child's Domain,
Traffic, the curse of it.
All we queried we heard condemn Drivers and owners thus—
"We don't HAFF to lookkout fer THEM,
Let 'em lookkout fer US."

Boys with bicycles, balls, and kites,
Girls with their roller skates—
Who would touch on their childish rights,
Prating that Danger waits?
Still, the answer that drivers grope
Wonders them what to do.
Are we next to their answer? Nope!
Neither, for that, are you.
Ask the children who block the way,
Threaten them, weep, entreat.
"You kin lookkout fer us," they say,
"Whadda ya want, THE STREET?"

THE MOTORIST'S BOOKSHELF

AUTOMOBILE BLUE BOOK, VOL. 6 AND VOL. 8 (1918 edition): Automobile Blue Book Publishing company, Chicago; $3.

First of the 1918 motor route guides to appear are volumes 6 and 8 of the Automobile Blue Book. Their early publication is designed to benefit winter tourists, for they contain detailed directions covering the south and southwest.

The southern routes include more than 24,000 miles of motor roads through Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, and Florida. During all the years that the southern volume has been published this is the first time that section of the country has been thoroughly charted.

The 1917 volume contained running directions for only 12,000 miles of southern roads. The new volume contains 1,260 pages, against 880 pages in the preceding issue. Among the new features of the book is the addition of a descriptive outline at the head of each route, with a condensed history of the territory; better and more complete route matter, new pilot maps of Washington and vicinity and of practically all of Florida.

Many improvements and new features are to be found in the 1918 volume 8 which corresponds to the 1917 volume 8, section 1. The new book contains detailed information covering 40,000 miles of roads in California, Nevada, Utah, and Arizona. The balance of the far west and northwest will be covered in volume 9, now being prepared for publication. Volume 8 shows newly charted routes and newly made maps that have been made to meet present conditions.

Among other routes the book includes directions for traveling over the Lincoln highway from Salt Lake City to San Francisco, the Arrowhead trail to Los Angeles, the Old National road through the Grand Cañon, and the Borderland route from El Paso to Los Angeles. The army cantonments, Sequoia, Gen. Grant, and Yosemite national parks, and the Lake Tahoe region, with detailed descriptions of each, are included. Running directions, distances, character of the roads, where to stop, and where to get supplies, are set forth in detail.

DYKE'S AUTOMOBILE ENCYCLOPEDIA (1918 edition): A. L. Dyke, St. Louis, Mo.; $3.

The new edition of Dyke's authoritative annual is a ponderous one and contains about everything one desires to know about the construction, maintenance, and repair of a motor car. The repair section, which is interesting and comprehensive, includes 154 pages and 1,090 illustrations. A feature of the 1918 book is the large amount of space devoted to electric subjects. The instructions on ignition systems cover a wide field and in a simple manner easily understood even by a novice. The instructions on electric starting, generating, and lighting are illustrated by 775 drawings. In addition to the other many subjects the book contains hundreds of questions and answers; valuable hints on upkeep and driving, and several hundred illustrations devoted to many of the standard makes of gasoline and electric cars.

"Caterpillars" in Debut as Convoy for U. S. Troops

A NOTABLE innovation in infantry movement by motor transport was tested recently by the United States army with troops along the Mexican border. In this the Thirty-seventh infantry left Fort Sam Houston for Laredo, about 170 miles distant. Three tractors were used, two of them being track laying machines of seventy-five horse power.

This was the first time in the history of the United States army that tractors were used to accompany marching troops, and in order to be efficient in such service it was necessary to make camp every day on schedule time. The itinerary provided for thirteen days' marching and camps were made at Medina river, Lytle, Devine, Moore, Pearsall, Dilley, Cotulla, Artesia, Encinal, Cactus, Webb, Ortez Ranch, and Laredo.

The load pulled by the seventy-five horse power track laying tractor consisted of fifteen trailers, of which one was of three ton capacity equipped with steel tires, and the others of one ane one-half ton capacity equipped with rubber tires. One army escort wagon was added later, making sixteen trailers and a total load of about fifty-three tons.

Except for the first day out of San Antonio and a portion of the road near Laredo, the road conditions all along the route were very poor, consisting principally of deep sand or a light crust top soil with many deep sand pockets. There had been no rain in that locality for a long time, so that travel was extremely difficult for any kind of traffic.

It was necessary for the second track laying tractor to tow the third tractor the greater part of the time, and finally, at Cotulla, about ninety miles from San Antonio, the latter broke down completely and was abandoned. From this point on its load was drawn by the second tractor.

When the Frio river was reached the old bridge was declared unsafe, so the tractors were taken around through the woods to the bank of the river, where they descended an almost vertical twenty foot bank, forded the water and gravel at the bottom, and climbed out and up the steep bank on the other side. This was a most spectacular and hazardous feat and had been declared impossible by the army officers.

The two track laying machines, or "caterpillars," made camp every day on schedule time and arrived with the regiment at Laredo in perfect condition. The return journey was then begun and accomplished in much the same manner.

The total work done by the first tractor—the one which hauled a load of fifty-three tons—amounted to 17,000 ton miles for the 340 mile trip. The fuel consumption was about one gallon for every five miles of travel, while oil was used at the rate of three gallons to the mile.

Can't Build Their Roads.

West Virginia has more than $10,000,000 available for work on public roads, and all that is now awaited is the labor and material, both of which are scarce. It is not possible to secure material because of railroad congestion. A. Dennis Williams, president of the state roads bureau, says the state has for Class A roads $1,821,000 from the county Class A levies. To this can be added $450,000 federal and state aid, making a total of $2,271,000. There remain in addition to this unexpended authorized bond issues approximating $7,750,000.

ADD HORRORS OF WAR: PARK COMMISSIONERS REFUSE TO ABOLISH CAMOUFLAGED COPS

A petition from the Chicago Motor club and the Chicago Automobile club asking that motorcycle policemen wear uniforms hereafter was tabled last week at a meeting of the south park board.

Members of both clubs deny that they have signed a joint request to the kaiser to have all submarines sound their horns before discharging torpedoes.

As a matter of principle, however, they submit that this business of sneaking up when one isn't looking is all wrong, and they're agin it.

Bans Auto Hunting.

New Hampshire has a new game law which prohibits shooting from automobiles or other motor vehicles.

Another Motorcycle.

The manufacture of a novel type of motorcycle will start soon at Elizabeth, N. J. In designing it the engineers of the company have entirely discarded the diamond frame idea and instead have followed motor car engineering practices.

One unusual feature of the machine is presented in two eight inch idler wheels, one on each side of the rear wheel, which can be raised or lowered instantly by the driver by a slight pressure of the heel on a conveniently placed lever. These serve as stabilizers and make it possible to mount and dismount, stop and start, without the agility hitherto required of motorcycle riders.

The machine was exhibited at the New York automobile show last January, but plans for manufacturing in quantities have been deferred until now. An annual output of 25,000 is being arranged for.

Discharged—But Not Fired

Don't think your battery's a "dead one" because it's discharged. With expert handling a discharged battery can be filled again with "pep" and put back on the job.

But it takes an expert to do it—to determine the proper slow rate of charge to begin with, then to speed up the charge as the battery is able to take it.

Recharging is only one phase of the battery service we're offering car owners, but it's an important one.

And don't forget that a Still Better Willard and Threaded Rubber Insulation means less liability to battery trouble of any kind.

$3,500,000 to Be Autoists' Bit for State Next Year?

MOTORISTS in Illinois will pay, on an average, approximately $2.50 more for each of their 1918 automobile licenses than for those of previous years. With observance of the annual custom of "digging," which they are invited to begin this week, comes their first taste of the increased fees legislated into being at Springfield last summer in anticipation of the state-wide program of road building, for which the motor car owners are expected to foot the bills.

On gasoline and steam cars up to thirty-five horse power 50 per cent has been added to the existing fees. On cars of more than thirty-five horse power and on all electric vehicles the fees have been doubled.

A legislative committee down east has estimated that owners of motor vehicles in the United States will pay $83,095,000 in license fees during the coming year. With a new schedule of payments in effect in Illinois, it may be interesting, if you've nothing better to contemplate this morning, to figure out what part of this amount we shall be contributing.

During recent years the average payment for an automobile license in Illinois has been about $5, the small amount, of course, being due to the preponderance of comparatively low powered cars. With a 50 per cent increase on the fees most owners pay, the new average would be approximately $7.50.

That's a matter of simple arithmetic; estimating the number of Illinois cars that will be licensed in 1918 is not so easy.

For the last three years the total of registrations in the state has shown a fairly constant annual increase of about 37 per cent. There were 180,632 in 1915, 248,429 in 1916, and there will be more than 340,000 this year. The "dope," therefore, indicates that we should have about 465,000 cars by January, 1919.

But the war may change all that.

"We have already placed orders for 250,000 plates for 1918," Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson writes THE TRIBUNE, "and the estimate of the automobile department is that about 400,000 pairs will be required.

"Of course, all this will depend largely upon the attitude of the government concerning the automobile plants, and whether or not the expense of the great war in which we are engaged will require rigid economy on the part of many of us.

"The gasoline problem may also enter into the car sales for the coming year, so that it is difficult to anticipate just the number of new cars that will be sold. We believe that if conditions were normal the licenses issued would reach more than 400,000."

Mr. Emmerson's figures probably are conservative. No economy plans such as are in prospect would be likely to cut the 1918 total for the state to less than 400,000. Assuming that there will be that many cars, the license revenue for the next year will be $3,000,000—a sizeable sum, compared with the $1,700,000 which represents the 1917 collections. And, should the normal rate of increase be maintained, the total will be nearer $3,500,000.

The new Illinois license plates for 1918 will be what is officially designated as battleship gray, with embossed figures in royal blue. There is no change in the design from former years, though the law gives the secretary of state some leeway in the matter. Up to Wednesday of last week 338,700 licenses had been issued for the current year. Applications are still averaging about 100 a day.

For Headlight Uniformity.

In an effort to obtain uniform state laws regulating automobile headlights representatives from New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, and Pennsylvania met with a committee from the Society of Automotive Engineers last week.

Many states have been approving certain makes of anti-glare devices, but these are only effective if the lamp is properly adjusted before the anti-glare device is fitted, which means that placing the stamp of approval of any device is useless.

In many states the restrictions on headlights to prevent glare require the beam of light not to be higher than forty-two inches from the surface of the road. It was admitted that present legislation is not satisfactory, but no definite conclusion was reached as to the correct method of enforcing the forty-two inch rule, which all agree is the desired condition to be had with lamps.

Water in Crankcase.

This is the time of the year when water condensation in the crankcase is a serious matter. The more cylinders the engine has the worse the situation. Water, a product of combustion, makes its way past the piston rings into the crankcase, where it interferes with lubrication. In the warmer weather the water, in the form of steam, may blow out of the breather, but when the crankcase is fanned by a cold breeze the steam condenses into water, which contaminates the oil. The remedy, of course, lies in draining the oil about every four weeks and filtering it.

225,000 in Texas.

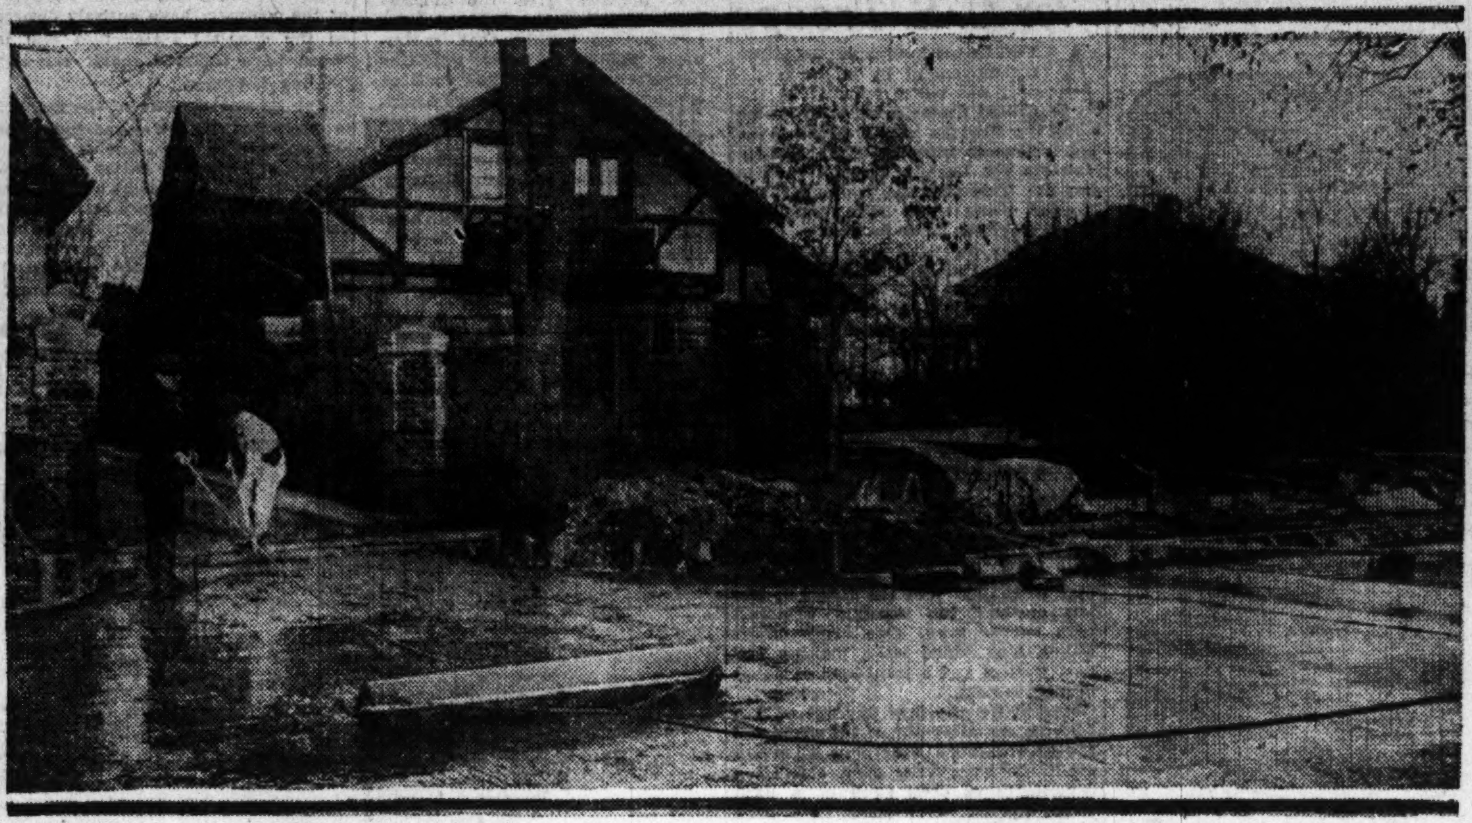
It is estimated that the total number of cars in Texas is about 225,000 and that this number of licenses will have been issued by Jan. 1. The total receipts of the state highway department are now about $900,000. In Missouri 144,465 motor cars have been licensed this year, together with 4,097 motorcycles and 1,341 dealers. The fees to date this year are $591,069, an increase of $169,337 for the same period last year. St. Louis has 27,279 of the total of cars. Kansas City has 16,649.

They're Forehanded Here.

The automobile division of the Pennsylvania state highway department already has received more than 5,100 applications for 1918 motor vehicle registrations and licenses, the moneys therefrom totaling $40,835. All motor vehicles must carry 1918 tags on Jan. 1.

GOOD ROADS VIA THE ROLLING PIN

Novel Surfacing Method Used by Workmen on New Stretch of Sheridan Road in Winnetka.



A revised version of the kitchen rolling pin has been used by workmen on Sheridan road in Winnetka in surfacing the new pavement beginning at the north end of Winnetka at the water tower and connecting with Kenilworth's new pavement. The roller—6 feet long, 10 inches in diameter, and weighing about 75 pounds—is designed to squeeze out excess water and even up the concrete in preparation for the final finishing with rubber and canvas belts. Ropes are fastened to the roller in such a way that two men can pull it across and along the pavement without having to kneel on a bridge over the unfinished surface.

APPLY NOW

"Tribune" Will Distribute 1918 Motor License Blanks, Ready This Week.

SECRETARY OF STATE LOUIS L. EMMERSON announces that his office will begin receiving applications for 1918 automobile licenses next Saturday (Dec. 1). Motorists are urged to file these applications as early as possible to avoid delay in receiving their new license plates and to help minimize the task faced by the automobile department at Springfield, which must issue nearly 350,000 new licenses to replace those now in effect.

Increased license fees and certain other changes in the motor vehicle law have made necessary the preparation of new application blanks, with the figures "1918" printed diagonally across them. Only applications made out on this form will be accepted; the old blanks, in use for several years past, won't do.

To save its readers the trouble of sending to Springfield for these forms, "The Tribune" has obtained a supply for distribution—of course without charge. Motor car owners may get them in either of two ways:

1—Call at the subscription window in "The Tribune's" business office, on the street floor at Madison and Dearborn streets.

2—Mail a stamped and self-addressed envelope to "Automobile Editor, The Tribune, Chicago." No message is needed. If you send the envelope it will be understood that you want an application blank.

Another convenient point of distribution is the secretary of state's Chicago office, room 245, Transportation building, Dearborn and Harrison streets, where a supply of the blanks will be ready this week.

The forms contain full directions for making out your application. To learn the rated horse power of your car (which determines the amount of the fee) use the formula of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Take the bore (diameter) of the cylinders, square it, multiply by the number of cylinders, and divide by 2.5.

Less Cotton Now.

Without cotton there would be no such thing as a pneumatic automobile tire, for cotton really forms its basis. The tire builder makes up the "carcass" on a mold, by building layer upon layer of fabric, woven from the finest grades of cottons that can be grown.

No other material has been found for tire construction, combining its strength and economy. So the production of tires is in a measure dependent upon the production of cotton.

The latest government crop estimates indicate a 1917 cotton yield for the whole country of 60 per cent, which promises a total crop of about 12,000,000 bales, 600,000 more than last year, but 4,000,000 less than three years ago. The highest announced estimate for any state was that covering Arizona, 87 per cent.

The Simple Minded Rustic.

A motorist bound along the road from Detroit to Toledo, one of the worst to be found in many states, reports that he encountered one 200 yard stretch where, because the grade was high, there was no way to turn off from the paving. "A kind hearted farmer," he told the Ohio Motorist, "stood at the gate of his barnyard and for the sum of 25 cents allowed each motorist to pass through the gate, over an uncultivated field for about 200 yards, and onto the road again."

and About the Folks Who Make 'Em and Sell 'Em

MAKING friends by selling them the kind of cars they want, is the ambition of most automobile builders, but one doesn't [illegible] hear of a case like this: H. J. [illegible], vice president of Sprague, Warner & Co., bought a Nash sedan last week. It was, he said, the twelfth car built at the same plant in Kenosha, [illegible] which he has owned in the last [illegible] years. His first was a two cylinder Rambler, built by the Jeffery organization, which preceded the present Nash dynasty, and given the same name as that of the bicycle which had its palmy days back in the '90s. Can any other Chicagoan beat this record for loyalty to a single make?

G. W. Stratton, whose withdrawal from the Harry Newman-Stratton company was told in these columns last week, now announces that he has abandoned the passenger car field entirely and will devote himself to the sale of trucks. He has organized the Stratton-Gramm-Bernstein Truck company (taking his hyphens with him, evidently, from the Newman firm), and will distribute the Gramm-Bernstein product in the Chicago territory from headquarters, at 2436 South Michigan avenue. It will be remembered that the first Liberty truck for the United States government was assembled in the Gramm-Bernstein plant at Lima, O.

"The truck industry is just getting really started," says Mr. Stratton, "with the demand for war purposes and for intercity hauls to relieve the railroads." The signs of the times would seem to indicate that he's right. It's a shrewd dealer, indeed, who turns from passenger cars to trucks these days.

When the 1909 Buick, known as the "Hyatt roller," completed its tour of the country the other day, its 9 year old bearings were removed at the Hyatt factory in Detroit and examined. Though the car in which they were installed has registered 272,962 miles of travel, the naked eye, it is reported, could perceive no evidences of wear. Micrometer measurements showed the total average wear to have been four thousandths of an inch. After the examination the bearings were put back and the ancient car is on the road again.

A notable exhibit of closed Pierce-Arrow bodies is to be seen at the headquarters of H. Paulman &.Co., the Chicago distributors. They include a conventional brougham, a town brougham, a sedan, and a novel French brougham landaulet.

Harry Newman reports that a Maxwell one ton truck, navigating the traffic in Detroit and certain rural roads near the city, recently accomplished the feat of covering 17.8 miles on one gallon of gasoline. He thinks there are no existing records showing a better performance by any loaded truck. The Maxwell carried a touring car weighing 1,970 pounds and a 200 pound passenger in addition to its driver.

The Overland Motor company claims the distinction of having on its premises the steepest hill in Chicago. It is a runway leading from the street level to the second floor of the Overland service station and has been used frequently for testing the hill climbing ability of various models. A country club roadster negotiated it the other day on high speed.

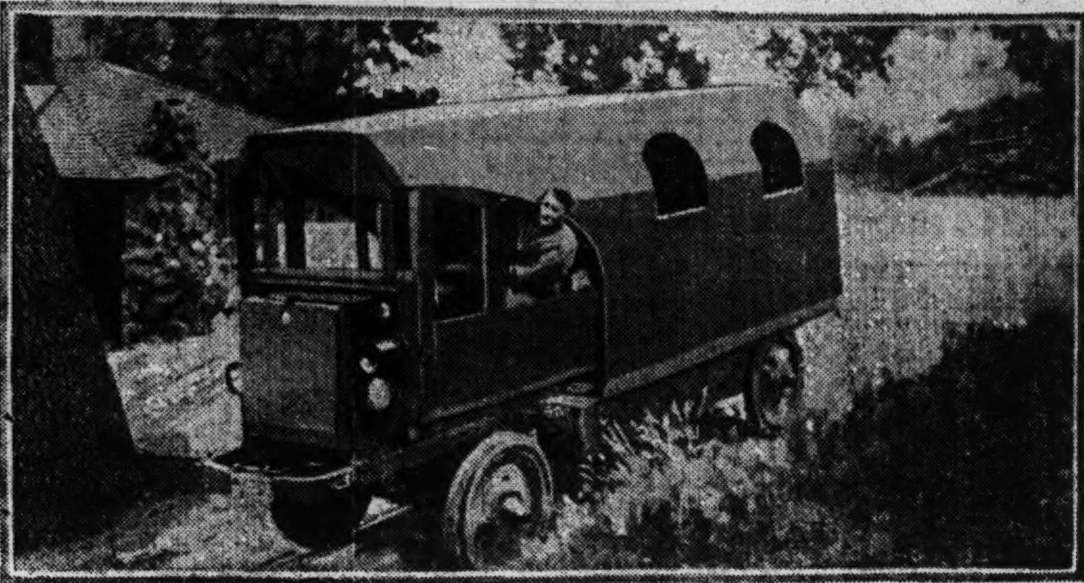
One of the current weekly news films is showing movies of a fleet of five test cars sent out from Akron, O., to see what they could do in the way of wearing out Firestone tires. The cars arrived in New York (where their pictures were taken at the city hall) with a total of 3,000 miles to their credit and Ohio air in every one of the twenty tires.

Fifty of the new Doble steam cars are approaching completion in the plant of the General Engineering company at Detroit. These will be supplied to dealers throughout the country, after which the long deferred regular production will be started.

A. J. Banta, long identified with the sale of the Locomobile in Chicago, has left the Premier organization, of which he has been vice president until recently, to become assistant sales director in the new Maxwell-Chalmers combination.

LOGGING THE ROAD

This California "Nature Man" Is Doing It in a Motor Truck Touring Body Hewn from a Huge Redwood.



Charles Kellogg, known in California as the "nature man," has an abhorrence of hotels, steam heat, and the conventions generally, but he hasn't escaped the motoring fever. Desiring something distinctively his own, he bought a motor truck chassis and a huge redwood log. Then he sawed the tree to the proper length, gouged out its center, and cut windows—and presto! he had a home. Now Mr. Kellogg proposes to see what there is to see outside of California.

Questions and Answers

Will you please publish your opinion regarding muffler cutouts? I have been told that a cutout on a car will greatly increase the power of the motor. Is this true or not?

AMATEUR, Chesterton, Ind.

My candid opinion of muffler cutouts is that they are nuisances and should be abolished. Manufacturers realize that they are practically useless, and few of them are equipping their machines with the devices. Another thing against them is that most cities have ordinances forbidding their use. An old, exploded idea was that a cutout increased the power of the motor, prevented back pressure, and was of great assistance on heavy grades and in pulling through deep sand. As a matter of fact, only 3 per cent of power is lost through the muffler, and this is not enough to make any material difference in the running of the car.

Is it all right to leave an automobile parked in Michigan avenue during an evening performance at a theater?

INQUISITIVE, Chicago.

The rules of the South park board prohibit an automobile from standing at the curb more than thirty minutes at any time of day or night. A machine is never allowed to stay on the west side of the street any longer than is required to let off or take on passengers.

Is the Jefferson highway well marked throughout its entire length? Would that road be the best one to follow from Des Moines to New Orleans? What is the distance and what are the principal places along the route?

L. J. SHERMAN, Des Moines, Ia.

The Jefferson highway is well marked with the letters of the route and alternate blue and white bands. I would advise you to follow it on your trip to New Orleans. The distance from Des Moines to New Orleans is 1,449 miles. From Des Moines the route passes through Indianola, Osceola, Van Wert, Davis City, Ia.; Eagleville, Pattonsburg, Winston, Cameron, Plattsburg, Smithville, Kansas City, Harrisonville, Nevada, Sheldon, Carytown, Webb City, Kan.; Miami, Muskogee, Checotah, McAlester, Atoka, Caney, Durant, Calera, Okla.; Denison, Trenton, Leonard, Sulphur Springs, Mount Pleasant, Pittsburgh, Gilner, Marshall, Jonesville, Wasakom, Tex.; Shreveport, Mansfield, Marthaville, Montgomery, Colfax, Bagdad, Meeker, Morrow, Rosedale, Port Allen, Baton Rouge, Mount Airy, La Place, St. Rose, Kenner, and Harrihan to New Orleans, La.

Is there any danger of injuring the motor when the carbon is burned out by the use of oxy-acetylene gas? Would the flame not melt the iron or take the temper out of the pistons? Where does the carbon go when removed, and would not its particles lodge under the valves and prevent them from closing properly?

T. J. HANNIGAN, Chicago.

You are mistaken in thinking that oxy-acetylene gas is used in removing carbon. The gas is used for cutting and welding purposes and would quickly ruin a motor. For burning out carbon pure oxygen alone is used and if the work is properly done by an expert no harm should result. The flame burns up most of the carbon, but the small particles that may be left are usually blown out by compressed air. Sometimes a piece of carbon will lodge under the valves. After the carbon is burned out it is a good thing to have the valves ground in.

How is one to know whether the mixture passing through the carburetor is too rich or too lean? As I live in the country several miles from the nearest garage I would like to have you tell me some way to test the mixture. A little advice from you will be appreciated.

C. T. A., White Pigeon, Mich.

When there is any doubt as to whether the mixture is too rich, an excellent way to ascertain the proper proportion of air and gasoline is to shut off the gasoline at the fuel tank and open the throttle. If the mixture passing into the cylinders is too rich, the engine speed will increase as the level of the gasoline in the float chamber is lowered, since this operation weakens the mixture considerably. If the mixture is thought to be too weak, the float chamber may be flooded while the engine is running. If this causes the motor to speed up it may be taken as an indication that the mixture is too lean. The mixture should be richer at low speed than at high. At low speed more heat is lost to the cylinder walls, more compression is lost by leakage and therefore the combustion can be slower, thus sustaining the pressure. At high speeds the compression is higher, due to less leakage and less loss of heat. Few motorits who have trouble with their cars as soon as cold weather sets in realize that the adjustment should be changed to suit the conditions. A carbuetor that is adjusted to work perfectly in warm weather will not operate satisfactorily when the weather gets cold.

Show Drawings Reveal Volume of Auto Sales

DRAWING for space at the national automobile shows in New York and Chicago is conducted on a basis of business done—in money, not number of cars—for the July 1 to July 1 period annually. It is interesting, therefore, to observe the order of the drawing, for it is the only publicly given indication of the comparative business of those manufacturers who are members of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and who have decided they want to exhibit.

The Ford Motor company, of course, would head the list if Mr. Ford were a member of the N. A. C. C., but he is not.

As to the other manufacturing concerns, the order of drawing for the 1918 shows is a fairly reliable guide to the volume of their business. They line up thus:

Increased Speed in Transportation of Nation's Products—Today's Problem

New Speed Factor Enters Field of Transportation

You can sell your product—but can you deliver it?

Give us delivery—that is the cry.

Speed—speed—speed—wanted, demanded and insisted upon as never before.

And here is the solution of the problem of increased speed in truck deliveries.

Today it is an acknowledged fact that motor trucks equipped with our Cord Pneumatic Truck Tires can be operated at a greatly increased speed with absolute safety and economy.

Increased speed means increased deliveries for long and short hauls—and also lower delivery cost.

In every way the new revolutionary United States 'Nobby' Cord Pneumatic Truck Tire goes to the heart of the nation's vital transportation problem—makes it easier, cheaper, quicker for you to fulfil your transportation obligations.

• • • • • •

Some trucks can't use pneumatic tires, but eighty per cent. can—can yours?

If yours can, you can save money on gasoline, oil and truck upkeep, and at the same time increase your truck efficiency.

About sixty per cent. of commercial cars today use pneumatic tires—of woven fabric construction—and United States Woven Fabric Pneumatic Tires have made a phenomenal record—just as United States Solid Truck Tires have made such phenomenal records on the other forty per cent. of commercial cars.

But the next logical step in truck tire evolution is our 'Nobby' Cord Pneumatic Tire, the answer in economy, speed and resiliency.

While the United States 'Nobby' Cord Pneumatic Truck Tire is new on the market, it has been tested for many years, and has been tried and proved under conditions far severer than those in practical use—with startlingly satisfying results.

Recently an Army transport expert put a set of these tires (36 x 7) on a ton and a half motor truck, with an overload of a ton and a quarter, making two and three-quarters tons in all.

He drove this truck under army conditions 4,288 miles over the most difficult part of the American continent—where there were roads, and where there were no roads.

With this result—he averaged seven miles per gallon of gasoline; thirty-three miles per quart of oil; —and at the end of the trip the truck was still in practically as good condition as when it started.

See the nearest United States Truck Tire Dealer or the nearest United States Tire Service Branch. The truck tire expert will tell you. If there is no dealer near you write us, sending make of your truck and the capacity—1790 Broadway, New York.

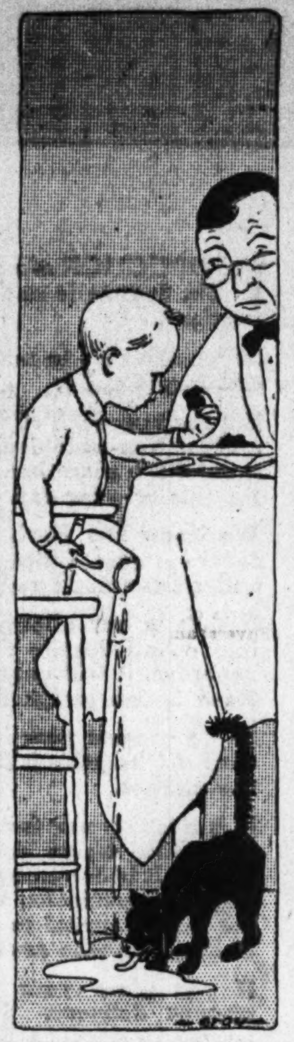
Slams of Life

by J. R. McEvoy

TO DOROTHY MARY, ON HER MANNERS.



We take a lot of pains, 'tis true,
To fetch you up correct,
But all our words you misconstrue,
Our counsel you neglect;
In consequence, my daughter, you
Are far from circumspect.

Affection graces any miss,
'Tis sweet in one so wee;
I would not have you void of this
For anything, but gee!
You do not have to try and kiss
'Most every man you see.

At table, too, your ways are crass;
We would not have them so.
You should not reach—we'll gladly pass
If you'll but let us know;
And never, never lick the glass,
It isn't comme-il-faut.

Quite true that fingers came before
The forks with which we eat,
But do not use your mitts, asthore,
For grabbing up your meat,
And pouring milk upon the floor
Is cute—but isn't neat.

And every night, poor John E. Byrnes,
To whom I pay my rent,
For peace and quiet madly yearns
For comfort and content—
If only you would go to bed
Without an argument!

You're 16 months of age and you
Are far from circumspect,
Our sage advice and counsel, true,
You cheerfully neglect,
Despite the pains we're taking, too,
To fetch you up correct.

They Laugh at this in Vaudeville

RIALTO.

Wayman & Berry:

"Don't speak to me. I don't care to have any conversation with you."

"Why, what's the matter?"

"You've been going around saying I was a dog."

"No, indeed. I consider a dog to be a man's truest and most faithful friend."

"I've been more than a friend. When you first came to this country alone and penniless, who stood by you? I did."

"Yes, and last night when I missed my diamond scarf pin who stood by me? You did."

"Do you mean to imply that I stole your scarf pin?"

"Certainly not. Only if you hadn't stood by me perhaps I wouldn't have lost it."

"How much was the pin worth?"

"I don't know. How much did you get on it?"

"Please understand once and for all that I haven't your pin."

"Well, give me the ticket and we'll call it square."

"O, come now, there's no sense in two old friends like us fighting."

"Well, I guess you're right. But say, I hardly expected to see you today."

"Why, how's that?"

"Somebody told me you had been gored to death by a mad bull."

"No. That was my brother."

"Well, I'm sorry to hear that."

"There you go again. But talking of adventure, do you remember that experience we had in the African jungle when a lion chased me?"

"I'll never forget it."

"You certainly climbed up that tree pretty fast."

"Yes, and I'd have climbed up faster yet if you hadn't been ahead of me."

McVICKER'S.

Van and Carrie Avery:

"I've loved you for ten years and now will you marry me?"

"You have loved me for ten years and have never dared to tell me so until now?"

"Yes."

"Then I cannot be your wife. A man who has no more courage than that would feign to be asleep while a burglar stole his baby's stockings. You ought to rename that scale you've got in your butch shop the Ambuscade brand."

"Why should I rename it the Ambuscade brand?"

"Because it says in the dictionary that ambuscade means 'to lie in wait.'"

"Why do you look so sad?"

"I just heard one man call another a crook, and the man that was called a crook said the other man would have to apologize or there would be a fight."

"Why should that make you sad?"

"'Cause the other man apologized."

"My father is the greatest whistler in this country."

"He doesn't come up to my father."

"Can your father whistle good?"

"I should say so. Why, when my father starts whistling every man stops his work."

"How's that? How can he do it?"

"Well, you see, he blows the whistle for lunch up at the factory."

"Are you a single man?"

"Certainly not; I'm twins."

"You remind me of a star."

"Thank you; but tell me, why do I remind you of a star?"

"Because it is out so very late at night and looks so pale in the morning."

"Will you come to the theater with me this evening?"

"Have you secured the seats?"

"O, some now. You're not as heavy as all that."

"Why did everybody cry in that last death scene that I played last night?"

"Because they knew you weren't really dead."

"There have been times in my life when I was tempted to commit suicide."

"O, well, it's no use grieving over the past. We can all look back and see where we've made mistakes."

The wholesale house canceled the order when the machines were not delivered at promised time, and we are handling THE ENTIRE ORDER, a huge one. All machines are absolutely new and carry the manufacturers' guarantee, which we will indorse. They play any record.

Household Goods

Remember that we have on hand at all times some excellent values in furniture and household goods, new and used. Our storage warehouse is constantly turning in goods which the owners have failed to claim, and which we must dispose of to meet the storage charges. Much of this furniture is but little used, and practically good as new. And we are constantly buying up odd lots of furniture, manufacturers' samples, etc., all absolutely new, but purchased at a fraction of their real value. Careful economical purchasers of furniture always profit by a visit to our ware rooms.

A SALES MANAGER AND HIS ABLE ASSISTANT desire a new connection about January 1st.

We prefer to handle a commodity of general consumption and one which is or will be backed by educational advertising campaigns.

We have both had several years of organization experience and have been highly successful in the work now undertaken. There is no grievance connected with our desire for a change. Neither is a change suggested to or forced upon us. We want an opportunity greater in size than we have now—good living incomes and commission arrangements. Our total annual income at present exceeds $12,000.00.

The product we now handle yields over a million dollars gross a year. We plan and direct everything. We know advertising in a big way. Know distribution and how to get it. Know how to hire the best help, where to get it and then how to keep it.

We know a great many things that would be valuable to a wide awake, broad minded institution looking for red-blooded Americans, draft exempt, 35 years and under in age. Your communication and such offer as you may care to make will be held in extraordinary confidence. Address G 591, Tribune.

SALESMEN—PROSPERITY AND INDEPENDENCE. The man who masters the principals of selling has no master the moment he learns, goes where he chooses, and works when he chooses, and frequently makes more in an hour than the wage earner or salaried man makes in a week. If you think so, we will be glad TO TEACH you how to sell accident and health insurance, and as our success depends on the success we make of you, we will naturally teach you well. When found almost certain sales result. We invite inquiries from ambitious men wishing to better their circumstances through a dignified, wholesome profession. Write E. C. California.

FOR SALE—SMALL FARMS LOCATED IN best part of the San Joaquin Valley, California, every tract lying within two miles of a railway staion. Near famous alfalfa and orchard lands of Stanislaus County, which yield an average income for the entire county of over $127 per acre. Two cases give an idea of what was done this year: A crop of sweet potatoes sold in the field without being dug for $300 an acre. A crop of beans grown between the rows of fruit trees in a six acre orchard was sold for over $160 an acre.
Price is $125 an acre. The owner sells five acres for $625, and gives a warranty deed with perfect title and a lease option contract for a period of five or ten years on fifteen acres additional, so that the owner of the five acres will have immediate possession of the entire twenty acres, can cultivate the same to crops, or improve it in any way he desires, and pay a nominal rental each year, or until his profits from the land justify him in canceling the lease option contract and taking a deed for the total acreage.
This plan makes it possible for a man with small capital to get a tract on which to build his home, and cultivate additional acreage in a way that it will pay for itself and make him the owner of a twenty acre improved farm within ten years without any further payment than that earned from the land.
For further information write to C. L. SEAGRAVES, Industrial Commissioner Santa Fe Ry., 1820 Railway Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

FOR SALE—THE NEW ORLEANS GREAT Northern Railroad, for the first time in a systematic way, opens to homeseekers the splendid cutover lands along its lines in the rich states of Louisiana and Mississippi.
Hitherto, lumber being the chief asset, the land itself, regardless of its great agricultural worth, has been carried on the books at a mere nominal value, but as the lumber companies, pine tar product plants, and wood pulp paper mills are using up the trees, stumps, and waste wood on the logging fields, a large acreage near in to towns, churches, schools, and markets, is available for trucking, dairying, and live stock farming, and the greatest inducements to settlers in prices, terms, and co-operation are offered. In addition to our American settlers, a Scandinavian-American colony and a flourishing German-American colony are building up on our lines near Bogalusa, La. Numbers of families move down in November. Glad to refer you to members of these colonies.

HURRY! HURRY!
LAND! LAND!

OPPORTUNITY OF A LIFETIME for wage earner, farm renter, or farm hand to get a home and go into the farming business, which of all industries is the most successful. 40,000 acres of the best hardwood soil in Michigan to choose from.

FALL IN LINE with the steady stream of settlers we are sending to this country.

LET'S LOOK AHEAD—when war ceases there will be the greatest rush for land in America's history. Mechanics by tens of thousands, when released from munition factories, will return to rural districts. Soldiers by hundreds of thousands, used to outdoor life, will not return to indoor work but will enter into agriculture, which will require their combined efforts to replenish the world's depleted stores of grain. Land prices will soar; the prosperity of farmers will continue indefinitely.

SOLDIERS! SAILORS! Leave for war with a clear conscience, knowing your loved ones will be taken care of. In case of your death our insurance provides we are to deed the land to any beneficiary you name.

AN ARMY LIVES on its stomach. We who can't fight must provide fighters with three square meals a day. Victory depends on food. The man behind the plow will win the war as much as the man behind the gun. If you can't fight—then plow.

THIS LAND is located in Kalkaska, Antrim, and Charlevoix counties, Michigan. Healthful climate; mild winters. Formerly on this land stood forests of elm, beech, sugar maple, and other hard wood trees. A few of these forests still remain and are evidence of the fertility of the soil. The woodsman's axe is rapidly felling them and settlers are following who are establishing farm homes, which are so rapidly increasing in value that in a few years they will sell as high as farms in the old settled districts of other states.

THE SOIL PRODUCES wheat, oats, corn, clover, alfalfa, and all vegetables, such as potatoes, beans, peas, sugar beets, etc. Stock raising and poultry farming pay well.

80, 40, or 20 acres at $15 to $30 per acre. Small down payment on each 40; balance on easy monthly payments which most any one can meet.

LIBERTY BONDS do double work when we take them in as the down payment at a 10% premium to you. Ask about Michigan's liberal law exempting settlers from taxes for the first five years.

NOVEMBER 27TH we are running a big special Pullman car excursion to these lands. Come for a stay of two or more days at our new clubhouse on the lands. Fine, reasonable accommodations for both men and women. Enjoy the free auto trips over the beautiful country.

CALL at our office and see the exhibits we have on display. Or write for our free big booklet telling you everything there is to know about this country. It answers about every question you can think of. BEAR IN MIND, NOVEMBER 27TH.

Texas.

FOR SALE—NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY IN A GREAT STATE.
A new SANTA FE line is tapping a fertile prairie section of Northwest Texas, near Oklahoma border, where many farmers have MADE GOOD with wheat, hogs, and live stock. HERE, if you ACT NOW, you can get first choice. You can get in AHEAD of the railway and the people whom the railway will bring.
Chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farseeing farmers can acquire good land at an astonishingly low figure and on long, easy terms.
Why say good-by to good rent money every year when same money invested here will pay big returns and make you OWNER of a fine big farm?
A great railroad, like the Santa Fe, would only recommend what it considers a good thing; it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE. Climate is pleasant, rainfall comes in growing season, winters are mild, stock can run in open year around. Schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything here but enough men with families.
The farmers' BEST CHANCE is on good low priced land raising products that bring big returns. Be one of the fortunate first comers to reap the advantages of a section inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural agent and pronounced RIGHT. Twenty-dollar-an-acre land here has made 26% YEARLY, compared with 6% on $150 land in Illinois and Iowa corn belt.
Write me for our free illustrated folder with particulars, giving experience of farmers now here and results achieved in short time on small capital.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

LET'S GET TOGETHER.

Am a young man with seven years' experience in wheat farming in the Rosebud district near Calgary, Alberta, owning 2,300 acres there. My wheat average has been 38 bushels per acre.

There is some land near me and close to elevators which can be bought very reasonably, and on easy terms.

I want to get in touch with a man with capital to co-operate with me in developing and operating part of it.

Many new settlers are paying for their land from one or two crops. Thirty-five dollar land in a district where the wheat average has been close to 40 bu. per acre is mighty cheap.

I have a big farming outfit, steam tractor, gang plows, gang discs, etc. The district is proved, the price of wheat is established, the outfit is there, so it isn't hard to figure what several thousand dollars will do.

I am not a real estate dealer. I am a wheat farmer. What I want is to join some one in buying another tract.

Am in Chicago on a visit. Can give best of references and know my subject thoroughly. If you are interested I would be glad to show you.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

FOR QUICK ACTION—THE Greatest Opportunity in Merchandising in America.

To the right party we will give full control and management of one of Kansas City's main street department stores, which last year did a cash business of over $600,000. Merchandise, good will, and fixtures valued at over $150,000. In consideration of other party being well and favorably known as a high grade department store merchant and manager and of his having resources that will permit his putting in not less than $50,000 cash as additional capital, an annual business of a million dollars can be done. Present owners will accept $100,000 preferred stock for their holdings and allow new management to hold common stock for his additional $50,000 cash capital, this new common stock to control the business. Store at this time discounting bills, and under increase of capital will have no liabilities. Kansas City's wonderful business and rapid growth, coupled with its prosperous trade territory, should be attractive to one looking for a business such as this opportunity affords. For quick action and further confidential information address CHAS. S. GILL, First National Bank Building, Kansas City, Mo.

WE OFFER TODAY AT BARGAIN PRICES A GENUINE VICTOR VICTROLA AND COLUMBIA GRAFONOLA.

These are regular floor cabinet machines, beautifully designed and polished, and not small table machines, as others advertise.

We also have good values in other standard makes of phonographs which must be disposed of this week at ridiculous prices. For instance, $30 takes a regular $150 model that plays all records and is guaranteed to you; $35 and $40 gives you your choice of several high grade machines that are selling downtown at $200. We have only two models left, that have been turned over to our storage house to be sold at $60 and $75, but if you once see them you will recognize VALUE. It will pay you to call here before buying elsewhere. Make us prove it to you. Open evenings for your convenience until 9:30.

ITALIAN COLONY OPENS DRIVE FOR NEW AMBULANCE

Lodges to Name Gift in Honor of Garibaldi's Memory.

The Italian colony around Eli Bates house is stirred as never before over the movement to raise an ambulance for the Italian front. The choice of the name, Giuseppe Garibaldi, created the greatest enthusiasm. At the meeting, at which the organization was perfected, all the lodges in the neighborhood were represented and about $600 was pledged.

The officers elected were: Joseph Dauriana, president; Antonio Bellavia, secretary; Nicassio Flosi, treasurer.

Today there will be a grand parade in the neighborhood, in which all the lodges will take part with their bands. The occasion will be a grand festa and a collection for the ambulance will be taken up.

Rivalry Is Keen.

The north side Italian colony will all be out. They are determined to make their compatriots of the west and south sides sit up and take notice. Circulars will be distributed, informing all Italians of the object of the festa and urging them to support its object.

On Dec. 1 a concert will be given at Eli Bates house, one-half of the proceeds to go to the ambulance and the remainder to the Italian relief. The neighborhood considers that the Giuseppe Garibaldi ambulance is assured.

A letter from Robert Underwood Johnson, chairman of the fund in New York, says:

"Hurrah for THE TRIBUNE! The check of $2,000 for the third ambulance—in honor of Mark Twain—is here and will be forwarded as soon as the bank will permit. Today we have forty ambulances at the front, on Saturday there will be ten more, we have bought sixteen more, and others will follow as fast as the money comes in. The first fifty cars will be operated by the Italian government—the others by the Red Cross for the army."

One Contribution.

Only one contribution to the fund came to THE TRIBUNE yesterday. The fund now stands:

Previously reported	$1,520.93
Louis Barla	5.00
Total	$1,525.93

Checks should be made payable to the American Poets' Ambulances in Italy and sent in care of THE TRIBUNE.

PLAYERS TO TAKE PART AT STAGE EMPLOYES' BALL

The stage employes will give their fifth annual benefit ball at the Coliseum and Annex next Wednesday night (Thanksgiving eve). The most prominent players in town will assist. At 11:30 o'clock the grand march will be started, Miss Elizabeth Murray and Nat Goodwin leading one wing and Miss Blanche Ring and Joseph Santley the other.

In addition to a carnival of dancing and jazz music there will be varied entertainment by members of all the atrical companies in town. Both Miss Ring and Miss Murray will sing and Mr. Goodwin will tell stories. Mr. Santley and Miss Ivy Sawyer will contribute specialties and Miss Josephine Harriman will dance.

A large papier mache elephant, now on view in one of Mandel Bros.' windows, will be raffled. The proceeds will go to the sick fund of the order.

BNAI BRITH WILL OPEN CLUBROOM FOR CAMP GRANT

Camp Grant is expected to turn out today for the dedication of the Rockford headquarters of the American Soldiers and Sailors' Welfare league of the Independent Order Bnai Brith. It is located at 524 West State street.

A special train for Chicagoans will leave the union station at 10 o'clock this morning and returning will leave Rockford at 8 p. m. Aaron Horvitz, formerly a practicing attorney of Pittsburg, is in charge of the headquarters.

Soldiers at Camp Grant have come to patronize the hall in numbers. It has been fitted up with every convenience, including pool tables, reading and music rooms, and desks for writing letters.

GRAHAMS OFFER PLAN TO PAY IN FULL IN 3 YEARS

Request Referee Wean to Allow Composition of Resources.

Attorneys representing the defunct Graham & Sons bank yesterday formally presented to Referee in Bankruptcy Wean a plan by which they offer to fully pay the claims of the creditors within three years. It proposes that the creditors accept promissory notes payable within that time for the amount of their claims. The approval of the majority of the creditors is needed before the plan can be put into operation.

To secure the payment of the money the two sons, Ralph R. and Frank J. Graham and their mother, Mrs. Minnie P. Graham, propose to turn over all their property, both real and personal to the Chicago Title and Trust company.

In addition, the plan contemplates the creation of a committee of five of the creditors by Judge Carpenter or any other district judge to act as an advisory board with the trustee, assisting in the liquidation of the assets and the adjusing of the claims.

Provision for Grahams.

If after the claims of all creditors have been satisfied some of the property still remains, it will be reconveyed to the Grahams.

Attorney John D. Black, appearing for the Grahams, said that 7,300 of the approximately 10,000 creditors favored the plan.

"The creditors stand to lose 50 per cent of their claims in the event a trustee in bankruptcy is not appointed," he said. "Such a plan of composition as we have presented will benefit both the creditors and my clients. The Grahams are in possession of notes which if sold by the bankruptcy trustee would realize only 5 cents on the dollar. They also own shares of stock which in normal times are worth $310, but which are now worth only $60 a share.

Hopes to Pay in Full.

"If we are allowed to hold these stocks until conditions again become normal the creditors will be saved $50,000. The real estate holdings of the Grahams bring in $55,000 a year. If we are allowed to pay the creditors off under the plan of composition they will realize 100 cents on the dollar."

Attorney Herman Frank, who represents some of the creditors, opposed the plan. He expressed the belief that the creditors would be better served if a receiver in bankruptcy was appointed.

Attorney James Rosenthal, who has been retained by almost 1,600 of the creditors to handle their claims, differed with him. He believed the plan a good one.

CHARITIES HAVE WAY TO HELP HOOVER, POOR

That thousands of poor families in Chicago can be enlisted in the food conservation movement by teaching them how and what to buy in the way of substitutes for present high priced commodities and how to prepare such food is the opinion of Eugene T. Lies, general superintendent of the United Charities.

"Two things will have to be done and done quickly," said Mr. Lies today. "The first is to see that these families actually have funds to buy anything at all. The other, and not less important thing, is to help them to make every penny do not only its bit but its utmost. This means the instruction of poor families by visiting housekeepers.

"The poor families in our care can not afford newspapers. They never see the government bulletins unless they get them from us, and many do not read English."

The United Charities is asking churches, clubs, lodges, and individuals to finance more visiting housekeepers for the food conservation movement.

In order to carry on its food instruction work among the 2,600 families coming to it monthly and to give relief as well, the United Charities will need to almost double its relief budget, according to Mr. Lies.

MINUTE MEN TO MEET HERE AND EXTEND PLANS

Preliminary plans were made yesterday for a state conference of all of the branch chairmen of the Four Minute men in Illinois. The conference will be held in Chicago in January, when the Four Minute men leaders will work out plans for a thorough organization of the loyalty propagandists throughout the state.

There are now about 100 local chairmen in Illinois, but it is proposed to increase the number of branch organizations to at least 300.

"The enormous growth of the Four Minute men movement in the last two months and the letter of the president of the United States to the Four Minute men suggest that we take further measures to speed up the work in Illinois," said State Chairman George R. Jones in a letter sent out yesterday to all branch chairmen.

Has Hard Time Recovering Auto Left at Union Station

D. Kemp, living in Knox, Ind., had a strenuous time recovering his automobile. He left the car in front of the Union station Oct. 29 and telephoned a garage to send a chauffeur to get it. This it failed to do.

When he returned to the city some days afterward he made inquiries about his car and was informed that the police had taken charge of it. He went to the Desplaines street station but was told no record had been made of its whereabouts. Subsequently he learned the car was in the United garage at 220 West Monroe street. He carried this information to First Deputy Westbrook and recovered the car. It was found that the police record of the finding of the car had disappeared.

The week's real estate market contrasted most favorably with that of the previous week. Not only was the aggregate volume of business much larger, as evidenced by the figures of the recorder's office, but it also included an unusual number of highly important transactions. It was a broad market, including important transactions in both downtown as well as outlying business property, apartment, and manufacturing property, as well as several highly important building projects. Altogether it was a remarkably fine showing, particularly in view of the many adverse conditions with which the market has to contend and should act as a strong tonic to the entire market.

Probably the most interesting feature was the closing of the deal by which Marshall Field & Co. acquired from the Pennsylvania Railroad company the block of ground bounded by Jefferson and Desplaines streets, Polk street and Gilpin place, formerly Ewing street, as a site for a big garage. Another notable transaction was a $200,000 purchase in the downtown district, while outlying property was represented by a $400,000 purchase of apartment property by a nonresident, one of the largest transactions of the year in this class of property.

New Hotel Planned.

Another particularly important development was the announcement of the plans for the erection of a high class family hotel on the site of the old Warren Leland homestead at the northeast corner of Drexel boulevard and Forty-seventh street, by Sherman T. Cooper, the builder, to cost about $600,000.

The Marshall Field & Co. purchase was interesting not only because of the prominence of the firm and the large improvement involved, the cost of which is estimated at $400,000, but also because of the fact it is the first sale by the Pennsylvania road in the strip between Jefferson and Desplaines streets, south from Van Buren to about Twelfth street, which the road acquired several years ago with the purpose of using it as a site for a new freight terminal for that road. This plan was abandoned, however, when a general freight terminal was decided on to be located south of Harrison street and east of Canal street. While the remainder of the strip is understood to be on the market, it is said there are no negotiations pending for any other parts of it.

Big Garage Planned.

The Field purchase comprised the block bounded by Jefferson and Desplaines streets, Polk street, and Gilpin place, formerly Ewing street, the block being 238 feet front on Jefferson and Desplaines streets and 354.6 feet on Polk street and Gilpin place, for which $250,000 was paid.

In the transfer, which was made by Thomas M. Stevenson, from whom the road acquired the property, there is excepted a strip fifty feet wide running through the block north and south, midway between Jefferson and Desplaines streets, to be reserved for railroad uses, but it is provided that at any time within ten years, at the request of the grantor, Field & Co. are to purchase the strip for $50,000.

Plans have been prepared by Architects Graham, Anderson, Probst, and White for a garage to cover the entire block with the exception of the fifty foot strip just mentioned. The building, for which bids are about to be opened, will be one story high on Desplaines street and Gilpin place and two stories on Polk and Jefferson streets and will cost about $400,000.

This step was made necessary for Field & Co. by the fact that some time ago the firm sold its garage property in La Salle street to the Western Union Telegraph company as a site for a new home. It is said there were no brokers in the sale of the west side plot to the firm.

Residence Property Sold by Woman for $26,000

The twelve room brick and slate residence on a lot 100x150 feet at 6159 Kenmore avenue has been sold by Agnes M. Burns to Fred J. Ringl[illegible] for a reported consideration of $26,000, the purchaser giving back a part purchase money mortgage for $12,500. The purchaser conveyed in part payment the brick residence at 4145 Kenmore avenue at a valuation of $8,000. Moore & Dearborn, in connection with Andrew Sullivan of W. K. Young & Bro., were the brokers.

APARTMENT DEALS SHOW A BETTER TONE

Better Class Properties in Demand the Last Week.

Apartment property, in sympathy with the generally improved tone of the market, made a decidedly better showing than during the previous week, particularly as regards the better class of properties.

A nonresident, Alfred L. Thomas of Columbus, Mont., appeared as the purchaser in a big south side apartment house deal, one of the largest transactions of the year in this class of property. The property, which was acquired from Nicholas Bertha, occupies the entire west frontage in the block in Grand boulevard between Bowen avenue and Forty-second street, 255 feet, with a depth of 165 feet, and the building, about 1½ years old, contains 110 apartments of one, two, three, four, and five rooms, and four stores.

While a nominal consideration is given, the actual figure is said to have been in the neighborhood of $400,000, the transfer being subject to an incumbrance of $250,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed Montana ranch land. John J. O'Connor and J. J. O'Connor of Albert J. Allen & Co. were the brokers.

Thirty-six Flats Sold.

The thirty-six apartment building of four and five rooms on a lot 120x174 feet, east front, in California avenue, 261 feet south of Lawrence avenue, has been sold by Cary Thogersen et al. to Mattie Dystrup, a consideration of $10 being given, subject to an incumbrance of $77,000. The building is said to have a gross annual rental of about $14,500, and the actual consideration is said to have been in the neighborhood of $125,000.

Another good sized deal in northwest side apartment property made a matter of record was the conveyance by Hiram De Camp to Andrew Miller of Wichita, Kas., of the property at the southeast corner of Kedzie avenue and Argyle street. The lot is 123x125 feet and it is improved with a three story building containing twenty-four apartments of three, four, and five rooms. A nominal consideration is given in the transfer, which is made subject to an incumbrance of $65,000.

Building Brings $48,000.

Julia Taken has purchased from Stanislawa Malachowski the eighteen apartment building at 2540-42 Racine avenue and 1204-10 Draper street for a reported consideration of $48,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,400, the purchaser conveying in part payment fifty feet of vacant in Irving Park boulevard, near Menard avenue, and vacant property elsewhere. F. S. Kunkel & Co. were the brokers.

There was filed for record the transfer by May C. Galavan to Anna M. Donner of the property in Kenmore avenue, 125 feet south of Berteau avenue, lot 125x125 feet, east front, with flat improvements, a nominal consideration being given, subject to an incumbrance of $25,000; also by the same grantor to same grantee the property in Sheridan road, sixty-eight and one-half feet south of Crescent place, lot 48x120 feet, west front, a nominal consideration being given.

Washington Boulevard Site Sold.

The property at 4715 to 4731 Schubert avenue, 141 feet west of Kilpatrick avenue, lot 180x134 feet, north front, with flat improvements, has been conveyed by A. J. Sterling to Lulu Mason, a nominal consideration being given, subject to an incumbrance of $25,200.

The property in Washington boulevard, 288 feet east of Leclaire avenue, lot 52x180 feet, north front, with flat improvements, has been conveyed by Emma R. Newell to Bernard W. Brady, a nominal consideration being given, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000.

Other Deals of Week.

Record was made of the transfer by Arthur C. Migneault to George D. Bockus of the apartment property at the southeast corner of Indiana avenue and Forty-eighth street, lot 50x161 feet, a consideration of $10 being given, subject to an incumbrance of $27,500.

The six apartment building at 1453-55 East Sixty-ninth street, lot 50x125 feet, has been purchased by Frank L. Church from Victor Nelson for a reported consideration of about $24,000, subject to an incumbrance of $16,000. In part payment the purchaser conveyed the eight room residence at 1520 East Seventy-second place at a valuation of $4,250. George T. O'Brien of Bowers, Leibrandt & O'Brien was the broker.

Leases and Loans.

There was a fairly good showing in leases and loans last week, leases in particular showing a decided improvement over the previous week. The loan market was featured by the $350,000 loan by S. W. Straus & Co. to Sherman T. Cooper in connection with the proposed $600,000 hotel to be erected at the northeast corner of Drexel boulevard and Forty-seventh street, on the site of the old Warren Leland homestead.

The somewhat persistent report that Julius Rosenwald contemplates the erection of a new skyscraper building on the site of the present Columbus Memorial building at the southeast corner of State and Washington streets is set at rest by the announcement by his agents, John R. Magill & Co., that they are closing leases in the building for a term of five years from May 1, 1918. One just closed is with Mrs. Emma Adolphus, operating the Kehoe & Co. confectionery business, and covers the store at 29 North State street, for a term rent of approximately $150,000, which is said to represent a substantial increase over present rent. The lessee has occupied this store for a number of years and will expend a considerable sum in new furnishings and fixtures.

Cass Homestead to Go.

Another Michigan avenue residential landmark is to make way for a building to be devoted to the automobile business. It is the Cass homestead at 2715-17, lot 68x160 feet, which is to be razed, and in its place a three story mercantile building erected to cover the entire lot, which has been leased by the Central Trust company for a long term of years to the United Motor Service, Inc., one of the largest automobile accessory dealers in the country. W. A. Pridmore represented the trust company and Joseph Battersby the United Motors Service corporation. The terms of the lease are not disclosed.

The Chicago Title and Trust company, as trustee, has leased to the Hanchett Paper company, through Hodge & Chandler, the dock property northwest corner of North Branch and Haines streets, for a term of years at an annual rental of $8,000. The property, which was sold last spring by the lessee company through the same brokers, fronts 200 feet on the river and the same on North Branch street, and contains about 44,145 square feet, improved with a heavily constructed one story brick building, containing 46,000 square feet. It is served by a Milwaukee and St. Paul switch.

Half Block Leased.

Ferdinand Pietsch has leased through the same brokers the half block bounded by Ashland, Bloomingdale, Marshfield, and alley, at an annual rent of $1,800.

Carrie L. Munn of Washington, D. C., has leased to the United States government a room 54x123 feet in the Munn building at 823 South Wabash avenue for one year from Oct. 1, 1917, for a rental of $9,920, with option to extend two years at an annual rental of $7,750.

Among other leases closed by William H. Suchier & Co. is one covering the three story and basement building at 161-65 North Ann street, which has been leased for Otto Eisenschiml to the Republic Phonograph company for a terminal rental of $15,800 for the manufacture of phonographs.

A. S. Peabody is trustee in a loan of $105,000, seven years at 6 per cent, to Victor C. Carlson on the store and flat property in course of construction on 129x130 feet of ground, northwest corner Montrose and Ashland avenues.

$50,000 Loan for Six Years.

Charles Sorge has given a trust deed to J. Hardue to secure a loan of $50,000, six years at 6 per cent, on the new Cheverney apartments, southeast corner Grand boulevard and Thirty-ninth street.

E. G. Krumrine & Co. have made a loan of $50,000, five years at 6 per cent, for the New England Mutual Life Insurance company on the property at 513-15 West Monroe stret, north front, between Canal and Clinton streets, lot 40x189 feet, with five story building.

WATER STREET BOULEVARD PLAN WIDELY FAVORED

Realty Men Indorse Idea, but Expect Long Delays.

Naturally real estate men, in common with all public spirited citizens, were greatly interested in the announcement by the Chicago plan commission during the week of its plan for converting South Water street into a handsome boulevard. There is no difference of opinion as to the merits of the proposition, it being recognized that it would not only be a long step forward in the great work which the commission has mapped out for both the beautification and material betterment of the city, but also as a concrete real estate proposition it would be a boon to the entire north end of the downtown district.

This opinion, however, is tempered by the well grounded belief that many years are likely to elapse before the produce business takes its departure from that street, and that many more are likely to pass before there is any possibility of a realization of such a fine public work as proposed by the commission, despite the many admitted advantages outlined by the commission.

Change Is Difficult.

In the face of the admitted fact that the street, as now given over to the commission business, is not only insanitary, wasteful to an alarming extent, and a gross reflection on the business methods of the city, every one of several ambitious efforts to locate it elsewhere, under conditions thoroughly up to date as regards sanitation and sound business methods, have been miserable failures.

Some have promised well, but in the final show down there have always been a few merchants who declined to move, and the fear of the other merchants that they might not be able to carry their business with them to a new location, with rivals still doing business on the old street, has caused a failure of the various schemes.

New District Far Off.

That a rival to the street will develop with the continued growth of the city, where modern business methods will give its merchants decided advantages over those in the old street, seems a certainty, but up to date there has been nothing to indicate any imminent exodus from that thoroughly disreputable thoroughfare.

The fear that it will be many years before Chicago will see the realization of any such great public work is based on the sad fact that Chicago never seems to be able speedily to get anywhere with the great public works suggested from time to time by its public spirited citizens.

Minneapolis Man Buys More Acreage Here

Emelie Lutz has sold for cash to Walter B. Jordan of W. B. & W. G. Jordan, wholesale grocers of Minneapolis, a fifteen acre tract at the southwest corner of South Kildare avenue and West Sixty-fifth street. A nominal consideration is mentioned in the deed, but the property has been held at $700 per acre. Mr. Jordan, who for some time has been the owner of considerable acre property in Chicago, has purchased this tract as an investment and has no plans for immediate development. Malcolm C. Harper was the broker.

NEW $600,000 HOTEL PLANNED FOR SOUTH SIDE

S. T. Cooper Will Build at Drexel and Forty-seventh.

A high class family hotel to cost about $600,000 is planned to occupy the site of the old Warren Leland homestead at the northeast corner of Drexel boulevard and Forty-seventh street. It will be erected by Sherman T. Cooper, the builder, who within the last two years or more has improved the two blocks bounded by Forty-seventh and Forty-eighth streets, Drexel boulevard and Ellis avenue, with high grade apartment buildings, which include stores along the Forty-seventh street front. He is now erecting the twelve story Cooper-Carlton hotel at the southeast corner of Hyde Park boulevard and Fifty-third street to cost in the neighborhood of $1,250,000.

The new hotel, which will be called the Cooper-Monetah, will be six stories and basement and will front 131 feet on the boulevard and 212 feet on Forty-seventh street to a 16 foot alley. It will contain 236 bedrooms and 154 baths, arranged in suites of various sizes. There will be a court in the rear, while the Forty-seventh street frontage will contain eight stores.

Open Air Dining.

The large dining room will have an attractive feature in a porch fronting on the boulevard, which will be used both for dining and promenade purposes. There will be a mezzanine floor, and the lobby will be finished in mahogany and caenstone. The building will be furnished completely by Mr. Cooper. The excavation work has been completed and work on the superstructure will commence tomorrow.

In connection with the construction of the building S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a serial bond issue loan of $350,000, the final payment maturing in ten years with interest at 6 per cent.

$250,000 Factory Planned.

A land purchase involving the construction of a $250,000 manufacturing plant in Blue Island was also among the important news developments of the week. It will be erected by the American Wire Fabrics company on nine acres of land on Western avenue in the south part of Blue Island, which the company has purchased from Keith Spaulding. The consideration is not disclosed, but it is said to have been about $10,000. Plans are being prepared for the buildings, work on which will begin early in the spring. They will comprise four one story structures.

Benjamin M. Hair, president of the Southwestern Yeast company, and William Ridgeway have sold to Lucy J. Smith the vacant property at the northeast corner of University avenue and Sixty-first street, 86x174 feet, for a reported consideration of $15,500, which is at the rate of over $180 a front foot for the avenue frontage.

While no immediate plans for improving the property have been made, it is said the purchaser will improve in the near future with a store, office, and partment building, to cost in the neighorhood of $100,000. E. F. Skivnore and C. F. Parker represented the purchaser and T. D. O'Hern of C. W. Hoff & Co., the sellers.

BUSINESS SITES CONSPICUOUS IN WEEK'S MARKET

Downtown and Outlying Property Figure in Good Deals.

Business property, including that in the down town district as well as outside, cut a conspicuous figure in the week's market, the showing being of a decidedly encouraging character.

The downtown deal was the purchase by Milton F. Goodman from Mrs. Rose Rothschild of the property at 210-12 West Monroe street, on the north side of the street, between Fifth avenue and Franklin street, at a reported valuation of $200,000, subject to an incumbrance of $100,000. The lot is 50x189 feet, improved with a five story and basement building erected in 1882 by Max M. Rothschild, and which was occupied for many years by the wholesale clothing firm of E. Rothschild & Bros.

Now Type Foundry.

It is now occupied by the American Typefounders company, which has been located there for twenty-five years. The land was valued by the board of review at $185,885, and the building at $25,000. Benjamin Rosenberg & Co. represented all the parties to the transaction.

It is planned to reconstruct the building by putting in a new front and making the interior more substantial and attractive at an estimated cost of about $75,000.

The purchaser, Mr. Goodman, is the president of the Reliance Manufacturing company, manufacturers of overalls and shirts, and is the owner of several valuable outlying pieces of property, notably the northwest corner of Seventy-ninth and Halsted streets. In part payment he conveyed the high-grade apartment property at the southeast corner of Drexel and Hyde Park boulevards, lot 90x120 feet, containing six large apartments yielding an annual rental of about $12,000.

Given $100,000 Value.

The property is said to have been given a value of $100,000, subject to an incumbrance of $37,500. It overlooks Drexel square, and is one of the most attractive apartment buildings on the south side. Henry R. Platt and Ira E. Straus attended to the legal details.

Record was made of the transfer by Minnie E. Evans to Fred R. McConnell of the store and flat property in Cottage Grove avenue, 296 feet north of Thirtieth street, lot 120x160 to 176 feet, east front, improved with 3 story buildings, for an expressed consideration of $75,000, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000.

MORE HEAT-LESS COST

A Little Coal AND Dunham does the trick

The Dunham Radiator Trap—the Equalizer

More heat—less cost. Surely a most desirable goal for the householder and, at first thought, an unattainable one. Coal is high, even although its price is regulated. And how fast it goes and often how little there is to show for it while it is going. Ton after ton goes into the mouth of the hungry furnace or boiler and still the house is frequently uncomfortable. How then, you ask, is it possible to obtain more heat and still pay less for coal?

The Dunham Home Heating System built around that little guardian of the coal pile, The Dunham Radiator Trap, has solved the problem for thousands of householders.

The Dunham Radiator Trap actually saves coal at the point where it is most frequently wasted—at the outlet of the radiator. That exasperating knocking, pounding and hissing, that you have so often heard and resented, is the result of air and water trying to escape. Every time you hear that annoying noise you can be positive that valuable heat-units are being wasted—absolutely thrown away. The Dunham Radiator Trap overcomes this difficulty. It saves coal, and does it silently.

The Dunham Home Heating System will not only save you money on your coal bill but will enable you to render a real service to the Government. The war has made, and will continue to make severe demands upon the national coal supply. Not a ton must be wasted. The nation's resources must be conserved and equitably distributed. The Dunham Home Heating System will help you to help your country. The coal the Dunham System saves you will release that much coal for war needs.

The Dunham Home Heating System automatically regulates the dampers—keeps the house at a uniform temperature during the day, and lets the heat die down at bedtime, raising it again at getting-up time—all of this automatically, without anybody going near the cellar.

Free Booklet. All owners of property, tenants, real estate men, architects, and builders should read this, our latest booklet, "Dunham Heating for the Home." It tells why. Write, phone, or call.
